Furthermore, although they generally have been high minded citizens, the appointed Commissioners, and also the ex-officio members of the Commission, have lacked technical training and experience in park development and management, and have failed to employ competent men having the training and experience which they themselves have lacked.

While the Commissioners have done well the laudable work of preserving the character and natural beauty of the city parks, and deserve credit for that achievement, they have, until the last few years, almost entirely failed to develop the general recreational facilities of the parks for the enjoyment of the general public. As one expert witness said, the Commissioners have just started to do what more wide awake park authorities began to do thirty years ago. This witness testified that the Philadelphia park system is the only great park system in the United States "that has not kept pace with the wider expansion of human services that the properties under their control can render. * * * The only possible objective that there is in maintaining a great park is to give the people the widest possible human use that it can. When any system fails to do that, it has failed in one of its most fundamental responsibilities."

With due justice to the Commissioners, it may be pointed out that they have looked upon the park very much as a wealthy gentleman might look upon his own vast and beautiful estate thrown open to certain limited public uses and enjoyment. The great movement of recent years, which has resulted in utilizing and broadening the uses of park areas, has tuoched them lightly, and even such improvements in this respect as have been noted within the last few years have resulted chiefly from the availability of WPA funds and workers.

Again, the Commissioners have been lax in their accounting and business methods so that, among other matters subject to just criticism, a few years ago funds were misappropriated by one of their executive employees, trust accounts were carelessly kept so that principal and income were intermingled, and an unfinished art museum costing to date more than $15,000,000 was originally represented to City Council and to the public as a $3,500,000 undertaking.

Criticisms of the Commissioners, which in recent years have from time to time appeared in the public papers of Philadelphia, and the strenuous efforts of a former City Controller to inquire into the administration of the city parks and their finances, indicate that the Commissioners until recently believed that the public had no right to inquire into their administration of the park finances and affairs. In this connection, however, we report that the present Commissioners co-operated with your Committee and made their records available for examination by your Committee and its attorneys and accountants.

It is also apparent, from an examination of the minutes of the meetings of the Park Commission and the minutes of the meetings of its standing committees, that many of the Commissioners have been extremely lax in the matter of attending meetings. Important business in many cases was transacted at meetings at which no quorum was present. The business methods were so lax that these matters were not even brought before subsequent meetings for ratification and approval. In some instances, noticeably in connection with the park museum, these laxly and illegally handled transactions involved the approval of contracts running into very substantial figures.

While many of these errors and abuses have been corrected, largely since our investigation started, your Committee believes the voluntary and part-time service given by the Commissioners is not particularly satisfactory or efficient. It is inevitable that citizens appointed to a distinguished body like the Park Commission are necessarily men of many and varied interests to whom the management of the Philadelphia parks, however interesting it may be, is a secondary and minor activity. Even the ex-officio members of the Park Commission necessarily suffer from substantially the same point of view. Their primary duties and responsibilities lie in other city departments. To them, their duties as Park Commissioners are almost wholly a side issue.

It is obvious that parks of such tremendous size and importance as those under the jurisdiction of the Fairmount Park Commission should be administered by well-trained, experienced and competent men, whose interests, duties and responsibilities are centered primarily upon that particular work.

The foregoing general remarks are here supplemented by a more detailed discussion of some of the abuses disclosed by our investigation.

Purchases of Real Estate

Acquisition of Two Parcels of Land on Ridge Avenue Near Midvale Avenue

At a meeting of the Land Committee of the Park Commission, held May 31, 1931, Mr. Eli Kirk Price, now deceased, reported to the Committee an offer by the owners to sell to the Park Commission premises 4130-38 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, for $28,000, of which $1,000 was to be paid in cash and the balance by mortgage; and also an offer by the owners to sell to the Park Commission premises 4214-4252 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, for $60,000, of which $10,000 was to be paid in cash and the balance by mortgage. The Land Committee accepted these offers subject to the approval of the Commission, which gave such approval by resolution adopted June 10, 1931.

These two parcels were bought for no apparently useful purpose. Neither of them is within the boundary of Fairmount Park as laid out by statute. After the buildings were torn down, these parcels constituted small open spaces in the middle of blocks of run down stores and dwellings, extending between Ridge Avenue and a narrow stretch of Fairmount Park running parallel with the East River Drive. If these parcels were bought, as the Park Commission contended before your Committee, to furnish a playground for the few children who use them, the purchases for such purpose at a cost of $88,000 constituted a grossly reckless extravagance upon the part of a Commission which, during the same period, claims it had to let many thousands of daily visitors to Pennypack Park go without toilet facilities, and use swimming pools without dressing rooms or the protection of life guards, because it had no funds.

The two parcels of land under discussion were purchased without ordinance and without the prior approval or consent of Council. They were purchased and paid for without appropriation by Council. There were no Court proceedings authorizing the acquisition of these properties or determining the price to be paid therefor. The advice of the Park Solicitor as to the propriety of making the purchases was apparently not requested or obtained. No appraisals were obtained for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the properties offered for sale. All of these difficulties were surmounted by the simple expedient of having the titles pass through a straw man, who created the mortgages, and then making the down payments out of the "park funds appropriated for park maintenance and clearly never intended for the purchase of real estate.

The effect of the purchases was improperly to create an increase in the city debt for the amount of the two mortgages, $77,000, and to establish an interest rate thereon of 6% in place of the 4% or less normally paid by the City. These transactions were consummated notwithstanding the fact that the Park Commission then had in its files an opinion by City Solicitor John P. Connelly, dated July 9, 1919, expressly holding that, in the absence of a specific authorization from Council, the Park Commission had no authority to purchase real estate subject to mortgage, because such purchases would have the improper effect of increasing the debt of the City of Philadelphia and entailing an annual fixed charge upon its revenue.

The prices paid also appear to have been excessive. Premises 4130-38 Ridge Avenue were purchased from the Edwin H. Vare Building and Loan Association and the offer to sell was received from its Vice-President, William J. Benham, a member of the Board of Revision of Taxes of the City of Philadelphia. Although the price paid was $28,000, the testimony shows that the Building and Loan Association had acquired the property in December, 1929 on a bid of $75.00 in foreclosure proceedings instituted on mortgages held by it having an original aggregate face value of only $24,000, which had subsequently been reduced by payments on account. The assessment of damages in the foreclosure proceedings was only $26,513.09, which sum included an attorney's commission of $1,200. The property had been occupied as a laundry until the Building and Loan Association had had to oust the former owner by eviction proceedings. Two years' taxes were in arrears when the Building and Loan Association foreclosed and the property was apparently not worth the balance due on the mortgages at the time of the Sheriff's sale, notwithstanding the fact that the sale was held late in 1929, in the early days of the depression, whereas the purchase was made by the Park Commission some 18 months later after real estate had still further depreciated substantially in value.

The $27,000 mortgage given by the straw man was later reduced to $17,000 by a payment of $10,000 out of "park funds" and without an appropriation by City Council.

Premises 4214-52 Ridge Avenue were purchased in June, 1931, from the Real Estate Land Title and Trust Company and William Ottman, Trustees under Deed of Trust, and John F. Betz, 3rd and Nellie, his wife, who had acquired title in April, 1931 on a bid of $50.00 in foreclosure proceedings instituted on a $50,000 mortgage held by them. The assessment of damages in the foreclosure proceedings was $55,025. Even though it included an attorney's commission of $1,500 and $3,525 overdue interest, this assessment is almost $5,000 less than the price the Park Commission paid for the property a few months later.

The $50,000 purchase money mortgage given by the straw man was later improperly paid off out of "park funds" without any appropriation by Council, $5,000 being so paid in July, 1933 and $45,000 in March, 1935.

The buildings on this property were dilapidated and were torn down by the Park Commission in the summer of 1933. However, the Commission failed to cancel the fire insurance carried on these buildings in the sum of $44,000, on which the premiums amounted to $605.02, notwithstanding the fact the policies did not expire until June 23, 1934, almost a year after the demolition was completed.

At the time the Park Commission was thus improperly paying out $71,000 in cash for the acquisition of properties quite clearly not needed for the park, the Commission claimed it was without adequate funds, in the "park fund" or otherwise, for urgently needed improvements of a very inexpensive character, such as the installation of toilet facilities and bath houses at the bathing pools in Pennypack Park, which were frequented by upwards of 5,000 persons per day during the summer months. These improvements, when finally made in 1935, cost only $1,300. The same excuse, lack of funds, was given by the Commissioners for not having employed life guards at these bathing pools until they were compelled to do so by the drowning of two boys in the summer of 1934. It is quite obvious that the sum of $71,000 in cash, paid for two comparatively useless parcels of land out of the park funds available for general maintenance expenditures by the Commission, could have been used to far better advantage if the Comsion had been concerned primarily with the needs of the people and less tempted to yield to the pressure which must have been responsible for its action in bailing out the Edwin H. Vare Building and Loan Association and other mortgage holders at the solicitation of a member of the Board of Revision of Taxes.

Other Purchases of Properties Made by the Commission Subject to Existing or Newly Created Mortgages

At the hearings before City Council in connection with the 1937 budget of the Park Commission, it was disclosed that, in addition to paying interest on the balance of $17,000 due on the above mentioned mortgage on premises 4130-38 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia, the Commission has for years been paying 6% interest on other mortgages on properties acquired by the Commission subject to mortgage without authorization of Council. Among such mortgages not yet paid off, upon which the Commission has been paying 6% interest, are the following:

A mortgage of $48,000 on property at S. W. Corner Wissahickon Avenue and Rittenhouse Circle, held by the estate of Eli Kirk Price, former president of the Park Commission, dated June 1, 1918. Annual interest $2,880.

A mortgage of $52,515 on N. W. Corner Wissahickon Avenue and Carpenter's Lane, held by Preston Retreat (maternity hospital), dated January 17, 1917. Annual interest $3,150.

A mortgage of $45,000 on property at Walnut Lane and Park Line Drive, held by Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, dated June 8, 1917. Annual interest $2,700.

Acquisition of Parcels of Land along Cobb's Creek.

Certain land along Cobb's Creek in Delaware County, owned by the Wolfenden-Shore Company and the Cardington Land Company, was acquired for park purposes by condemnation in 1930. The tract is bounded on the east by Cobb's Creek where it forms the boundary between Philadelphia and Delaware Counties, on the north by Marshall Road, on the west by Rockland Avenue and Parkview Street, and on the south by Chester Avenue adjacent to Mt. Moriah Cemetery and Cobb's Creek Park.

This condemnation proceeding was under an ordinance of Council dated January 12, 1928. The final awards amounted to $885,000 for the Wolfenden-Shore Company and $115,000 for the Cardington Land Company, or a total of $1,000,000 for 17.99 acres of land, an average price of $55,550 per acre.

The members of the Park Commission contended that this purchase was for the purpose of stopping drainage into Cobb's Creek, and preventing the pollution of the Creek. It is obvious that a system of sewers would have constituted a better method of pollution control. At the same time this alleged attempt at pollution control was carried through, the City of Philadelphia enjoyed a contract entitling it to receive $1,000 per year for permitting the discharge of a sewer into Cobb's Creek at a point adjoining this land.

At the hearings before your Committee, a competent real estate expert testified that the value of the land at or about the time of purchase was not more than $2,800 per acre for the best land in the plot, while some of the land had little or no value. The price paid appears to have been grossly excessive.

The Carroll Tract, consisting of 32.651 acres on the north side of City Line, running north along the bed of Cobb's Creek along the right of way of the Philadelphia and Western Railroad, extending from City Line to Manoa Road, was purchased in 1929 by Mr. Eli Kirk Price, then Vice-President of the Commission, for $550,000, or $16,845 per acre. This action of Mr. Price, taken without proper authority, was later confirmed by an ordinance of Council, which ordinance failed to set forth the purchase price. In an attempt to cover up this gross error, a proceeding was scheduled before the Board of View. The procedure is best described in the memorandum, a copy of which was found in the files of the City Solicitor's office, sent by the then City Solicitor, Augustus T. Ashton, to Mr. Broderson, Assistant City Solicitor in charge of the Road Bureau Department, which reads as follows:

> "It is important that you see me in connection with the attached. I talked with Mr. Price today.
> "Mr. Price tells me there was a negotiation with Mr. Carroll in which it was agreed that he should be paid $550,000 for the land; in some manner, this amount was left out of the ordinance. I do not know whether it was intentional or not.
> "I understand there are condemnation proceedings pending now for the awarding of proper damages to Mr. Carroll.
> "The attitude of the City should be as confirmed by Mr. Price, that Mr. Carroll should be paid what it was agreed he should receive. After he has proven his damages, the City should offer no defense unless you disagree with me on the principal as to this, so that Mr. Carroll can get what was actually agreed should be paid him."
> (Signed with typewritten initials) "A. T. A."

"The attached" referred to in Mr. Ashton's memorandum was the Ordinance of Council condemning the Carroll Tract. The City, not only put in no defense, but actually put witnesses on the stand in the condemnation proceedings to support the price asked by Mr. Carroll for his land.

A competent real estate expert, one Mr. Hare, Secretary of the Philadelphia Taxpayer's Association, testified before your Committee that ground in this vicinity was worth only $5,000 per acre at the time this purchase was made for more than three times that figure.

Acquisition of Land on Midvale Avenue

The Park Commission also acquired the plot of ground fronting on Midvale Avenue between Henry Avenue and McMichael Streets, under ordinance of Council dated June 12, 1928. The City paid $159,031 to Samuel Osternich for 3.34 acres of this ground and $99,850 to John H. McClatchy for 1.75 acres, or $56,000 per acre.

This land created a park, and removed the possibility of objectionable building development, directly across the street from the home of William J. Benham, Chairman of the Board of Revision of Taxes. The Park Commission could set forth no apparent need for the purchase of this plot, which is located less than a mile from that portion of Fairmount Park constituting the beautiful Wissahickon Valley. This expensive piece of real estate is virtually unused.

The Parkway

Attached to this report is a map of the Parkway from City Hall up to and including the Museum Plaza.

Areas 1, 2, 3 and 4 on that map show the space originally proposed for the Parkway and Museum development. These areas were deemed adequate and sufficient and were so reported and recommended by the French expert, M. Greber.

From an examination of the map, however, it will appear that the Commissioners originally neglected to take areas 2, 3 and 4, which were absolutely necessary to provide for a balanced Parkway development. Areas 2 and 3 subsequently were condemned and have been acquired. The very important area 4, however, has not even been condemned. While the acquisition of this essential parcel of land was entirely neglected, with the result that if any buildings are erected thereon their cost will be included in any price the City will ultimately have to pay for this area, the Commissioners, for some reason that has never fully been explained, proceeded to acquire area 5, known as the "Parkway Gardens," containing 7.4 acres. Approximately $2,200,000 has already been spent on the acquisition of this useless area. This sum would almost have been sufficient to have paid for the complete acquisition of the essential areas 2, 3 and 4. Furthermore, if the proposed "Parkway Gardens" are to be completed, it will be essential to acquire area 6 consisting of 4.5 acres.

It was contended by Mayor Wilson before your Committee, and your Committee agrees, that acquisition of areas 5 and 6 should never have been considered, that these areas should have remained in private, taxable ownership, and that they are of no value whatever to the City as a part of the Parkway or for any other purpose. Having been acquired, area 5 should be put back into taxable ownership as quickly as possible and area 6, not yet acquired should definitely be stricken from all future plans.

Parkway Buildings

While it is very desirable to locate on the Parkway and and on Logan Circle important civic buildings, there is a noticeable lack of harmony in the architecture of the buildings constructed to date. For example, there is a total lack of relation of mass and harmony as between the Franklin Institute and the building of the Board of Education. It is not enough that these important buildings have beauty of design and an attractive appearance. It is essential that all buildings on the Parkway shall so be designed as to have beauty and harmony in relation to one another. The lack of satisfactory results achieved to date in this respect arises from the inadequacy and vulnerability of the park ordinance regarding buildings abutting on the Parkway. This ordinance limits the height of the main cornice of such buildings, but does not provide that such cornice must be of a specified height. Furthermore, the ordinance requirements permitting additional heights with certain setback provisions have clearly not been worked out to provide for a harmonious relationship between the several buildings, as is shown by the Board of Education building when viewed in relation to the other important buildings erected to date. It is obvious that this ordinance should carefully be studied and revised before any further buildings are erected. Clearly, the esthetic judgment of the Commissioners was seriously at fault in the matter of this ordinance, as appears from the several buildings erected in accordance with its provisions.

Park Properties Purchased Outside of City Limits

By December, 1935, the City had spent $2,169,135 in the acquisition of property for park development in counties adjoining Philadelphia. All of this money came out of funds collected from the taxpayers of the City of Philadelphia. No part of the expense of the acquisition of these lands, and no part of the moneys subsequently expended for their development for park use, was contributed by any of the counties in which they are located, or by the State of Pennsylvania. In order to realize the lack of wisdom behind this policy of acquiring lands in other counties, your Committee again calls attention to the fact that, during the period the above very substantial sum was expended, the Park Commission claims it did not have adequate funds to develop the park areas within the City limits. During all of this period, and even at this date, vast built-up areas of the City of Philadelphia have been and are destitute of any decent breathing spot for the surrounding populations. Obviously in this matter the Commission displayed a lack of sound judgment.

Charts

Attached at the end of this report is a chart of Philadelphia showing "Existing and Additional Required Park and Recreation Areas, based on 1935 Population." The generally accepted areas required are 6 acres for strictly park use and 4 acres for recreational use, a total of 10 acres, to every 1,000 population. The chart shows that areas 4 and 8, which include Cobb's Creek Park, have more strictly park areas than will be required for the next 20 years; whereas areas 6 and 7, where the densest population is found, have very inadequate park and recreation areas. This supports our contention that sound judgment has not been used in this matter.

There is also attached to this report a chart showing "Growth of the Park and Recreational Areas, compared with the Increase of Population." This chart covers the period from 1830 to the close of 1936 and indicates a comparison between existing areas and the areas considered adequate. From this chart it appears that, for every 1,000 of population, Philadelphia has only 3.71 acres of park area and 0.66 acres of recreation area, instead of the necessary 6 acres of park area and 4 acres of recreation area.

Philadelphia now ranks 26th, among the first 42 cities of our country, in area devoted to parks and recreation, based upon population requirements.

Failure to Develop Recreational Facilities of Parks Along Modern Lines

Retention of Point of View of 1870

The Park Commission has noticeably been backward in the development of recreational facilities in the park areas under its jurisdiction. It has just recently awakened to the new recreational uses which more wide awake park authorities began to encourage and provide for thirty or forty years ago. In this connection, Mr. Lebert Howard Weir, Director of the Park Recreational Services of the National ecreation Association, testified that, in the middle of the last century, at about the time the Fairmount Park system was created, and for nearly forty years thereafter, park systems were regarded as areas of natural beauty, designed primarily for rest and relaxation Provision was made for only those forms of human recreation which fitted naturally into the topographical conditions, as for example, walking, riding, canoeing, picnicking and the calm enjoyment of natural beauty. As cities began to grow during the 1880's and 90's, thinking people began to consider the desirability of providing safe and adequate areas for children to play and for the enjoyment of sports by the athletically inclined younger people. Parks then began to make provision for large outdoor gymnasiums, baseball diamonds, football fields, cricket fields,. tennis courts, children's playgrounds, basketball and volley ball courts, swimming pools, community houses, camp grounds and picnic grounds with ovens, tables and benches, adequate shelter houses, and comfort stations. This changing point of view naturally led to the redesigning and rededication of many existing park properties. To this change, however, the Fairmount Park Commission paid little heed until a few years ago.

Notwithstanding the progress made within the last few years by the Commission, it apparently is still largely motivated by the old conception of park service and park development existing in 1868 when the Philadelphia park system was created. In this connection, Mr. Weir testified that the Philadelphia park system is about the only great city park system within the United States which has not kept pace with the wider conception of the human services that such properties can render. He pointed out that there is no one on the Commission, and no one included among its employees, who has expert knowledge of either park planning or the proper development of recreational areas and activities. The Park Commission has never even employed an experienced recreational advisor. Through the good offices of the Playgrounds Association, a supervisor was assigned to the park work at the expense of that Association. However, he had no authority and no particular duties with reference to the development of the park properties and facilities.

Until the last few months the Commission had never even appointed any special committee to inquire into the matter of developing the park facilities for human use, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Weir, and other experts, had from time to time recommended to the Commission the development of a strong department or division of recreation to be placed in charge of a man highly trained for that phase of park service.

Comparison of Recreational Facilities With Those in Other City Park Systems

There have been no outdoor cooking ovens, or other means for the preparation of warm food for camping and picnic parties, within any of the Philadelphia park areas, although some have recently been authorized. In the great park near Youngstown, Ohio, which has somewhat the same character as Pennypack Creek Park in Philadelphia, there are more than 2,000 outdoor cooking places and the park authorities report that these are inadequate to supply the popular demand. In the Oklahoma park system there are more than 200 outdoor cooking ovens. The same type of development is found in other park areas. In Detroit and other cities, not only are ovens available, but the park authorities see that firewood is supplied for purchase at a nominal price. The receipts from that source have been sufficient to pay the wages of the necessary attendants.

The Fairmount Park Commissioners stated in reply to this evidence that they were afraid of fires, but Mr. Weir pointed out that there is no danger of a conflagration if the ovens are located in the proper places and properly supervised.

Testifying before your Committee in October, 1935, Mr. Charles H. English, Executive Secretary of the Playgrounds Recreational Association of Philadelphia, stated that the Park Commission within the previous two years, with PWA funds and employees, had installed a substantial number of new baseball diamonds and tennis courts, but that, notwithstanding the fact these facilities had recently been so greatly increased through the use of Federal funds, the Philadelphia park areas were still woefully lacking in facilities when compared with other city parks in that respect. For example, there were only 30 baseball diamonds in the Philadelphia parks (of which 25 had been built with Federal funds in the previous two years), as against 88 in the Chicago parks, 43 in the parks of Brooklyn, and 34 in the parks of St. Louis. There were only 81 tennis courts in all of the Philadelphia park areas, of which 64 had been built within the preceding two years with Federal funds. Contrasted with this, the Chicago parks then had 644 tennis courts, the Brooklyn parks 396 tennis courts, and the Minneapolis parks 199 tennis courts.

There is in Fairmount Park only one definitely designed and equipped children's playground. There are no areas in the entire park system for coasting or sledding, although there are natural slopes available and plans have heretofore been suggested to the Commission for their use. Even in the simple matter of furnishing benches the Commission has failed to render adequate service. Your Committee has received numerous complaints that the benches supplied are far too few to satisfy the needs of the park-using public.

While there are many miles of bridle paths, there is no definitely planned system of hiking trails, notwithstanding the fact that bridle paths are not safe, comfortable or desirable for the use of walkers. No camping sites have been developed for small boys and girls or for the use of families.

No swimming facilities of a modern type have been installed for the use of either children or adults. There are 5 small pools available, but they are only a rededication of the former use of the pools on properties coming under the jurisdiction of the Commission. League Island Park has one of the largest artificial pools for swimming purposes available in any park system in the United States, but it does not in any way conform to the requirements of a modern swimming center for adults. In 1935 this pool was not opened until the 20th of July because the Commission had failed to conform to regulations previously issued by the State Department of Health with respect to chlorinating the water in order to make the pool available for use. Gustine Lake was also closed by reason of the failure of the Commission to comply with the regulations of the State Department of Health, notwithstanding the fact that written notice had previously been sent to the Commission. In fact, on receipt of notice, the Commission had closed the pool in 1934 and then did nothing to remedy the situation until the following year when it was compelled to do so by public clamor. This pool, however, even now in no way conforms to the requirements of a suitable modern swimming center for adults.

Although 25 new baseball diamonds were recently installed and put in excellent shape by Federal funds, the Commission permitted the grass to grow uncut all summer so that many of these fields were thereby rendered unusable. On one of these diamonds the grass was not cut until late in September. No suitable means were taken by the Commissioners to insure the proper and orderly use of these baseball diamonds and it was testified that, if a group of small boys happened to be using one of the diamonds and a group of larger and stronger boys came along, the later group ousted the former so that the matter had become a question of the survival of the fittest, no police or other protection being given.

In the hearings before your Committee, the Park Commission raised two excuses for its inactivity with respect to the development of recreational facilities. First, that it did not wish to spoil the natural beauty of the park, and secondly, that it had lacked the funds necessary for such development. In reply, Mr. Weir pointed out that other cities, having parks of natural scenic charm, had nonetheless been able to develop them for recreational use without spoiling their beauty. Among others, he cited Oglebee Park at Wheeling, West Virginia, as a park of natural beauty very similar to Fairmount Park and stated that the park authorities had there constructed an 18 hole golf course, tennis courts, athletic fields, swimming centers, children's play centers and 15 miles of trails suitably developed for hiking, and had equipped nearly 100 areas with outdoor cooking ovens, tables and benches. He added that the same type of development had been carried through at the Mt. Penn Park in Reading.

In the opinion of your Committee, the excuse that, prior to receiving Federal help, the Park Commission had not had adequate funds, is neither sound nor satisfactory. The Commission showed, by its ability to get appropriations of approximately $15,000,000 for the erection of an art museum, that it could get special funds when it went after them. By its willingness to expend, for the purchase of two useless tracts of land, $71,000 out of its available park funds (its "pocket money," so to speak), at a time when toilet facilities and other necessary and inexpensive improvements were urgently required in Pennypack Park for the preservation of both human decency and comfort, the Commission demonstrated that it was, to say the least, not mentally alert to the needs of the public in the parks under its jurisdiction. Furthermore, no evidence was submitted by the Commission that it had ever sought and been refused funds for the development of recreational facilities. The lack of interest and understanding on the part of the Commission is well illustrated by testimony of the Park Superintendent which showed clearly that he has no conception whatever of the human needs which the areas under his supervision should provide for and that he looks upon park maintenance and management primarily as an engineer concerned with the maintenance of highways and other routine engineering problems.

Pennypack Park

Pennypack Park is conceded to be an area of great natural beauty. It contains more than 1250 acres acquired from time to time during the years between 1907 and 1925. Until 1934 the only facilities provided within this area were bridle paths and hiking trails. The only toilet facilities available were the few antiquated toilets which were on the properties when acquired by the Commission. In this park there were a series of five dams forming pools which were used for bathing purposes. These were on the property when it was acquired. Only one has since been rebuilt.

The testimony showed that more than 4,000 persons per day regularly visited what is known as the Verree Road section of this park on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays throughout the summer months. Dressing rooms at this spot, sufficient to accommodate about 30 persons at a time, were erected by the Commission late in 1935. In that year toilet facilities were also installed by the Commission. The total cost of the dressing rooms and toilets was trifling, only approximately $1,300, but it should be noted that, prior to this installation, the thousands of people daily visiting this section were compelled to use the woods as an open toilet. They are still compelled, with the exception of the few who can crowd into the inadequate dressing rooms, to dress and undress in the woods when using the pools. There are no dressing facilities, and no toilets, at the other four dams in Pennypack Park, all of which are also used by large numbers of persons.

Until 1934, by which time three boys had drowned in these pools (one at Bensalem Dam on July 25, 1932, one at Verree Road on July 3, 1934, and one at King's Bend on July 20, 1934), no life guards were employed by the Commission to safeguard swimmers in this park. The responsibility for safety of life in the pools was placed upon the heavily clothed park guard who were not appropriately attired for the purpose and also had patrol duty to perform.

It is important to note that, when the Superintendent of the Park was questioned respecting the use of the woods in Pennypack Park as an open toilet and as a dressing room for thousands of daily visitors, the Superintendent could give your Committee no information upon the subject and stated that he did not think it was his duty to inquire into it. He likewise admitted that he did not know the number of people who visited the Pennypack Park areas on summer Sundays or holidays. He excused his lack of information by the phrase, "I have other things to do on holidays." The Superintendent also admitted that he knew nothing about the drownings of the three boys above referred to and stated that he was not interested in the reports of the park guards relating to those drownings since they were made to the Committee on the Guard.

At the risk of repetition, your Committee points out that the magnificent tract comprising Pennypack Park for many years was utterly neglected by the Commission, as above pointed out, under the excuse that it had no funds, notwithstanding the fact that it was able to get millions for the erection of an art museum and the further fact that it was so careless with its pocket money that it spent $71,000 of park funds for the acquisition of two useless parcels of land on Ridge Avenue at the very time it alleges it could not afford to install inexpensive toilets or dressing rooms for the use of many thousands of persons per day in Pennypack Park and could not afford to safeguard the lives of bathers by the employment of life guards. Once more it is obvious that the Commission consists largely of men to whom an art museum means everything and the obvious needs of the people mean little or nothing. Your Committee does not wish to go on record as opposed to the erection of such dignified structures as the art museum. It merely wishes to point out that there has been an entire lack of balance and judgment in the expenditure of moneys by the Commission and in the objectives the Commission has sought to accomplish.

The Art Museum

It is apparent from a study of the testimony relating to the Art Museum that this great and costly project was undertaken by the Commission without due investigation as to its total cost and without the establishment of reasonable safeguards to prevent excessive and unforeseen increases in cost. The facts also indicate that the consent of City Council must have been obtained by misleading and incomplete statements, made by or on behalf of the Commission, with respect to the ultimate cost of the undertaking.

The Committee on the Art Museum, consisting of five members, Messrs. Eli Kirk Price, P. A. B. Widener, E. T. Stotesbury, T. DeWitt Cuyler and George S. Webster, was appointed April 13, 1911 pursuant to resolution previously adopted by the Commission and pursuant to Ordinance of Council, approved April 10, 1911, which carried an appropriation of $200,000 for the erection of a proposed Art Gallery. The personnel of this committee has of course been changed from time to time since 1911.

On January 25, 1915, an additional sum of $800,000 was appropriated by Council. On July 20, 1916 an additional $1,000,000 was appropriated in an Ordinance that provided,

> "And the said Commissioners are hereby authorized from time to time to enter into contracts for the construction of an Art Museum Building and approaches at a total estimated cost of $3,500,000. * * * * *"

That figure must have been supplied from some source supposed to have knowledge as to cost. Presumably the Commission supplied it. In any event, the Commission was clearly served with notice that, in the mind of Council, the project was expected to cost only $3,500,000. Either deliberately, or through gross lack of due care in the expenditure of public funds, the Commission went ahead with its project in complete disregard of the cost as thus estimated by Council. The Museum up to October, 1935, had cost the City $14,694,227 and it was then only two-thirds completed. The facts indicate that the total cost will be around $20,000,000.

In April, 1924, eight years after the above quoted Ordinance was passed, Council requested the Commission to furnish information as to the cost of the Museum. The Commission was then advised by its architects that, if the entire work could be put under contract at once, the additional cost would be $8,500,000. At that time approximately $3,000,000 had been spent, which indicated an anticipated cost of $11,500,000. Therefore, the Museum was launched as a $3,500,000 project in 1916; it developed into an $11,500,000 project by 1924; and now it involves an aggregate expenditure of $20,000,000. Clearly public funds should not have been handled so carelessly.

Perhaps the explanation of this astounding situation may be found in testimony given by Mr. Borie, one of the architects for the Committee on the Art Museum, before an investigating committee in 1923, in answer to questions by Mr. Smyth, then City Solicitor, as follows:

> "Q. You had your plan for the entire building completed, therefore you knew just the character of work to be done. Was there made when your plans were contemplated an engineer's estimate or an estimate by any one for your information of the cost?
> "A. No. It would have been possible to obtain an estimate, but unfortunately if the cost had been known, it would have discouraged the work. If the Parkway cost had been discussed when it was commenced, it would never have been finished.
> "Q. Was it because of that that no estimate was ever made of this?
> "A. I imagine so. That would be the common sense way of looking at it."

As a result of the careless manner in which the Art Museum Committee was handling the construction of the Museum, the excessive and ever-increasing cost thereof, coupled with prolonged public criticism of the Commission, a sub-committee was appointed by the Commission on January 10, 1923 at the request of the Hon. J. Hampton Moore, then Mayor of Philadelphia, to investigate the grading and construction work contracts. This sub-committee included the Mayor and Messrs. Emory McMichael and Richard Weglein. After investigation, it submitted the following report:

Report of the Park Commission's Special Investigating Committee

"J. Hampton Moore
Mayor

Office of the Mayor
Philadelphia
June 11, 1923.

"To the President and Members of the Fairmount Park Commission, City Hall, Philadelphia

"Gentlemen:

"Your Sub-Committee, appointed under resolution adopted January 10, 1923, to inquire into the contract or contracts for grading and construction work on the Art Museum, having held numerous meetings during the months of January, February, March, April and May, and having taken much testimony, a full copy of which is submitted herewith, respectfully reports as follows:

"The Ordinance of January 24, 1871, requested the Commissioners of Fairmount Park to construct a suitable public art gallery and museum, which Ordinance carried no appropriation. The Ordinance of April 10, 1911, carrying an appropriation of $200,000 'for the erection and construction of said art gallery', ordained that the Fairmount Reservoir, belonging to the City of Philadelphia and used by the Department of Public Works, be transferred and placed under the control and management of the Commissioners of Fairmount Park for the use of the City of Philadelphia, as a site for a public art gallery.

"Thereafter, on April 13, 1911, a committee of five, known as The Committee on Art Museum, was appointed from the members of the Fairmount Park Commission. On June 29, 1911, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Eli Kirk Price, was authorized to confer with Messrs. Trumbauer, Zantzinger and Borie to secure sketches and plans. On October 19, 1911, the architects were employed to furnish complete preliminary studies. On July 24, 1913, a contract was awarded to Robert Patton for excavating and grading on the site.

"Patton's bid under this contract, (awarded under the $200,000 appropriation), which was upon a unit price basis, was $149,107 with an estimate of work to be done prepared by the Engineer of the Commission, showing excavation of earth 132,000 cubic yards, excavation of rock 44,000 cubic yards and wall demolition 5,045 cubic yards. But the actual amount of work done by Patton was 172,683 cubic yards of earth; 1795 cubic yards of rock and 1250 cubic yards of wall demolition, at a total sum of $163,969.32. Patton was decided to be the low bidder based upon his low unit price charge of 50c per cubic yard of rock excavation and high unit price of 94c per cubic yard of earth excavation. This estimate of excavation was determined upon when the 'engineer cross-sectioned the operation and arrived at these estimates', and should be considered in connection with subsequent contract work.

"On June 16, 1915, the architects submitted revised preliminary plans which were forwarded to the Art Jury in place of plans submitted March 12, 1913, and the architects were authorized to proceed with the preparation of final plans together with a model of the building.

"On January 7, 1915, a loan authorized $300,000 for the Art Museum, and on January 25, 1915, this $800,000 was appropriated by Council 'toward the erection of an Art Museum. A loan Ordinance of June 29, 1916, included $1,000,000 toward the erection of an Art Museum, and an Ordinance of July 20, 1916, appropriating this amount provided:

> 'And the said Commissioners are hereby authorized from time to time to enter into contracts for the construction of an Art Museum Building and approaches at a total estimated cost of $3,500,000 as and when Council may make a further appropriation therefor.'

"On April 11, 1917, the revised plans of the architects were accepted, but no estimate of the cost of constructing the building, and approaches was made by the architects or by the Commission. On April 23, 1917, an agreement was entered into with the architects by the Fairmount Park Commissioners whereby the architects were to receive six per cent of the total cost of the construction and completion of the building, and on May 21, 1919, final plans and specifications, for the excavation, grading and construction of the tunnel and basement stories of the Philadelphia Museum of Art' were approved by the Committee.

"On June 18, 1919, after public advertisement, a contract was entered into between the Commissioners of Fairmount Park and the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., whereby the latter company was to 'furnish all the materials and labor and do all the work required for the excavation, grading and construction of the tunnel and basement stories of the Philadelphia Museum of Art in Fairmount Park in accordance with the general conditions of the contract and specifications'; all work to be completed on or before August 1, 1920, for the sum of $621,350; it being understood, however, that all excavation of rock made within the limits of the lines of the building or the plans was to be paid for at an additional price of $2.10 per cubic yard. After bids had been received and before the contract was awarded the Artesian Well Drilling Company made borings, submitted to the Commissioners through the architects, an estimate of an approximate rock excavation of 91,123 cubic yards, which upon that approximate rock excavation, increased the contract by $191 358.30, making a total expenditure involved in the contract, and known at the time of its execution of $812,708.30.

"At the time of the execution of this contract to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., the ordinance last above referred to limited the cost of the building to $3,500,000; but the testimony taken before the Committee shows that there was no estimate of cost in existence either of the entire building or of any portion thereof.

"On the 24th day of July, 1919, the Commissioners of Fairmount Park authorized the execution of the contract which had already been entered into, but on November 5, 1919, the Supreme Court, 265 Pa. 425, held that the loan under which the appropriation of $1,000,000 had been made on July 20, 1916, was invalid as to that portion of the loan which was unissued (which included this item of $1,000,000)—because of the requirements of the Charter Act of June 25, 1919, that the Controller must furnish to Council, prior to the passage of any loan ordinance, a certificate of the length of life of the improvement to be financed by the loan, which requirements had not been complied with.

"On December 30, 1919, a loan Ordinance contained an item for the Art Museum of $1,000,000 and the appropriation ordinance of December 30, 1919, appropriated 'toward the erection of an Art Museum,' this sum of $1,000,000. On October 1, 1920, another loan Ordinance carried an additional item of $1,500,000 for the Art Museum, which was appropriated by Ordianace of February 17, 1921.

"After the execution of the contract with the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., this Company was instructed to perform additional and extra work of grading, excavating, filling, terracing, as well as certain rock and construction work outside the lines of the building or the plans, and certain other construction work, without public advertisements inviting bids, without competitive bidding, upon a lump sum compensation in some instances, and in other instances upon a unit price basis corresponding with the unit prices attached to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., original proposal, so that there has been paid to the F. W. Mark Construction Co. Inc., to the present time under an assumed right in the contract, approximately $2,000,000 more than the contract called for on its face, to wit: $621,350 plus certain rock excavation.

"In addition, there was a contract dated July 6, 1921, awarded to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., in the sum of $199,500 it being the low bidder, for certain construction work, which contract was extended by orders for extra work until there had been paid to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., a sum approximating $332,000. This contract was not based upon public advertisement inviting bids but was upon invitation to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., and two other contractors. In addition to the amount of moneys paid as above there is in the Treasury a sum of money held as retained percentage.

"On December 10, 1919, the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., was given instructions to do extra work in the nature of excavating and grading as contemplated under what is known as the 'Greber Plans' which were outside the lines of the building and which plans were not presented to any of the bidders when invited to bid in May, 1919. The plans under which this work was done were prepared by Mr. Greber and not by the architects of the building, and Greber was paid $44,245.00 under a separate agreement for drawing these plans.

"The testimony of Major Martin, Secretary of the Park Commission, was to the effect that on June 10, 1919, previous to the execution of this F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., contract, there was an available balance of $682,096.78 which is concededly less than the sum contemplated in the contract necessary to perform the work thereunder; subsequently he corrected this testimony to include the appropriation of $1,000,000 by the ordinance of 1916, containing the restriction of cost of construction.

"It is advisable at this point to consider the wording of the advertisement for bids; the bids or proposals; the contract itself; the 'instructions to bidders,' and the specifications. Upon every one of these papers it will be found that the work to be done under this contract of June 18, 1919 is 'all work required for the excavation, grading and construction of the tunnel and basement stories of the Philadelphia Museum of Arts in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, in accordance with the general conditions of the contract and specifications hereto attached, and the accompanying drawings.' These drawings as set forth are known as 'Work No. 2326,' 'architectural drawings,' and 'steel drawings', sheets numbered from 1 to 17, inclusive, and pertain solely and exclusively to the work within the limits of the lines of the building. The testimony discloses that these plans from 1 to 17 were the only plans submitted to prospective bidders, and did not contain any reference to grading or excavation or construction work beyond the lines of the building, nor above the ground floor level.

"Summarizing the foregoing we have the following:

"(a) a minute of the Committee on Art Museum fixing the compensation of architects upon the estimated cost of the building, which estimate was never made;

"(b) a contract containing a lump sum bid for $621,350 awarded to the F. W. Mark Construction Co., Inc., with an additional sum to be paid for rock excavation with an estimate in the hands of the Commission of over 91,000 cubic yards of rock to be excavated within the lines of the building.

"The testimony shows that the actual amount of rock excavated within the lines of the building as contemplated by the original contract was 55,138.28 cubic yards. A letter by Edward Fay & Son to the Chairman of the Committee on Art Museum, was produced showing that on June 11, 1919, they contended that they were low bidders because they had made a survey and borings on the site and had determined that there was approximately 60,000 cubic yards of rock to be excavated. No action appears to have been taken, however, to check up this difference in the estimates. The Fay concern further set forth that it had come to their knowledge unofficially, that the Commissioners contemplated spending only $600,000 for the particular work to be done under the plans and specifications, upon which bids were submitted. This is referred to as showing that at least one bidder understood from the reading of the advertisements for bids and in the specifications and plans from 1 to 17 that the work to be done was limited to approximately $600,000 and did not include any work done beyond the limits of the lines of the building as set forth in these plans from 1 to 17.

"As has been stated, an appropriation of $1,000,000 was made on July 20, 1916, 'for the construction of an Art Museum Building and approaches, at a total estimated cost of $3,500,000.' which estimate of cost was not made, and which total cost, it is clear from the testimony, will be exceeded by several millions of dollars, running up altogether to $8,000,000 or more.

"The question presents itself, therefore, whether the Fairmount Park Commission has any authority to enter into any contract for any sum in excess of the amount of money available at the time the contract is entered into. And the further questions arise, (a) whether before a contract is awarded an estimate of the cost of the work contemplated shall not first have been had, especially where the work in part is to be paid for in unit prices; (b) whether, having executed a contract, the Park Commission can order additional work to be done thereunder even though subsequent appropriations have been made; and (c) whether all contracts should not be certified to by the Controller and charged against the items of appropriation.

"Section 4, of the Act of May 26, 1867, P. L. 547, provides that 'no contracts shall be made for said improvement (the Park) unless an appropriation therefor shall have been first made by the Council of said City.'

Conclusions

"In the opinion of the undersigned the Park Commission in the execution of contracts should be bound by the same laws which regulate contracts entered into by any of the departments of the City.

"The Committee submits for adoption the following:

"RESOLVED, By the Commissioners of Fairmount Park, that all work to be done by and for the Commission other than that performed by employees of the Commission, and all material purchased, shall be upon contract.

"FURTHER, That before any contract shall be entered into there shall be an appropriation in hand; an estimate furnished by the proper officers to the Commission of the cost of the work or materials contemplated, and public advertisement soliciting bids. All contracts shall contain a maximum sum, beyond which no work shall be done without additional estimates, contracts upon advertisement and competitive bids, and in all instances such maximum sum shall be within the appropriation and the estimated cost. The contract shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder; it shall be certified to by the Controller and charged by him to the proper item of appropriation, conforming in all respects to the requirements of the City Charter relating to contracts

Respectfully submitted,

Report, Though Approved, Was Thereafter Disregarded

At a meeting of the Park Commission, held June 13, 1923, the above report of its sub-committee was considered and resolutions were solemnly adopted as recommended in the report. These resolutions were then promptly and totally disregarded by the Committee on the Art Museum, which thereafter quite astonishingly continued its previous careless and irregular practices in awarding contracts, making little or no effort to conduct its business either legally or with ordinary prudence and care.

At a meeting of the Art Museum Committee held on May 29, 1924, only two members being present, Mr. Eli Kirk Price, Chairman, and Mr. Keith, whereas three members were required to constitute a quorum, Mr. Jennewein was awarded a contract for $7,800 and the O'Neill Company was awarded a contract for a trolley tunnel in the amount of $2,964.88.

On July 23, 1924, Mr. Price, Chairman, held a solo meeting of the Committee at which he awarded contracts to Nicholas Connelly for plumbing and drainage, $17,777; to the O'Neill Company for a land tunnel, $61,900; to George A. Fuller Company for pipe lines, plumbing, heating and ventilating, $142,000; and to Walter W. Muench, for plumbing, $46,000.

On April 29, 1926, at a meeting attended by only Messrs. Price and McMichael, less than a quorum, $65,000 for additional work was approved for the Fuller Company. In this case the minutes indicate that this action was to be referred to the Commissioners for approval, but no such reference was in fact made.

On May 28, 1926, at a meeting attended only by Messrs. Price and McMichael, further additional work was approved and direction was given to the Chairman to report the business to the Commission for approval. Such approval was not obtained.

On July 24, 1930, at a meeting attended by only Messrs. Price and Bockius, less than a quorum, bids were received from the Fuller Company, Cates & Shepard and Bulman Bros. for extra work totaling $905,373; also from the Atlantic Terra Cotta Company for $47,000 and from the Philadelphia Electric Company for $4,295 and Jennewein for $6,000. These bids were accepted, involving additional expenditures aggregating approximately $1,000,000.

None of the above contracts involving such large expenditures of public funds, approved and awarded by less than a quorum of the Art Museum Committee, was thereafter submitted for ratification or approval to any duly constituted meeting of that Committee or to any meeting of the Park Commissioners. Furthermore, these contracts did not contain any provisions for a maximum sum, thereby violating not only good practice but also the resolutions of the Park Commission adopted on June 13, 1923.

At a meeting of the Committee on November 18, 1925, attended by Mr. Price and Mr. Bockius, certain bids were opened and considered. These bids were by the O'Neill Company in the sum of $565,000, the Fuller Company in the sum of $578,000, and the Mark Company in a sum higher than the other bids. Obviously the O'Neill Company's bid was the lowest, but notwithstanding that fact, a a meeting held one week later on November 25, 1925, attended by Messrs. Price, Bockius and Stotesbury, the contract was awarded to the Fuller Company for the sum of $558,000, the minutes of that day recording this as the lowest offer made. The evidence showed that, between the two meetings, held November 18 and November 25, the Committee had received a letter from the Fuller Company, signed by its officers, stating that it would do the work, for which it has submitted a bid of $578,000, for a total lump sum of $558,000. The Fuller Company was, therefore, permitted to make a reduction of its bid five days after the bids were opened, and was awarded the contract.

On June 29, 1928, the Committee awarded contracts to the Fuller Company in the sum of $204,680; to Cates & Shepard in the sum of $250,000; and to Bulman Bros. in the sum of $2,466 and $4,684. There was only one estimate per bid submitted for each of these contracts. Furthermore, the minutes show no record of cost estimates having been submitted by the architects to enable the Committee to check prices.

The original contract of Cates & Shepard for electrical work was dated August 2, 1926 and was for two amounts, $8,900 and $13,500, totaling $22,400. The Bulman Bros. contract for heating was dated August 2, 1926 and was for the amount of $23,800. Both contracts provided for changes to be executed and accepted in a lump sum, although this clause in the contract directly violated the report of the investigating committee and the resolutions previously adopted by the Park Commission.

The original contract dated June 18, 1919, with the F. W. Mark Construction Company, contractors for walls and foundations, was in the amount of $621,350. Extras thereon amounted to $1,414,077.78, more than twice the amount of the original contract. A second contract with the Mark Company dated July 6, 1921 for the retaining wall was in the original amount of $199,500. Extras thereon amounted to $151,533.10. The first George A. Fuller Company contract was in the amount of $1,892. Extras thereon amounted to $49,000. Another contract with the Fuller Company was in the original amount of $4,501,843. Extras thereon amounted to $895,969.90.

The original contract with Cates & Shepard, dated August 2, 1926, was in the amount of $22,400. Extras thereon amounted to $345,306.33 or 14 times the amount of the original contract.

The original contract of Bulman Bros., dated August 2, 1926, was in the amount of $23,800. Extras thereon amounted to $316,186, or 13 times the original contract.

No evidence could be found of the certification of any contracts on the Art Museum by the Controller's office, although the Commissioners were requested by your Committee to give full evidence respecting these contracts. The Controller usually certifies city contracts directly on the contracts themselves, but no such certification appeared on any of the contracts shown to your Committee. In the award of the Jennewein contract, there was no evidence that estimates or bids were given by any one other than Mr. Jennewein. In fact there was little evidence of competitive bidding on any of the contracts. The Commission was requested to produce for inspection copies of the advertisements for competitive bids on the Art Museum contracts, but, except in one instance, was unable to do so.

In some cases subsequently new contracts were formally approved as shown by the minutes, but in a great many cases estimates only were submitted by the contractor holding the original bid, with no competitive bids for the additional work. Many of the extras appearing in the contract ledger do not appear in the minute books. Such a system of awarding extras clearly did not provide reasonable protection to the taxpayers or avoid favoritism in the awarding of contracts. Your Committee has been informed that, in ordinary business contracts, extras rarely exceed 5 or 10% of the original price.

Such careless and slipshod methods of handling public funds may in part, at least, explain the tremendous cost of the Art Museum as compared with the cost of similar structures in other large cities.

The Art Museum in Philadelphia covers only 253 acres of ground and has a floor space of 10.42 acres. It is believed that the total cost of completing this building will be close to $20,000,000, which figure does not include the cost of the land.

On the other hand, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston was originally completed in 1909 and two additional wings were added in 1915 and 1927. The building covers 12 acres and the total cost was approximately $5,000,000, of which $1,200,000 represented the cost of the land. The building compares favorably in beauty and size with the Philadelphia Art Museum.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York covers a ground area of 7.21 acres and has a total floor area of 15.11 acres. While it was started in 1877, additions have from time to time been made down to 1932. The total cost of the building with all its additions was $6,465,628.27. Improvements and equipment have cost an additional $1,050,000.

The Detroit Art Museum, covering 2.94 acres, was built from 1922 to 1927 at a total cost, including the preparation of the site and landscaping, of $4,251,473.

The evidence shows that structural difficulties were encountered in the erection of the Philadelphia Art Museum, but no adequate explanation was offered to account for the tremendous total cost. The Detroit Museum, for example, was built at the very peak of prices and it should be noted that it covers more ground space than the building in Philadelphia.

In the 24 years of its existence, from 1911 to 1935, the Art Museum Committee held 97 meetings. At 38 of these meetings no quorum was present, although at many of these 38 meetings important business was transacted. No written reports of the Art Museum Committee were ever given to the Park Commission. There are comparatively few references in the minute books even to verbal reports and such references as appear are vague, sketchy and general.

This Committee, charged with carrying out, with public funds, an important and very costly project, conducted its activities, involving the expenditure of many millions of public moneys, with reckless abandon, gross carelessness, and complete disregard of sound business practices and essential legal requirements. It even ignored the specific instructions issued to it by the Park Commission in June, 1923, after the Commission had conducted a partial investigation of the Committee's activities. Any group of men, less a law unto themselves, adopting similar practices in the disbursement of the funds of any ordinary business corporation, would no doubt have been subjected to serious charges, and to suits for the recovery of corporation moneys so informally and recklessly expended, with no attention to ordinary business or legal formalities. It is important to note that the Park Commission, after investigating a portion of the activities of its Committee on the Art Museum and finding them to be grossly careless and illegal, was too weak to control its own Committee and supinely permitted that Committee to disregard instructions and to continue to approve contracts and expend public funds with its customary carelessness, arrogance and utter indifference to the laws governing its work and the responsibilities imposed upon it as a public body.

Careless Accounting, Misappropriation of Funds and Other Irregularities

Failure to Pay Park Funds to the City Treasurer

As previously set forth in this report, the Park Commission collects annually about $100,000 from fines, rentals, licenses, fees for athletic privileges, and other similar items. The Park statutes require that these "park funds" be paid over, as collected, to the City Treasurer and that they subsequently be duly appropriated by Council for the use of the Commission. However, in 1931 the Commission concluded it was not getting funds as quickly as it thought it should from Council. It thereupon began the illegal practice of mingling the moneys, collected from the parks, with the park fund previously appropriated by Council, and using them directly for park purposes. In this way the moneys were not deposited with the City Treasurer and were used without appropriation and without the necessity of having vouchers approved by the City Controller.

This illegal procedure was coupled with loose accounting and with the careless practice of permitting withdrawals on checks signed only by the Secretary, leading directly to the item next mentioned.

Misappropriation of Funds

Thomas S. Martin, Secretary of the Commission, after long years of apparently faithful service, became so careless in his handling of the intermingled Park Funds that the audit made two years later, in 1933, by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. and Montgomery, disclosed a shortage of $38,251.96 in his accounts. With the help of friends and family Major Martin repaid $29,385.49 of this shortage in cash at the time of the audit and gave his note for $8,866.47 covering the balance. This note was paid off in October, 1935. In justice to Major Martin we report his claim that all of the moneys not accounted for had properly been spent by him for park purposes, but, even if his only fault was a failure to keep adequate records, this incident serves to emphasize the careless manner in which the Commission conducted its business. Furthermore, this shortage would probably never have been discovered except for the fact that the activities of the then City Controller had forced the Commission to have its accounts audited, a practice the Commission had not previously adopted.

Phillips Fountain Bequest

In 1901 Henry M. Phillips bequeathed to the Fairmount Park Commission $10,000 for the erection of a suitable memorial fountain, together with a trust fund of $3,000 to provide for maintenance. These funds were permitted to accumulate and by August 31, 1934, the building fund had increased to $35,808.69, and the maintenance fund had increased to $7,389.39. Meanwhile a fountain was erected on the Parkway at a cost of $21,375.72, paid for out of City appropriations for the Art Museum. The Commission then obtained the consent of the Phillips estate to accept this fountain as a compliance with the terms of the Phillips gift. The fountain was accordingly marked as the "Phillips' Fountain." Although the funds used to erect the fountain had come from a City appropriation for the Art Museum, there was no reimbursement of the cost to the City out of the Phillips' legacy. With the accumulated Phillips' funds the Park Commission then opened a special account known as the General Art Museum Account, and thereby had these funds available for expenditure subject to no appropriation or outside supervision.

Anna H. Wilstach Fund

Anna H. Wilstach died in 1892 and bequeathed approximatey $432,000, together with her collection of paintings, engravings, statuaries, books of art, etc., to the Commissioners of Fairmount Park. The income of this fund was to be used in the maintenance of the Art Gallery (Memorial Hall), to keep the collection in good order, and to provide competent caretakers. The balance of the income not required for proper care and maintenance of the Gallery was to be used for increasing the collection.

This fund was allowed to accumulate and has grown to about a million and a quarter dollars. For forty years the principal and income were carelessly intermingled so that, at the time of our investigation, it was impossible for the Commission to tell how much was income and how much was principal. The Assistant Secretary of the Commission on October 23, 1935, after two months' effort to untangle this account, admitted that he had been able to straighten it out only back to 1916 and still had before him the task of straightening it out from that year back to 1892.

The Treasurer of the Commission erroneously stated that the accumulated income on this fund amounted to $800,000, whereas it amounted to about $254,000. This error was caused by the fact that the principal and income of the fund had been so intermingled over a long period of time the Treasurer did not know which was which. After this error was made, the Commission submitted a prepared statement in which it claimed the accumulated income was only $154,000. This was also shown to be erroneous. The accountants testified that the accumulated income was approximately $254,000. Such evidence certainly established gross carelessness in accounting for trust funds.

Mr. Widener attempted to explain away the large accumulation of income by stating that it was being held to make noteworthy and expensive purchases as it was the policy of the Commission to buy only important art works. But the evidence shows that, subsequent to 1916, the largest single purchase involved the payment of $150,000 for two great masterpieces, and that the three next largest purchases involved the payment of $20,000 on May 22, 1919, for a portrait of Lady Eden; the payment of $13,353.75 on May 24, 1922, for another portrait and the payment of $10,954.55 on March 16, 1922, for a painting of The Holy Family by St. Jerome. The foregoing four purchases represent the only expenditure of income, during the years from 1916 to 1935, for the acquisition of paintings or art objects costing more than $10,000. There was thus clearly no reason to accumulate $254,000 to make purchases which, except in these four instances, involved less than $10,000 each. Colonel Glendinning gave as his explanation of this failure to use available funds in making art purchases as directed, the statement that "the time has not been thought propitious to do so," despite the fact that many private galleries and collections of beautiful paintings were being sold during the depression at exceptionally low prices.

Obviously there was not only carlessness but also indifference in the handling of these trust funds.

Failure to Exercise Due Vigilance Where Trust Funds Have Been Held by an Outside Agency as Trustee

Under the will of George W. Elkins, a fund known as the George W. Elkins' Fund was left in trust, the income to be paid to the Fairmount Park Commission. The Land Title Bank and Trust Company is the surviving trustee of this fund, the principal of which amounted to $500,000. The income of the fund in 1929 was $29,000; in 1930 it was $27,500; but by 1934 it had dropped to about $3,500. It was indicated that, for 1935, the income would be even less. One of the Commissioners explained that the investments evidently had been bad; but no steps had been taken by the Commission at any time to inquire into the investment or administration of this trust fund, notwithstanding the fact that the income had dropped from $29,000 per annum in 1929 to less than $3,500 in 1934.

Secret Payrolls

Salaries of the executive employees were supposed to be listed in full in the Park Budget annually submitted to City Council. For some years, however, the Commission supplemented the salaries allowed by appropriation of Council, by payments to certain favored employees directly out of the Park Fund, which is annually appropriated to the Commission in a lump sum. For example, in 1932, the following employees received regular salaries plus additions from the Park Fund, as follows:

	Council Budget	Park Fund
Thomas S. Martin	$4,000	$2,000
R. M. Beck	1,700	300
Alan Corson	4,500	1,500
Regina Vogt	(No appropriation)	1,200
John W. Sykes (Park Physician)	(No appropriation)	1,500
Russell Vogdes	2,900	600
S. Mitchell	$7.00 per liem	750
Walter Q. Thomas	2,700	300
Samuel Baxter	2,700	300
James Allen	1,500	300

This practice was carried on for many years. As early as 1920 Major Martin had received $1,500 from the Park Fund in addition to $3,000 allowed him by City Council. It was testified by Colonel Glendinning, Treasurer of the Park Commission, that these additional items had been requested by City Council, but had been refused. Thus, despite the fact that City Council had refused to allow the increases, the Park Commission had paid them directly out of its Park Funds.

Failure to Have Audits Made

The present Mayor of Philadelphia, who was then City Controller, testified before your Committee on December 13, 1935, that the Controller's office had made every possible effort in and after 1930 to audit the books and accounts of the Commission. To accomplish such audit it had been necessary to institute proceedings before the Attorney General of Pennsylvania and in the Courts of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County. Eventually, the Mayor, then Controller, had succeeded in having certain accounts of the Park Commission audited in October, 1933, by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery. This audit did not include all the accounts, however, but only the account known as the Park Fund. The Commission took the attitude that the Park Trust Funds were completely under its jurisdiction and not subject to any outside audit.

This audit disclosed a careless and irregular method of keeping accounts. Various recommendations, made by the accountants to correct this evil, were thereafter put into effect by the Commission. The important fact is that this reform in accounting practices was forced on the Commission and was not the result of its own initiative.

Call on Council for Funds While Having Moneys Available Earmarked for the Same Purposes

In the discussion of the Phillips' Fountain Fund, it was shown that the Park Commission utilized certain appropriations by City Council to erect a memorial fountain, although under the terms of the Phillips' bequest the Commission already held funds for the erection of the fountain.

The Wilstach bequest included many art items to be displayed in Memorial Hall. It provided a fund of $432,000, the income from which was to be used first for the maintenance of the collection and the building. Over the course of years, the income on this fund had been permitted to accumulate until in 1935 there was more than $250,000 available and unexpended. Notwithstanding that fact, the Commission permitted the closing of the collection, and of Memorial Hall wherein it is housed, during the years of 1933, 1934 and 1935. Colonel Glendinning explained that such closing was necessary as Council was unable to appropriate the moneys previously appropriated to keep the Hall open. That is, City Council failed to provide light, heat, guards, etc. Thus, with $254,000 accumulated income available for the primary purpose of keeping the building open, the Commission failed to expend the funds necessary to have the gallery remain open, and the real purpose of the bequest was not fulfilled.

Failure to Let Concessions to the Highest Bidder

The Park properties include certain concessions, such as restaurant, refreshment privileges, etc. For many years it was the policy of the Park Commission to let these concessions without advertising or otherwise inviting bidding. Apparently it was the practice to offer these to private individuals at a stipulated amount. The Park Commission never employed any real estate agent for the purpose of obtaining higher rentals for these properties. It was testified that in 1933 the Cobb's Creek restaurant was let at $25.00 per month, notwithstanding the fact another party had submitted a written offer of $1,000 per year.

Permitting Use of Park Houses and Properties Rent Free

There are about 300 buildings under the jurisdiction of the Fairmount Park Commission, of which 112 are occupied. Of the 112 so occupied, 69 produce an average monthly rental of $12.50. 43 of the properties are occupied rent free. This practice of permitting the occupation of Park properties without rental has been going on for many years. The Commission explained that these tenants were good caretakers and entirely responsible. It did not feel that it wanted "to go into the real estate business by leasing these properties." It also thought that it would be improper for individuals, not employed by the City, to occupy the buildings on City property.

A considerable number of the tenants occupying supposedly rent producing houses were in fact paying no rent, but the Commission considered it better business.

to permit these tenants to remain than to rehabilitate the houses in order that they might produce income.

The Commission never consulted any real estate expert to ascertain what rentals might reasonably be expected from these properties. It never had any estimate or appraisal to indicate what the total rentals might be from these houses.

The Commission permitted Dr. Mitten to use rent free about 75 acres of land in the Poor House section. Dr. Mitten actually tilled these 75 acres and used the crops for his own purposes. At the time of the hearings the Commission had repossessed this acreage and had sowed the land in hay for the feeding of Park animals.

Failure to Make Annual Reports

The Commission by statute is required in January of each year to furnish to City Council a report of its proceedings and a statement of its expenditures for the preceding year. The only report made, however, is the Chief Engineer's report which shows the activities, but not the receipts or expenditures. This failure to report as required has been the subject of criticism for many years.

Park Guards

The Act of April 14, 1868, P. L. 1083, Section 27, provides: "The said Park Commissioners shall employ, equip and pay a park force ....."

Under the terms of this section the Park Commission has built up a park force of approximately 365 guards and officers. These men are paid by appropriation of Council, the total appropriation for this purpose for 1937 being $797,114.

In 1931, the year in which the Park Commissioners, without authority of Council, purchased two unneeded properties on Ridge Avenue for $88,000 and made down payments thereon of $11,000 out of their "Park Fund" (as herein discussed at greater length), the salaries of the park guards were cut. Subsequently, while making additional payments on those properties of $60,000 out of their "Park Fund," the Commissioners adopted the policy of requiring the park guards personally to pay one-half the cost of their uniforms, notwithstanding the statutory provision requiring the Commission to "equip" the park force.

A pension fund for the guards is maintained, supposedly as a private pension fund managed by their own independent organization. At the time of the hearings before your Committee, Sergeant Brady was the Secretary, Lieutenant Long the Treasurer, and the Germantown Trust Company the Depository of this fund. The Fairmount Park Commission states that it has no control over this pension fund of its management. Although this privately managed pension fund is permitted to operate, the park guards are required to join the City Pension Fund, and for the purposes of that fund 2% of their salaries is deducted and deposited to their credit. It would appear from the testimony that the Guard Pension Fund is a strictly private matter with the guards, which they may join a their discretion. However, in his testimony before your Committee, the present Mayor of Philadelphia stated that the private pension fund has in reality been controlled by the Secretary of the Park Commission and that, through fear of losing their jobs, the guards have virtually no choice in the matter and subscribe to the fund as a matter of course, which subjects them to the expense of being members of two pension funds.

He further testified that there have been abuses in connection with the private pension fund and that an audit of the fund a few years ago had disclosed that $80,000 of securities held by it were worthless and that the fund had advanced moneys to individuals and had eventually had to vote those advances to these individuals as compensation because they were unable to repay.

Mayor Wilson further testified that the Commissioners are without power to appoint police officers, and are limited to the employment of watchmen whose powers are restricted to maintaining order in Fairmount Park. He stated that the only authority of the guards is to maintain peace in the Park, that nevertheless they make arrests on the city highways, that they have no more right to carry revolvers than any other citizen without an individual permit, and that they are therefore violating the law when carrying firearms without such permit.

While no testimony was taken directly on the following subject the members of your Committee, having received numerous personal complaints, are aware that in many instances the park guards have been forced to be politically active because of their original sponsonship in obtaining appointment to the Guard. This is, of course, a condition that should not be permitted to continue, especially so as there is no civil service requirement in the original appointment.

Park Trolley System

The Park Commission licensed the Fairmount Park Transit Company, which has no connection with P. R. T., to operate trolleys within the Park under a lease which provided for a license fee of 2% of the gross receipts. Against this fee, under the terms of the lease, the Company is allowed credit for the cost of any improvements or ornamentations made by the Company with the approval of the Park Commission.

Prior to 1934 the Park Transit Company was also charged with the duty to maintain and repair at its expense the Strawberry Mansion Bridge. This bridge was then found to be unsafe and was temporarily closed, as the Transit Company had no funds with which to make the necessary repairs. The Company at first offered to turn over the bridge to the City of Philadelphia at a price of three hundred and eighty odd thousand dollars, but finally the Company transferred the bridge to the City without cost and the City made the repairs.

The gross receipts of the park trolley in 1932 were $71,000; in 1933, $60,000; in 1934, $62,000, and down to October 1935, approximately $55,000. Under the terms of the lease, therefore, the 2% fee in 1932 amounted to $1,420; in 1933, $1,200, and in 1934, $1,240. The rentals paid in 1931 amounted to $2,109.64. No rentals were paid in 1932. During 1935 down to September 30th the rentals paid amounted to $3,209.00. The Commission reports that all rentals have been paid in full to 1937.

These rentals were ordinarily deposited in the Park Fund and paid over to the City Treasurer. In three instances, however, in 1933 and 1934, the rental moneys were paid directly from the accounts of the Park Commission for the repair of one of the park trolley bridges, without being deposited with the City Treasurer and subsequently being appropriated by Council as required by statute.

The Fairmount Park Transit Company is being reorganized under Section 77-B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, but it has been arranged that the lease agreement above referred to shall continue in force notwithstanding the reorganization.

Lax Attendance at Meetings

43 meetings of the Commission were held in the four years ending in December, 1935. These were not well attended. One member attended only 9, another only 4 and another only 2.

In the same period, the Committee on the Art Museum held 42 meetings. One member attended only 14, and another attended only 1.

Under the rules of the Commission, it requires 6 members to constitute a quorum at any regular meeting and 10 to constitute a quorum at a special meeting. The Commission held 11 meetings in 1930. At one of these only 3 members were present and, at three of these meetings, only 5 members were present.

As previously pointed out, there was less than a quorum at 38 of the meetings of the Committee on the Art Museum, and at these meetings, at which no business could legally be transacted, large contracts and extras were nonetheless approved and important business transacted.

A Government Within a Government

While the parks belong to the City of Philadelphia and, with the exception of a few relatively unimportant tracts, are located within the city, they are governed and managed by a Commission which is not in any sense a part of the city government or in any was responsible to it.

The streets and highways of the city are maintained by the Bureau of Highways of the Department of Public Works of the city government; but the roads through the parks, which are now largely connecting links in heavily travelled highways, are maintained by the Park Commission.

The city police are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Police of the Department of Public Safety of the city government, but the park guards are under the jurisdiction of the Park Commission.

Many small playgrounds and swimming pools in the city are under the supervision of the Bureau of Recreation of the Department of Public Welfare of the city government, but all recreational facilities and areas within the park system are under the supervision of the Park Commission.

Likewise, the Schuylkill River in the Park is under the jurisdiction of the Park Commission; but above and below the Park boundaries it is under the jurisdiction of the city government.

These facts merely serve to illustrate that the existence of the Park Commission as an independent governing body probably adds to the expense and confusion of the total Philadelphia government as embodied in its city government, its county government and the Park Commission.

Comments on Recently Submitted Report of Committee on Recreation

While this report was being prepared by your Committee, the recently created and appointed Committee on Recreation of the Park Commission submitted a report showing a tremendous increase in 1936 in the use of recreational facilities in the Philadelphia parks, including the fact that in that year upwards of 600,000 persons had made use of the sport facilities in Fairmount Park. That is very commendable evidence that public criticism, coupled with the investigation started by your Committee in October, 1935, has stirred the Commission into a belated, though distinctly beneficial, activity.

The report further shows that the recreational department, set up in 1936, is functioning with Federal funds. WPA labor and a supervisor loaned by the Playgrounds and Recreation Association. This fact emphasizes, not so much the claim of the Commission, that no funds have been appropriated for the recreational department, as the facts heretofore pointed out, namely, that the Commission, in the years it was able to get funds from Council, sought and obtained them for an unduly expensive Art Museum and for the acquisition of unnecessary and exceedingly costly tracts of land, instead of for much needed and neglected recreational development, and that the Commission, until about the time a legislative investigation was proposed, was so little concerned with the needs of the common citizens, using the parks, that it expended $71,000 of "Park Funds" for needless real estate purchases while neglecting to install toilet facilities, dressing rooms and life guards at the pools in Pennypack Park, although the absence of the first two created a scandalous condition in the Park and the employment of life guards might have prevented the loss of three lives by drowning.

Spurred by criticism and our investigation, and helped by the appointment in the last few years of several younger and more active Commissioners, and by the use of Federal funds, the Fairmount Park Commission has lately endeavored to correct many of its own deeply rooted shortcomings. It deserves commendation for its efforts in that direction and praise for the results recently obtained. However, this spurt of activity, under criticsim, does not change in any respect the accuracy or soundness of the findings and the conclusions set forth in this report.

The New Members of the Commission Not Personally Responsible

It is perhaps needless to point out that a number of the men, now serving as Commissioners, were not members of the Commission at the time the acts took place which form the basis of the criticisms in this report. Also, some of the other present members of the Commission were appointed after many of those acts had occurred and were to that extent not personally responsible for them. This statement is made in justice to these new members as individuals, but is not intended in any way as an exoneration of the Commission as a Commission. The Commission, as a continuing body, must be judged by its record, however bad that record may be.

Conclusions

1. As interpreted by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, the Act of 1867 committed the exclusive control and maintenance of the Park to the Fairmount Park Commissioners, and excluded City Council from all control over the Park or the Commission, but at the same time placed Council under obligation to make the necessary appropriations for maintenance of the Park. The Court has held that the Commissioners, being appointed under authority of the State, derive their authority from a higher source than City Council and are not in any way agents of Council or subject to its authority. But, notwithstanding that fact, the City has been held liable for damages arising from the negligence of the Commission as, for example, in the case of a defective footway in the Park which causes injury to some pedestrian. There thus exists an anomalous situation in which the City has no voice or control over the park properties to which it holds title, but, nonetheless, is liable for the expense of maintenance and for damages arising from negligence.

2. In their accounting and business methods the Commissioners over a long period of years have been exceedingly lax.

3. In the matter of attending meetings of the Commission, and meetings of its principal standing committees, the Commissioners have also been lax. In many cases, important business has improperly and unlawfully been transacted without a quorum being present at the meeting.

4. Until recently, the Commissioners steadfastly held that the public had no right to inquire into their administration of park finances and affairs, and fought off every attempt of public representatives to obtain specific information. Such right was conceded only after prolonged resistance by the Commissioners and much public criticism.

5. Quite unfortunately, the Commissioners, although generally distinguished citizens, have lacked training and technical experience in park development and management. Also, they have consistently failed to employ competent men having the training and experience they themselves have lacked. The voluntary and part-time service given by the Commissioners has not been satisfactory or efficient and the executive employees of the Commission have not been qualified and capable experts trained in modern park maintenance and in the proper development of recreational facilities. As a result, the parks have had untrained, inefficient and haphazard management.

6. In acquiring land for the parkway and museum development, the Commissioners acquired a large tract known as the Parkway Gardens, lying outside of the area deemed adequate and sufficient for the parkway and museum development. This unneeded tract contained 7.4 acres and cost the city approximately $2,200,000. Meanwhile, the city neglected to acquire 3 tracts lying within the boundaries that were considered absolutely necessary for a balanced parkway development. One of these tracts has not even been condemned and, therefore, any buildings erected on it will necessarily be added to the price the city must ultimately pay. The useless land acquired should be put back into taxable ownership as quickly as possible and all the necessary land should promptly be condemned.

7. The ordinance regulating the erection of buildings on the parkway was not carefully prepared and the result is there is a total lack of relation of mass and harmony as between the building of the Board of Education and the other important buildings erected on the parkway. This ordinance should immediately be restudied and revised.

8. By December, 1935, the city had spent $2,169,135 in acquiring property for park development in adjoining counties, while at the same time neglecting to install necessary park areas within the crowded sections of the city of Philadelphia.

9. Philadelphia now ranks 26th, among the first 42 cities of our country, in area devoted to parks and recreation, based upon the requirements of its population.

10. The Park Commission has noticeably been backward in the development of recreational facilities in the park areas under its jurisdiction. It has just recently awakened to the new recreational uses which more wide-awake park authorities began to encourage and provide for thirty or forty years ago.

11. The Philadelphia park system is the only great park system in the United States that has not kept pace with the modern movement for the constant expansion of human services that such park properties can render.

12. Fairmount Park has only one definitely designed andequipped children's playground. It has no areas developed for coasting or sledding. There is no definitely planned system of hiking trails. No camping sites have been developed for small boys and girls or for the use of families. Futhermore, there are no swimming facilities of a modern type in any of the Philadelphia parks. Outdoor cooking ovens have just been authorized although they have been supplied in abundance for many years in parks in other cities. The number of baseball diamonds, tennis courts, and similar facilities in the Philadelphia parks is regrettably small as compared with the number supplied in the parks of other large cities, notwithstanding the fact that the Commission has lately had at its command WPA funds in substantial amounts for such development. Even in the simple matter of furnishing benches for the convenience of the public the Commission has failed to render adequate service.

13. Until late in 1935, the only facilities provided within Pennypack Park, with its 1250 acres and great natural beauty, were bridle paths and hiking trails, together with such inadequate toilet facilities and old dams for bathing pools, as were on the properties when acquired. Although many thousands of persons used Pennypack Park daily on Saturdays and Sundays throughout the summer months, these thousands were left for many years until 1935 without decent or adequate toilet facilities and were thereby compelled to use the woods as an open toilet. This condition still prevails in substantial portions of that park. Although many hundreds bathed daily in the pools, no dressing rooms were installed until late in 1935 and the bathers for years were compelled to dress and undress in the woods.

14. No life guards were employed to protect bathers in the pools in Pennypack Park until July, 1934, by which time three boys had drowned.

15. While the Commission has pleaded lack of funds as its excuse for not installing the needed facilities for recreation and comfort, it demonstrated, by its ability to get $15,000,000 for an uncompleted art museum and many hundreds of thousands of dollars for the purchase of unneeded real estate, that it could get ample money from Council when it really made the effort to do so. There was no proof that the Commission ever asked for appropriations to cover the cost of the comparatively simple and inexpensive, but much needed, facilities it neglected to install.

16. The $77,000, needlessly taken by the Commission out of its park funds in the years 1931 to 1935 for the purchase of useless real estate, would by itself have been sufficient to pay for the cost of installing adequate toilets and bathing houses in Pennypack Park, to pay the wages of the much needed lifeguards and to provide many other necessary facilities and conveniences for the public.

17. The Commission obviously was more interested in the construction of an art museum and the acquisition of additional tracts of land than it was in the comfort of the great park-using public.

18. In the matter of furnishing facilities and conveniences, the Commission lacked intelligence, discrimination and the will-to-do more than it lacked necessary funds.

19. In 1931, although having in its files an opinion of the City Solicitor that such transaction would be illegal, the Commission without prior approval of Council, or even of the Solicitor for the Commission, purchased two small parcels of land on Ridge Avenue for down payments aggregating $11,000 and mortgages, created by a straw man drafted for the purpose, aggregating $77,000, the effect of such transactions being improperly to increase the debt of the City by the amount of the mortgages and to establish an interest rate thereon of 6%, entailing an annual fixed charge at that rate upon the revenues of the City.

20. These purchases, made at excessive prices, bailed out the Edwin H. Vare Building and Loan Association and another mortgagee at the instigation of a member of the then Board of Revision of Taxes, so that these mortgagees, after having acquired the properties at foreclosure sales, received the full balances due them plus a profit.

21. The Commission is still paying 6% interest on at least three other mortgages, of approximately $50,000 each, upon other lands improperly purchased subject to mortgage in disregard of the above mentioned opinion of the City Solicitor.

22. The $11,000 down payments, and an additional $60,000 subsequently paid by the Commission in reduction of the mortgages on the Ridge Avenue properties, were taken out of the Park funds, (which might be called the pocket money available to the Commission for general miscellaneous use), without prior approval of Council and without appropriation, so that the Park funds for several years were seriously depleted and the Commission was unable to install improvements urgently needed for the comfort and convenience of the park-using public.

23. In 1930, the Commission purchased 18 acres of land along Cobb's Creek in Delaware County by condemnation proceedings at an average price of $55,500 per acre, whereas competent witnesses testified before your Committee that this land, at the time of the purchase, was not worth more than $2,800 per acre. In 1929, the Commission purchased 32½ acres of land on the north side of City Line along the bed of Cobb's Creek at $16,800 per acre, whereas competent witnesses testified before your Committee that this land at the time of the purchase, was not worth more than $5,000 per acre.

24. Mr. Eli Kirk Price, now deceased but then Vice-President of the Commission, without proper authority agreed in advance with the owner of this tract upon the purchase price. Subsequently, to make good this bargain, the then City Solicitor instructed his assistant to conduct proceedings before the Board of View in such manner that the City would sustain the sum to be paid as agreed to by Mr. Price. Pursuant to these instructions the City put in no defense and actually put witnesses on the stand to support the agreed to but excessive value of $16,800 per acre.

25. In 1928, the Commission acquired five acres of land on Midvale Avenue, almost useless for park purposes, for approximately $55,500 per acre ,and thereby created a park, and removed the possibility of objectionable building development, directly across the street from the house of the then Chairman of the Board of Revision of Taxes.

26. The Commission undertook to erect the Art Museum at the head of the Parkway without due investigation as to its cost and obtained the consent of City Council by misleading and incomplete statements as to the amount of expense involved. The museum was launched as a $3,500,000 project in 1916, as shown by the estimated cost set forth in the ordinance of Council appropriating funds for construction. It had developed into an $11,500,000 project by 1924, and to date it has cost more than $15,000,000 and it is only two-thirds completed. One of the architects explained that no full estimate of the cost was given at the time the building was planned for fear that, "If the cost had been known, it would have discouraged the work."

27. The Park Commission was so alarmed by the careless manner in which its Art Museum Committee was handling the construction of the Museum that in January, 1923, it appointed a sub-committee to investigate the awarding of certain contracts. After several months' investigation, this sub-committee submitted its report to the Commission in June, 1923, showing, among other things, the following facts:

> When the revised plans were accepted in 1917, no estimate of the cost was made by either the architects or the Commission. One of the early contracts was awarded for $621,350, notwithstanding the fact that, before the contract was awarded, it was definitely known that additions would increase the cost under the contract by almost $200,000. Nothwithstanding the ordinance limiting the cost of the Museum to $3,500.000, no estimate of the cost had been obtained at the time this contract was awarded. The requirements of the City Charter Act were violated by the Commission in that it failed to furnish to Council a certification of the length of life of such portion of the Art Museum as was to be financed by a proposed city loan. Contractors were instructed to perform additional work, without public advertisement for bids and without competitive bidding, so that the F. W. Mark Construction Company was paid approximately $2.000.000 more, under "an assumed right in the contract," than its contract called for. That company was awarded a second contract for $199.500, which was later extended by orders for extra work to approximately $332.000. This contract was not based upon public advertisement for bids. The Mark Construction Company was also instructed to do extra work under the "Greber Plans," which had not even been presented to the other bidders.
> The sub-committee in its report questioned the authority of the Commission to enter into any contract, as had been its practice, for a sum in excess of the amount of money available at the time of entering into the contract. It also questioned the propriety of awarding contracts without estimates of cost, and the propriety of ordering additional work under contracts without re-advertisement and re-bidding. It criticised the failure to have contracts for the museum certified by the Controller and criticised, as a violation of State statutes, the practice of entering into contracts where no appropriation therefor had first been made by Council.
> The sub-committee then recommended that the Commission, in the execution of contracts, should be bound by the same laws that regulate contracts entered into by any city department; that all work to be done by and for the Commission, and all materials purchased, should be upon contract; that, prior to entering into any contract, there should be public advertisement soliciting bids and an appropriation in hand and an estimate of cost furnished by the proper officers to the Commission; that all contracts should contain a maximum sum beyond which no work should be done without additional estimates and contracts let after advertisement for bids; and that, in all instances, such maximum sums should be within the appropriation and the estimated costs and that the contracts should be certified by the Controller.

28. In June, 1923 ,the Commission approved the report of its own sub-committee and adopted resolutions imposing restrictions upon the Art Museum Committee, but that committee thereafter wholly ignored those resolutions and restrictions. It held numerous meetings attended by less than a quorum and, at such illegally constituted meetings, approved contracts for additional work involving in the aggregate the expenditure of millions of dollars. It never took the trouble subsequently to approve such illegal actions or to have them reported to and ratified by the Commission. The contracts it thereafter approved did not contain provision for a maximum sum and they were not certified by the City Controller. No adequate proof was ever offered that these contracts were let after proper advertisement and competitive bidding. In one case, five days after bids were received, the Art Museum Committee permitted a favored bidder to revise it bid and thereupon awarded the contract to it. The Committee also continued its vicious practice of awarding contracts for small sums and permitting extras thereunder to run up to as much as 13 and 14 times the sums specified in the contracts.

29. Notwithstanding the fact that the Committee on the Art Museum was thus arrogantly disobeying its instructions, the Park Commission was so weak that it made no further attempt to restrain the high-handed and illegal activities of that Committee.

30. The moneys collected from park sources amount to about $100,000 per year, and are required by statute to be paid over as collected to the City Treasurer and subsequently to be appropriated by Council for the use of the Commission, but, in 1931, the Commission concluded it was not getting funds as quickly as it should from Council and thereupon began the illegal practice of mingling the moneys collected from the parks with the park funds previously appropriated and using them directly for park purposes. This was a direct violation of the law and improperly enabled the Commission to use funds without appropriation and without the necessity of having vouchers approved by the City Controller.

31. As a result of this illegal procedure, coupled with loose accounting and the careless practice of permitting withdrawals on checks signed only by the Secretary, a shortage of $38,251.96, since made up, was discovered by outside auditors, in 1933, in the accounts of the Secretary of the Commission.

32. Although the Commission held a fund bequeathed for the erection of a memorial fountain, it obtained from the City moneys for the construction of a fountain on the parkway and then obtained the consent of the donor's estate to accept such fountain as a compliance with the terms of the gift. However, the Commission did not pay over to the City the fund it held from the estate, in reimbursement of the cost of the fountain, but used that fund as a part of its general art museum account, thereby improperly making funds available for expenditure by it without appropriation or outside supervision.

33. The Commission for more than forty years carelessly intermingled the principal and income of the Wilstach trust fund of $500,000, so that it was impossible for the Commission to tell how much was income and how much was principal.

34. Although the income from the Elkins trust fund of $500.000 dropped from $29,000 in 1929 to less than $3,500 in 1935, the Commission had made no effort to investigate the management of the fund or to see what steps had been or could be taken to preserve the fund and maintain its income.

35. In order to pay certain of its employees increases in salary, which Council had refused to allow in its appropriations, the Park Commission for years secretely supplemented the salaries of such employees, as approved from year to year by Council, by payments out of its park funds.

36. Until 1933, when compelled by the activities of the then City Controller to do so, the Commissioners never had had their books audited by any outside accountant.

37. For many years the park concessions were let without advertisement or other invitation for bids. The Commission never employed any real estate agent for the purpose of obtaining full value from the concessions or adequate rentals from the 300 buildings within the park areas. Many of these buildings for many years were occupied rent free by persons in the employ of the Commission.

38. The Commission also permitted Dr. Mitten to use and cultivate, rent free, a tract of 75 acres. After public criticism, the Commission repossessed this acreage and now sows the land in hay for the feeding of park animals.

39. The Commission has never complied with the statutory requirement that it furnish annually to City Council a report of its proceedings and a statement of its expenditures for the preceding year. It submits an engineers' report which shows activities, but not expenditures.

40. Although required by statute to equip the park force, the Commissioners required the guards personally to pay one-half the cost of their uniforms. This economy, together with a reduction in salaries of the park guards, occurred during the period when the Commission was wasting its park funds as before stated in the acquisition of useless real estate.

41. A pension fund for the guards is maintained, presumably as a private pension fund managed by the guards, but it is apparent that, through fear of losing their jobs, the guards have little choice in the matter and subscribe to that fund in addition to being compelled to join the city pension fund, thereby being subjected to double pension expense.

42. The present Mayor testified that there have been abuses in connection with the private pension fund and that an audit of the fund a few years ago disclosed that $80,000 of securities held by it were worthless and that the fund had advanced money to individuals and had had to vote those advances as compensation as it was not able to obtain repayment. While the Commission disclaims responsibility for this fund, it could and should have protected its employees from such exploitation.

43. The park guards are not police officers. They have authority only to maintain peace in the park. Nonetheless they make arrests on the city highways and carry firearms, although without the legal right to do so except upon individual permits.

44. The park guards, because of the sponsorship through which they obtain their appointments, are frequently forced into political activity, which is not considered desirable, inasmuch as there is no civil service requirement relating to the appointment of guards.

45. While the Parks belong to the City, they are governed and managed by a Commission which it not in any sense a part of the City government or in any way responsible to it. The streets and highways of the City are maintained by the Bureau of Highways, but the roads through the parks, which are largely connecting links in heavily travelled highways, are maintained by the Park Commission. The City police are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Police, but the guards are under the jurisdiction of the Park Commission. Many small playgrounds and swimming pools in the City are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Recreation, but all recreational facilities within the park areas are under the Park Commission. The Commission, as an independent governing body, adds to the expense and confusion of the total Philadelphia government, now vested in three independent agencies,—the city government, the county government and the Park Commission.

46. While your Committee was preparing this report to the House of Representatives, the recently created Committee on Recreation of the Park Commission submitted a report showing a substantial increase in 1936, in the use of recreational facilities in the Philadelphia parks. Your Committee, however, regards that as commendable evidence of the fact that public criticism, coupled with its own investigation, has stirred the Park Commission into a belated, though distinctly beneficial, activity. The Commission has lately endeavored to correct many of its own deeply rooted shortcomings, but this spurt of activity, under cirticism, does not change the views or the conclusions reached by your Committee.

47. A number of the men now serving as Commissioners were not members of the Commission at the time the acts took place which form the basis of the criticisms in this report. Also, some of the other present members of the Commission were appointed after many of those acts had occurred and were, to that extent, not personally responsible for them. While this statement is made in justice to these new members, as individuals, it is not intended in any was as an exoneration of the Commission as a Commission. As a continuing body, the Commission must be judged by its record, however bad that record may be.

Discussion

Clearly the Park Commission has not functioned well. We believe, first, that the set-up of the Commission, as embodied in our old statutes, is faulty, and, secondly, that the personnel of the Commission is not satisfactory.

The set-up is faulty for the following reasons: The Commissioners are appointed by the Board of Judges but, after appointment, the Commissioners are not responsible to the Judges and do not even have to report to them. In fact the Commissioners are not responsible to anyone. They cannot be removed from office. Their sense of being a law unto themselves is further unduly enhanced by the Board of Judges' uniform practice of reappointing the same Commissioners at the end of each five year period, so that an appointment, once made, becomes, in effect, an appointment for life. This tends to lessen both initiative and the sense of public duty and accountability. Furthermore, the Commission constitutes an independent governing body, controlling large and valuable city properties, and yet alien to the city government and in no way accountable to it.

The personnel is not satisfactory because is consists so largely of men who are well along in years, who have served so long on the Commission that their activity and interest have become dulled, who have no special knowledge of park development or management, who are out of touch with the needs of the park-using public, and who have many and varied important business, financial and social activities and interests claiming a prior right to their time and attention.

These men, although not possessed of the knowledge, initiative and interest which might enable them properly to develop and manage the great park system of Philadelphia, have not, in a long period of years, had the foresight to employ a single first class man who could advise them and carry the burden which has been too much for them.

Active participation in the care and management of the parks by keenly interested, able and public spirited citizens, might prove very effective under proper circumstances . We believe, however, that such citizens should be appointed only for short terms so that their interest will not become dulled; that they should be held to full public accountability; that it should be possible to remove them if they fail to give proper service; and that, whatever body manages the parks, there should be employed, as executive heads, well qualified and capable experts who should be discharged or pensioned when their alertness and ability have become inadequate to the demands upon them.

The statutes creating the Fairmount Park Commission were passed before the State Constitution was adopted in 1874. Our Supreme Court has held that, if passed today, these statutes would be unconstitutional, and therefore invalid, under Article 3, Section 7 of the State Constitution, which provides:

> "The General Assembly shall not pass any local or special law:
> * * *
> "Regulating the affairs of counties, cities, townships, wards, boroughs or school districts."

and under Article 3, Section 20, which provides:

> "The General Assembly shall not delegate to any special commission, private corporation or association, any power to make, supervise or interfere with any municipal improvement, money, property or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes or perform any municipal function whatever."

However, Article 3, Section 7, of the Constitution expressly gives the legislature the power to repeal any local or special laws, such as those which created the Commission.

In this connection we call attention to the decision of our Supreme Court in Moll v. Morrow, 253 Pa. 442, declaring unconstitutional as delegating municipal functions to a special committee, the Act of June 27, 1913, P. L. 638. That Act provided for the creation of a Bureau of Public Morals in the Department of Public Safety in cities of the second class and provided for a board of seven directors appointed by the Mayor and confirmed by council, the board to elect from their own body a superintendent. The Court held:

> "This board of directors is not a bureau in the department of public safety, and calling it so does not help matters. * * * All other bureaus are subordinate to and under the control of the heads of departments of which they are a part. This only is equal in authority and power. There is no question that the legislature can establish almost any form of government it pleases and that it may subdivide municipal functions, create departments, bureaus and other agencies and change them. But the question is not determined by what might have been done. There has been created for cities of the second class a form of government. This bureau is alien from it in every characteristic. * * *
> "The Act of 1913 does not create a new department. Without any amending or repealing clause it establishes a separate board of directors to administer a part of the police affairs of the city, expressing, but not carrying out the intention to create a bureau. It creates neither a bureau nor a department subordinate to the mayor, in whom is vested the executive power of the city. It is a special agency for the performance of a municipal function."

From this decision it is apparent that, if the laws creating the Fairmount Park Commission are repealed, due care must be exercised to prevent the department or bureau, charged with control and management of the park system, from being in any way alien to the form of government provided for cities of the first class.

Recommendations

Your Committee recommends that the laws creating and relating to the Fairmount Park Commission be repealed. Whether such repeal should be made now, or later, and in whose hands the care, supervision and control of the parks should be placed, are questions to be decided by the State Legislature. Your Committee, however, submits for consideration the following possibilities, all of which it believes would be permissible and valid under the provisions of the State Constitution:

1. That the repeal of the present statutes relating to the Fairmount Park Commission be deferred, so that the problem of park management may be considered in connection with the proposed consolidation of the city and county governments in cities and counties of the first class.

This course would have the advantage of permitting the Legislature to consolidate and co-ordinate the now independent city and county and Park Commission governments as a whole. In connection with this proposal, your Committee had hoped that, in appointing successors to the present Commissioners whose terms expire in June, 1937, the Board of Judges would consider the facts brought out at the hearings before your Committee and also the summary thereof embodied in this report, and would make a special effort to select interested, capable and well qualified men. However, on March 5, 1937, while this report was in the hands of the printer and three months before action was necessary, the judges followed their usual routine and reappointed the Commissioners as a whole for another five year period. This hasty action is unfortunate. It emphasizes the need of a change in the present system.

2. That the present statutes be repealed at this time and that, concurrently, the laws providing a charter for cities of the first class be amended in such manner as to provide for an additional executive department for such cities to be known as the "Department of Public Parks and Recreation" in which shall be vested the care, management, administration and supervision of all parks, park areas, parkways, boulevards, playgrounds, recreation centers, recreation piers, bath houses, and similar properties and facilities belonging to the city.

If this suggestion is adopted, it would appear advisable to take away from the Bureau of Recreation of the Department of Public Welfare in such cities all power and jurisdiction over playgrounds, recreation centers, and similar properties, so that all parks and recreation facilities shall come under the exclusive control of the proposed new department.

In order to maintain the benefits of supervision by public-spirited citizens, in connection with this proposal, it is suggested that the proposed amendments of the city charter act further provide for an advisory board to be known as the "Board of Public Parks and Recreation," to consist of five citizens and residents of such city, who shall serve without compensation and shall be appointed for such term and in such manner as may be deemed desirable or advisable. This Board should be empowered to cooperate and advise with the Director of the proposed Department of Public Parks and Recreation and, for such purpose, should be entitled by law at all times to demand and receive full information regarding the management and affairs of the department and the properties and facilities under its care. With this plan, the immediate responsibility for the proper management and supervision of the parks and recreation areas would be centered in the head of the proposed new city department, a salaried, full-time and presumably responsible public officer. The powers given to the advisory board would be such as to enable the proposed group of interested citizens, constituting the board, to help mold the policies of the department, and, through their power to obtain information and their suggestions and criticisms, assist in maintaining an energetic, capable and resourceful administration. The theory underlying this proposal is in essence the same theory which, in the drafting of wills, so frequently leads experienced lawyers to name as executors and trustees a trust company for experience, responsibility and stability and an energetic individual whose chief duty is to supply the keen personal interest that is sometimes lacking in professional management of trust funds.

3. That the laws creating and relating to the Fairmount Park Commission be repealed and that the parks be taken over and managed as public parks by the state, through such agency as the Legislature may create for such purpose.

This course would have a distinct advantage in that the city would be relieved of the burden of maintaining the parks, and the governing board, receiving its funds from the state, would no doubt have more plentiful means of developing the resources of the parks for the full use and enjoyment of the public.

If this course is adopted, it might concurrently be advisable to place in the charge of the Board of Education all recreational centers and facilities belonging to the city and now under the supervision of the Bureau of Recreation. Perhaps also the small isolated playgrounds and recreation centers presently under the control of the Park Commission might also be placed under the control of the Board of Education, leaving under the care and management of the proposed agency to be created by the state only the parks, parkways and boulevards.

Your Committee has not attempted to indicate which of these procedures it considers most advisable, as it believes that problem should be determined by the Legislature after full consideration of all of the factors involved.

Respectfully submitted,

Following is a comparison of a study made last week of a particular coal mining company, this company having operations both in West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The figures are taken from the company's books by our representative.

We have other figures but lack of time does not permit a summary of such figures at this particular time.

To start with, let us first read into the records the figures that prove that Pennsylvania has lost its supremacy in the bituminous coal mining industry.

Bituminous Coal Statistical Summaries, 1935-36

February 10, 1937

The figures show that in 1913 (Pennsylvania mined—173,781,000 tons
(West Virginia mined—71,254,000 tons
(Eastern Kentucky mined—11,099,000 tons
As against 1936 (Pennsylvania mined—108,527,000 tons
(West Virginia mined—117,485,000 tons
Eastern Kentucky mined—39,150,000 tons
Or a loss of (65,244,000 tons for Pennsylvania
And a gain of (46,231,000 tons for West Virginia and (28,051,000 tons for Kentucky

To carry this further, let us state that in 1913 Pennsylvania produced 36.32% of all the bituminous coal produced in the country; whereas in 1936 Pennsylvania produced only 25% of all the coal produced, or a loss of 11.32%.

In 1913, West Virginia produced 14.89% of all the coal produced; whereas in 1936, West Virginia produced 27.06% of all the coal produced, or an increase of 12.17%.

In 1913, Eastern Kentucky produced 2.32% of all the coal while in 1936 Eastern Kentucky produced 9.02% of all the coal, or an increase of 6.70% of the total.

This of course shows the shift in the coal mining operations as it affects these three states. Your Commission hopes to get additional information just as rapidly as it can in order that this present Legislature may know some of the interesting facts on this industry.

Let us now compare actual figures from an operating company whose main operations are in Cambria County, Penna.

This company is the Johnstown Coal and Coke Company operating in:

Greenbriar Co. W. Va.	Cambria Co., Pa.
50.6 Cents per acres Limited by law to 15 mills	.026 on 569,617 Tons—$3.00 per acre No limit	Taxes on coal lands
.0108 on 351,494 tons—$3.800.46	$14.832.62	Real Estate per ton
$40 or .0001-1/100c	$4,946.55 or .0087—87/100c	Capital Stock or Franchise
None	Depends on loans .008—8 mills	Corporate loan
None	Depends on income 10%—proposed cut to 7%	Corporate income
$1.27 per ton	$1.62 per ton	Labor costs
.0689 cents per ton	.0908 cents per ton	Workmen's Compensation
.0231 cents per ton	None	Sales Tax
1.3758	1.7505 or	Total on this and compensation
	.3747 greater cost	Differential with Sales Tax
	.0231	Differential without Sales Tax
	.3978 Sales Tax removed
2.52 Gross ton to New Port News	2.67 Gross ton to Perth Amboy or 15c per ton greater	Shipping

The present figures of .0908 per ton cost of compensation will become:

If new Compensation Act House Bill No. 99, increases cost 137% (Departmen' Claims), compensation will cost .2152 per ton.

If new compensation act increases cost 350% (Industries claim), compensation will cost .3178 per ton.

This does not include the corporate net income tax as this company showed no taxable income in Pennsylvania.

This also excludes the present amendment to the Capital Stock Tax as this Act is still in Committee in the Senate, but figures will be available on the result of this tax in the near future.

This Commission has only scratched the surface in its endeavor to set up a comparison of Pennsylvania industries and competing industries in other States. We intend to extend our activities into other industries and other States as soon as this Legislature makes it possible through an appropriation of necessary funds. This picture given to you tonight is only one company's operations. We expect to give this body more of these illustrations as the Commission gathers the facts and figures.

This particular Company was selected at random and its problems should be the problems of most companies in the same class and industry.

As a conclusion, let us look at this breakdown. The differential in producing a ton of coal by the same operator in Pennsylvania and West Virginia is:

.3747 with present existing laws and conditions
.4247 with rail rates included
.4891 with Department's figures on New Compensation Act. exclusive of proposed Occupational Disease Compensation Bill and rail rates
.6017 with Industries' figures on New Compensation Act. exclusive of rail rate and Occupational Compensation

As a further illustration, we have figures from four Pennsylvania companies as against four West Virginia companies:

Pennsylvania Companies
Production		Compensation and Taxes
	(Cambria County)
Company A—	570,000 tons	.1255 cents per ton
	Westmoreland County)
Company B—	190,000 tons	.1538 cents per ton
	(Cambria County)
Company C—	586,000 tons	.102 cents per ton compensation and real estate taxes only
	(Fayette County)
Company D—	166,000 tons	.1498 cents per ton
	West Virginia Companies
Production		Compensation and Taxes
	(Greenbriar County)
Company A—	350,000 tons	.1029 cents per ton (smokeless)
	(Powelton County)
Company B—	985,000 tons	.0706 cents per ton
	(Northern, W. Va.)
Company C—	1,243,000 tons	.0805 cents per ton
	(Huston County)
Company D—	850,000 tons	.068 cents per ton

The average tax per ton in West Virginia is approximately .0343 cents, of which .0231 cents per ton is sales tax. Removing this sales tax, leaves average tax per ton in West Virginia of .0112 per ton as against average of .0641 cents per ton in Pennsylvania. These figures exclude corporate loan and corporate net income taxes and the operating companies did not have these figures available. These additions will naturally increase the cost per ton in Pennsylvania; whereas there are no such taxes in West Virginia at the present time.

SECOND PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE TAX STUDY COMMISSION COVERING THE ANTHRACITE COAL INDUSTRY.

Senators:
John H. Dent, Chairman
Frederick T. Gelder
Israel Stiefel

Representatives:
Harry E. Trout, Vice-Chairman
Samuel A. Weiss, Secretary
James E. Lovett

Your Commission on comparative studies in the result of taxes on Pennsylvania industry has previously given a preliminary report on the conditions surrounding the Bituminous Mining Industry. We take this opportunity to read into the records a preliminary report covering the Anthracite Mining Industry. Your Commission spent three full days conferring with operators, miners and business men visiting colleries and breakers and touring the extensive workings in the three counties of Schuylkill, Luzerne and Lackawanna. We feel that this report may act as a guide when discussions pertaining to taxes and regulations come before this body.

The history of Anthracite is interesting and its importance was really discovered through an accident. This accident has led to one of the largest wealth producing industries in the whole world. It has truly been said that Anthracite is more exclusive than gold—gold having been found and mined in every section of the world; whereas, the world's largest pocket of Anthracite can only be found in Pennsylvania. There are approximately 12,000 square miles in the Anthracite bed. It has been used to heat approximately 6,000.000 homes. It supplies more railway tonnage annually than comes from some whole states and is responsible for the prosperity of at least a dozen railroads. There are approximately 600,000 people in these coal counties who are dependent upon the activities in the Anthracite fields.

This Commission will show the increase in taxes and we shall take various exhibitions to illustrate our findings.

One company called Company A, having holdings in five counties, shows a shocking increase in the local taxation. Let us take the figures: In 1908 the total assessed valuation was rated at $19,028,174. This is increased to $59,621,768. for the same land in 1936. The taxes paid in 1908 were $378.420. as compared to $2,274,841. in 1936. Those are the net taxes after taking advantage of all discounts and not including taxes paid by companies working out leases on the same property, remembering of course that practically all of this land is undeveloped, unmined land. The increase in valuation is in reality a tonnage tax on unmined coal. This Commission will in the near future break these figures down to show the amount of taxes paid per ton on unmined coal and how such taxes increase the year by year cost of mining Anthracite coal to the point that taxes amount to more than the actual value of the coal per ton. To further illustrate this picture, we will break down the taxes as paid by this Company.

In 1908. the taxes were broken down to show as compared to 1936:

Year	County	Road or Boro	School	Poor Board
1908	$103,428.00	$ 93,494.00	$ 163,345.00	$ 18,152.00
1936	472,462.00	287,038.00	1,281,686.00	233,584.00

We can insert at this time four illustrations to show that the method of computing land valuations in the Anthracite fields is not based on any given formula or standard scale:

1. Glentworth Tract—Blythe Township, Schuylkill County
   329 acres
   1913 valuation—$ 72,704.00 (virgin coal)
   1936 valuation— 177,625.00 One-half of coal already mined—no differential set between mined and unmined lands
2. Eagle Hill—Blythe Township, Schuylkill County
   325 acres
   1913 valuation—$ 71,320.00
   1936 valuation— 168,125.00—2/3 exhausted
   Worked continuously until 1929
3. Branch Township—Schuylkill County
   38 acres
   1913 valuation—$ 8,402.00
   1936 valuation— 24,206.00
4. Lindsay Coates Tract—Branch Township, Schuylkill County
   110 acres
   1913 valuation—$22,011.00 or $200.00 plus an acre
   1936 valuation— 61,820.00 or 562.00 plus an acre

Virgin coal estimate	10,747,000 tons
Mined out	2,367,000 tons
Coal left in ground in 1936	8,380,000 tons

This tends to show that the industry is in a peculiar position of paying on coal lands that are no longer coal lands, in some instances paying the same taxes on land that has been completely exhausted as on land that is as yet unmined.

The Anthracite industry has paid taxes ranging from $5,783,000. in 1916 to $10,899,000. in 1935 exclusive of the Pennsylvania tonnage tax and the federal income tax. This industry employs a total of 212,033 men in the mining operations. This work is a decrease from the figures of 1929 when there were 323,350 men employed. This decrease is partially due to a loss of markets caused by the competition from cheaper fuels and the inability of the Anthracite companies to market their coal at a lower price due to the fixed charges, rail rates, labor and taxes. It may also be interesting to note that this one company had a differential in 1913 taxes to 1935 taxes of approximately $1,896,000 in increases and yet mined 3,936,000 tons less in 1936 than was mined in 1913, which should demonstrate that the increased cost of coal is directly traceable to the increased real estate taxation, due consideration given to all other tax increases. It may be interesting at this time to carry this particular argument to the field of compensation costs per ton. This Commission, with its own statistician, removed records directly from the books of companies actively engaged in the mining of Anthracite and submits for consideration at this time figures on compensation from 1932 to 1936, showing that there is a stabilized cost per ton well established within the industry. From 1932 to 1936, the following figures were true:

Year	Total Tonnage	Mined Tonnage	Disbursements	Cost Per Gross Ton (Mined Tonnage)	Cost Per Gross Ton (All Ton)
1932	5,505,161	4,754,387	$721,887.66	.152	.131
1933	5,177,030	4,150,362	614,799.97	.148	.119
1934	7,112,243	5,829,215	597,286.94	.102	.084
1935	5,937,607	4,920,334	596,782.75*	.121	.10
1936	6,804,599	4,616,543	612,436.90	.111	.09

*Excluding Gilberton Colliery Accident of 1/21/35.

Following this further, we find that by comparing the provisions of the new proposed compensation act to the present compensation act, assuming the same case records as were true in 1936, we find that the figure of $612,436. for 1936 will have jumped to $2,690,486 for the same number of accidents under the same conditions, or an increase to this one particular company of $2,084,091. Those figures, reduced to a tonnage basis show an increase from $.11 per ton to $.49 per ton if Workmen's Compensation Act. House Bill No. 99, is passed with its present provisions.

There are many other angles to the tax and regulation question in the Anthracite Industry and your Commission will make a more comprehensive report in the immediate future. However, it is sufficient to say that this Commission, as a group, was very much impressed with the magnitude of the Anthracite Industry and the tendency already in practice in some fields to close the large operations in favor of subleasing to small individuals who can circumvent certain restrictions and established policies, thus operating cheaper and mine profitably on a small margin. Of course, we find that these small operators do not participate in the educational program of the industry which is trying to reestablish the supremacy of Anthracite in certain sections of our country. This gives them an additional advantage. It is interesting to note that these small operators, as a group state that the increased cost of compensation will wipe out all their trade advantages and will necessarily curtail and eventually eliminate their operations. We insert at this time the record of a small company, taken right from their books, showing for the month of March 1937 an operating loss of $7,456.75. This company states that any further increases will automatically close its operations, thus depriving the community of a payroll of $123,488.34 per month.

An interesting set of figures showing the importance of this industry indicates that for the years 1935 and 1936

the following earnings were true of the Pottsville region in the actual mining operations:

Year	Gross Earnings Before Deductions	Wages Paid in Cash
1935	$15,626,547.00	$14,559,753.00
1936	15,720,257.00	14,599,273.00

These figures prove that the industry has one of the largest payrolls in Pennsylvania and that payroll taxes are necessarily a greater burden than taxes based on profits and other forms of taxation.

Your Commission notes that the same is true of the Anthracite as has been said of the Bituminous coal industry—that it is a declining industry and unless this group of men work to an end that aid is given to this field of employment we may see the unemployment of many men in the near future.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey is to be complimented for his untiring efforts to stabilize the soft coal industry and thus help to place our basic industry back on a sound footing. However, his efforts will have little or no effect on the hard coal problem because of the fact that the industry is exclusively a Pennsylvania activity and therefore the direct responsibility of the State Government. We also wish to state that the Governor is to be commended for establishing a Commission to study this valuable asset to Pennsylvania and this Tax Study Commission wishes to offer its findings, services and cooperation to this Anthracite Commission in trying to solve an intricate and pertinent question.

We also acknowledge with thanks the cooperation of all the operators, the merchants, the tax commissioners and the officials of the United Mine Workers who gave so much of their time and information.

We also acknowledge gratefully the assistance given to the Commission by the Senators from the Anthracite region—Senator Dando of Schuylkill, Senator Howell of Lackawanna and Senators Sordoni and Mundy from Luzerne.

THIRD PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE TAX STUDY COMMISSION.

May 17, 1937.

It may be recalled that in the preamble of the Resolution under which this Commission was appointed, it was stated that there was uncertainty in the minds of the Legislature as to the accuracy of arguments against certain of our State taxes, which arguments were to the effect that those taxes were driving many industries out of Pennsylvania. The preamble then continued:

> Whereas The members of the Legislature desire to have presented to them facts and figuses gathered by persons who have no interest in the conclusion to be reached, so that they may know if Pennsylvania has taxed any industry more than any of the adjacent industrial States that enjoy equal economic advantages incident to the costs of the operation of any industry, such as nearness to markets, raw materials, cost of power and available labor; and
> Whereas The members of the Legislature desire to have presented to them a complete set-up of all the taxes imposed upon industry both by local governments and the State, and then to have similar figures compiled for the States enjoying similar economic advantages; Therefore be it Resolved, etc.

And from the several separate resolution paragraphs we quote:

> Resolved, That the said Joint Legislative Committee shall conduct an investigation to ascertain the number of industrial or mining concerns which have left our State, and the reason given therefore, and to ascertain the total tax burdens imposed by the States to which the said industrial or mining concerns have moved.

The First Preliminary Report of this Committee was made to the Senate on April 19, 1937, by Senator Dent, Chairman. It dealt with the bituminous coal industry in Pennsylvania and is now a part of the Legislative Journal.

The Second Preliminary Report likewise was made to the Senate on May 18, 1937, by Senator Dent, Chairman, and dealt with the anthracite coal industry of this State. That report also is a part of the Legislative Journal.

This Third Preliminary Report of the Committee, presented to the House by Representative Trout, Vice Chairman, will deal with certain branches of manufacturing industry, in certain sections of our State.

In presenting to the Legislature the important and significant facts here submitted, the Committee wishes to emphasize that it has been functioning but a very short time. What we set forth in this report, therefore, is little more than a scattered scratching of the surface of this very serious situation.

We do desire, however, to give the Legislature some convincing evidence that its Committee is industriously pursuing its task. And even at this early date we are in a position to say that the migration of industries from Pennsylvania has reached a point where all thoughtful citizens, and especially those entrusted with the making of our laws, well may pause to give serious consideration to the causes of those removals, and the painful consequences of this continued exodus of production, employment and payrolls from our State.

As a part of this present statement, we give the names, former addresses, number of workers that were employed, and the approximate payrolls, of 24 concerns in a single branch of manufacture that have moved out of Pennsylvania from a single city in this Commonwealth within the last two years.

We concede that this list is not complete, even for this single branch of enterprise, in only one city, for the period of only two years. But we do contend that it is deeply significant of a tragic trend which we of Pennsylvania cannot longer ignore, or accept without some drastic efforts to remove the causes and stop these losses which are draining employment and purchasing power away from our State.

The 24 plants which we are listing in this report furnished regular employment to about 6,720 workers, at an annual payroll of $9,828,000. That is the yearly amount of actual wages that has been lost by labor in that one city, through the removal of those concerns to other States. It is the sum, therefore, that has been taken from the purchasing power of that community and this State, and which consequently has been lost to a great variety of other enterprises, because those businesses found it to their advantage to leave this Commonwealth and locate elsewhere.

All of these concerns were manufacturers of hosiery in the City of Philadelphia. Among those that still remain, the largest are now shut down by labor conflicts. Your Committee, therefore, has no reason to doubt the considered statement of one who is in a position to know, and who says that "there isn't a hosiery manufacturer in that city who isn't anxious, and in most instances preparing, to get out of Pennsylvania."

Here is the partial list of departed industries which your Committee reports at this time—all of these liquidations or removals having occurred during the last two years:

Windsor Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Second and Westmoreland Streets, Philadelphia; moved in December, 1936, locating one part of plant in Tennessee and the other part in New York State. Employed 700 workers, at a weekly payroll of $21,000, or $1,092,000 a year.

Northwood Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Second Street and Wyoming Avenue, Philadelphia; moved during 1935 and 1936 to Charlotte, North Carolina. Employed 80 workers, practically all highly skilled, at a weekly payroll of $4,000, or $208,000 a year.

Thomas W. Buck, formerly located at Jasper and York Streets, Philadelphia; liquidated during 1935 and 1936. Employed 500 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $10,000, or $520,000 a year.

Gotham Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Second and Norris Streets, Philadelphia. Employed 1,000 workers at a weekly payroll of $30,000, or $1,560,000 a year.

Cadet Hosiery Mills, Second Street and Allegheny Avenue, Philadelphia; moved to Decatur, Alabama. Employed 300 at an approximate weekly payroll of $7,500, or $390,000 a year.

Rodgers Hosiery Company, formerly located on Price Street, Philadelphia; moved, during 1936 and 1937, to Athens, Georgia. Employed 200 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $5,000, or $260,000 a year.

Ellis Hosiery Mills, formerly located in Kensington, Philadelphia; sold at auction in 1936. Employed 70 workers, at a weekly payroll of $2,100, or $109,200 a year.

Thomas W. Brown's Glenn Mills, formerly located at Twenty-first and Lippincott Streets, Philadelphia. Employed 1,000 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $25,000, or $1,300,000 a year.

Warburton Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Kensington, Philadelphia. Liquidated, and equipment sold to concern in Pulaski, Virginia. Employed 100 workers, at a weekly payroll of $2,500, or $130,000 a year.

Granite Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Frankford Avenue and Ontario Streets, Philadelphia; liquidated in 1935 and 1936. Employed 1,200 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $30,000, or $1,560,000 a year.

The Bla-Shone Hosiery Mills, formerly located at Allegheny Avenue and Mascher Street, Philadelphia; sold out in 1936. Employed 200 workers, at a weekly payroll of $4,000, or $208,000 a year.

The Kaplan Mills, Hancock and Huntingdon Streets, Philadelphia; removed 25 machines to Salisbury, Maryland, in 1936, displacing 60 workers at a weekly payroll of $1,500, or $78,000 a year.

Owen Osborne, formerly located at Third and Somerset Streets, Philadelphia; removed to Gainesville, Georgia. Employed 100 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $3,000, or $156,000 a year.

The Marshall Field Mill, Torresdale, Philadelphia, removing to Fairfield, Virginia. Employed 150 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $6,000, or $312,000 a year.

Colonial Knitting Mills, Clearfield and B Streets, Philadelphia; continues to do its finishing there, but has removed the employment of 400 workers to Cape May Court House, New Jersey, and Mohnton, Pennsylvania. The lost payroll was $14,000 a week, or $728,000 a year.

Harron Hosiery Mill, formerly located at 3360 Frankford Avenue, Philadelphia; liquidated in 1935. Employed 75 workers, at a weekly payroll of $2,250, or $117,000 a year.

Real Art Hosiery Company, formerly located at 6020 Palmetto Street, Fox Chase, Philadelphia; moved, in January, 1937, to Georgia. Employed 60 workers, at a weekly payroll of $2,400, or $124,800 a year.

Purple Stripe Hosiery Company, formerly located on Hellerman Street, Frankford, Philadelphia, removed to Georgia in 1936. Employed 40 workers, at a weekly payroll of $1,200, or $72,400 a year.

A hosiery mill located in the Frankford section of Philadelphia (name withheld for obvious reasons) has it. new location, outside of Pennsylvania, ready for occupancy, and is prepared to move at the first opportunity. It employs 60 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $1,800, or $93,600 a year.

Another, in the Fox Chase section of Philadelphia, has its plant ready at Middletown, Delaware, and is ready to move. It employs 40 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $1,600. or $83,200 a year.

Nichels and Lauber, Broad Street near Huntingdon, Philadelphia, has transferred to a new branch, at Berlin. New Jersey, the employment of about 70 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $2,100, or $109,200 a year.

The Proper and McCallum mill, at 191 Roosevelt Boulevard, Philadelphia, is to be sold on May 12th. It employs about 200 workers, at an approximate weekly payroll of $8,000, or $416,000 a year.

The Quaker Hosiery Company, 22nd Street and Lehigh Avenue, Philadelphia, is starting a new plant in South Carolina, and the Cambria Silk Hosiery Company, of 176 W. Louden Street, Philadelphia, is transferring a part of its work to Georgia. It is estimated that these two transfers will displace about 130 workers, at a total annual wage of $200,600.

As already has been stated, the removal of those 24 plants represents 6,720 lost jobs, and the complete evaporation, therefore, of a total annual payroll amounting to $9,828,000. If this situation were confined to our largest city, it would be cause for deep concern; but unfortunately it is not confined to any one section, but prevails practically throughout our State.

For example, we regret to report that one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world, unable to continue business successfully in Pennsylvania, already has opened two new plants in Georgia and is building a third, and is said to contemplate the eventual complete break-up of its present huge plant in this State.

We report, also, that a hosiery mill in Quakertown, Pa., is about to liquidate, which will throw out of employment about 40 workers whose total annual wage has amounted to approximately $70,000.

Likewise, we call attention to the fact that the permanent closing of the Ajax Hosiery Company, at Phoenixville, eliminated about 630 jobs, and a payroll of $20,000 a week, or $1,040,000 a year.

It is definitely known that current State taxes caused a large third class city in Pennsylvania to lose a bona fide industrial prospect, which would have given employment to 1,500 workers, at an annual payroll of approximately $1,500,000.

A plant in Lehigh County, employing 2,000 workers, already has invested more than $1,000,000 in the erection of a new plant in another State.

Another Pennsylvania concern, originally employing 1,000 workers, is progressively transferring its activities out of this State.

Still another, employing 500, was preparing to expand its Pennsylvania plant. Two hundred additional jobs would have been created. Pennsylvania taxes caused a change of plans, and New Jersey got the 200 jobs.

All that has been set forth here cannot be regarded as more than a cursory glance at the Pennsylvania situation; yet these specific migrations, liquidations, transfers and closings, account for a total annual payroll, lost or displaced, amounting to more than $16,000,000 a year.

But, to say that Pennsylvania labor has thus lost $16,000,000 in wages, is to present only a part of the picture. It is $16,000,000 of purchasing power no longer circulating in our communities and State. It is $16,000,000 of purchasing power that is no longer maintaining jobs in many other lines. Actually, therefore, the loss to Pennsylvania is not $16,000,000, but several times that figure—plus a wholly additional double cost that the general public must bear. For the general public not only must support the jobless and their dependents, but the removal from Pennsylvania of those concerns which previously paid taxes here, leaves a lesser number of taxables to bear the increased load.

Hence, the very condition which has arisen at least in large part from placing excessive taxes upon production, operates to make more taxes necessary, and thereby drive more industries out of our State. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the situation is so critical as to demand a thorough investigation, and the application of the earliest possible remedies.

As an illustration of the manner in which Pennsylvania taxes upon business are now operating, in comparison with nearby industrial States, we submit the following letter of the Armstrong Cork Company, Lancaster, Pa., in response to an inquiry by a member of this Committee. The essence of the whole problem is in that line of figures which is captioned "Tax, per $1,000 of investment."

The letter sets forth the facts of the financial set-ups of the company's plants in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts. In New Jersey, the total of its States taxes amounts to 71 cents per $1,000 of investment.

In Massachusetts it is $3.48; and in New York $5.95. But in Pennsylvania it amounts to $18.12. In other words, on the investment basis, that company's taxes in Pennsylvania are three times the rate prevailing in New York; five times the rate in Massachusetts; and 25½ times the rate in New Jersey. The figures are all for the year 1936.

Here is the letter in full:

ARMSTRONG CORK COMPANY
LANCASTER, PA

April 24, 1937.

The Honorable Harry E. Trout,
Box 5, House of Representatives,
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.
Dear Mr. Trout:

In accordance with your telephone request of this week, I have had prepared comparative figures showing the Company's capital investment and State tax bills for 1936 in the various States in which we have factories. In Pennsylvania, of course, we have by far the largest investment and the greatest number of employees. The Pennsylvania State tax bill in relation to the State tax bills in other States speaks for itself:

	Pennsylvania	New Jersey	New York	Massachusetts
Capital Invested	$21,303,871.00	$3,486,775.00	$1,009,083.00	$385,810.00
Net Income	3,430,239.00	280,754.00	88,292.00	18,200.00
Volume of Business	26,589,877.00	2,177,211.00	682,464.00	141,667.00
Accrued State Taxes	386,000.00	2,500.00	6,000.00	1,300.00
Taxes, per $1,000 of Investment	18.12	.71	5.95	3.48

The above figures are all for the year 1936. Following is a list of the State taxes paid in the States mentioned:

Pennsylvania State Taxes

Corporate Income Tax	$265,000
Corporate Loan Tax	21,000
Capital Stock Tax	100,000
	$386,000

New Jersey State Taxes

Franchise Tax	$2,500

New York State Taxes

Franchise & Income Tax	$6,000

Massachusetts State Taxes

Excise Tax	$1,300

Taxes for unemployment relief were omitted because these are not for purposes of State revenue and the rates are practically the same in all of the States in question.

I hope that these figures will answer your inquiry adequately, but if there is anything further that you would like to know, please call on me.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. W. P.
President.

We also present here a statement prepared by the comptroller of Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., of Passaic, N. J., showing the Pennsylvania State taxes upon the U. S. Asbestos Division, located at Manheim, Pa., for the years 1932 to 1936, inclusive.

The comptroller points out that the total increased from $1,770.77 in 1933, to $39,798.72 in 1936, and that as between 1934 and 1936 the increase is 2,372%.

He also sets forth that whereas, in 1933, the total of Pennsylvania State taxes upon that plant amounted to $1.50 for each thousand dollars of net worth, the load in 1936 amounted to $22.60 for each thousand dollars of net worth. Also, that while the 1933 taxes amounted to $1 for each thousand dollars of net sales, the 1936 ratio was $9.40 of State taxes for each thousand dollars of net sales.

In an accompanying notation, he emphasizes the fact that "New Jersey has not any taxes comparable with the Corporation Net Income Tax or the Franchise Tax of Pennsylvania, the sum of which will cost the United States Asbestos Division, at Manheim, approximately $28,000 for 1936—these two taxes alone representing $15.91 per thousand dollars of net worth, and $6.62 per thousand dollars of net sales."

Following is the tax chart:

The two cases already cited give added significance to the startling disparity between the Pennsylvania State taxes upon the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, for 1936, as compared with the total of State taxes which that company, with the same financial set-up, would have paid for the same year in either of three adjoining States—New Jersey, Delaware or Ohio.

Disregarding the Social Security taxes, which would be the same in any State, the Curtis Publishing Company prepared for this Committee the following estimate of its 1936 tax bill to the State:

Capital Stock Tax, based on 1935 valuation of $90,000,000	$360,000
Additional Tax due to Cohen Act, if enacted	46,000
Total Penna. Capital Stock Tax	$406,000
State Income Tax—estimated	$310,000
Total Pennsylvania State Taxes, as reported to stockholders	$716,000

But as between the time that estimate was prepared, and its being forwarded to the Committee, the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue made an audit which indicates that those figures will have increased by $35,000, so that the total for 1936 will be $751,000.

That figure is almost precisely 100 times the total State taxes that would have been imposed upon the Curtis Publishing Company by New Jersey, to which State the company now is making ready to move.

Here is the company's statement of the taxes it would have paid for 1936 in that State:

NEW JERSEY—ESTIMATED ON BASIS OF 1936 CONDITION

Franchise Tax—Based on capital stock issued and outstanding up to 20,000 shares @ 3¢	$600
20,000 shares to 30,000 shares or 10,000 shares @ 2¢	200
30,000 shares to 40,000 shares or 10,000 shares @ 1¢	100
40,000 shares to 50,000 shares or 10,000 shares @ ½¢	50
2,650,000 shares @ ¼¢	6,625
Total Franchise Tax	$7,575
Income Tax	None
Business License Tax	Not Applicable
Sales Tax	None

In Delaware, the total would have been slightly less than New Jersey, or a trifle more, depending upon whether or not the concern would be subject to the Manufacturers

License Tax of that State. Here is the estimate for Delaware:

DELAWARE—ESTIMATED ON BASIS OF 1936 CONDITION

Franchise Tax—Based on authorized capital stock on first 250 shares	$5
251 shares to 1,000 shares	10
1,001 shares to 3,000 shares	20
3,001 shares to 5,000 shares	25
5,001 shares to 10,000 shares	50
Each additional 10,000 shares @ $25. 2,690,000 shares equals	6,725
Total Franchise Tax	$6,835
Income Tax	None
Manufacturers License Tax

This is a tax on the carrying on of the business of working raw materials into products of a different character, finished or unfinished; or of effecting any combination or composition of materials, the inherent nature of which is changed; or of finishing by hand or machinery, goods, wares or merchandise, or any article or material. If it is possible to subject Curtis to this tax then the yearly tax would be about $8,000.

In Ohio, where two of its principal competitors—the Crowell and the McCall publishing companies—are located, the total of State taxes upon the Curtis Publishing Company would be between 40 and 50 thousand dollars a year. In other words, as an official of the Curtis Company put it to a member of this Committee, "the company starts off with a competitive handicap of $700,000 a year as a consequence of being located in Pennsylvania."

Officers of that company have been perfectly candid, and, we believe, wholly truthful, with this Committee. They state frankly that at no time have they wished to move from Pennsylvania. The sentimental motive alone is a strong one in behalf of this State. Also, removal entails many legal bothers.

Nevertheless, the demand of the stockholders to get out of Pennsylvania cannot much longer be disregarded, unless substantial relief from the present tax burden is in sight; and the company has, as a consequence, not only bought the site for its new plant in Burlington County, N. J., but has the completed plans for its manufacturing and office buildings.

Here are the figures which tell the story of the Curtis Publishing Company's impending removal from Pennsylvania: Irrespective of Social Security taxes, it pays the State about $750,000 a year; and, to the City of Philadelphia, realty taxes upon its Independence Square and Washington Avenue plants, about $150,000 a year—a total of approximately $900,000.

The Independence Square building, while a magnificent monument, is 25 years old and no longer adapted to the needs of the concern. It can build adequately to its requirements for about a million and a half dollars in Burlington County, N. J. Its State taxes, as shown, would be about $7,500 a year, or approximately one one-hundredth of those imposed by Pennsylvania. The Dorrance Estate tax not only cleared Burlington County of public debt, but gave it a surplus. Its realty tax rate, therefore, is infinitesimal as compared with that of Philadelphia. In short, the company figures that the total cost of removal, constructing the new plant, etc., would be cancelled off in from two to three years out of the tax savings. And its transportation problems would be simplified by the change.

About 75% of that company's employees now live in Pennsylvania, and the other 25% in New Jersey. The company estimates that within from two to three years after its removal to New Jersey, those figures would be reversed. The number of its employees now living in Pennsylvania is 3,580, and to these Pennsylvania residents, for the year 1936, the company paid total wages of $6,128,000.

Another concern that has been driven to serious preparations for leaving this State—and which is in a position to do so without any great difficulty—is the Dixie-Vortex Company, of Easton, manufacturers of sanitary drinking cups.

This company was prevailed upon to move into Pennsylvania from New York about 15 years ago, because of conditions more favorable to industry in this State. It put up a plant which, added to from time to time, has cost about $1,000,000. It started with 200 employees, and now averages 750 the year around, with an annual payroll of approximately $1,000,000. And the important thing about this concern, from a community viewpoint, is that it generates between 10% and 20% of the entire purchasing power created in the Easton industrial area. Also, it was the only concern in that section which was able to maintain virtually fulltime employment throughout the entire period of the depression.

In 1934 the total of Pennsylvania State taxes paid by that company was $1,700. For 1936 the total was $65,000. Not only does that tax increase within a period of two years amount to more than 3,823%, but inasmuch as the concern only does about $450,000 of its business in this State, its Pennsylvania State taxes for the year 1936 amounted to 14 cents out of every dollar's worth of business it did in this State. More significant than that is the company's statement that only 10% of its profits were derived from the business done in Pennsylvania, and the 1936 State taxes amounted to 50% of that profit.

The Dixie-Vortex Company also has plants in Chicago and Toronto, Canada—the main offices being in the former city. It is known that the president of the concern has ordered the managers of the Easton plant to prepare to leave Pennsylvania.

In Delaware the total State tax upon that concern, as is, would have amounted to the infinitesimal sum of $125. But it is probable that the company will elect to move less than two miles—across the river into Phillipsburg, N. J.—to escape its terrifically increased Pennsylvania tax burden.

As has been said, the Easton plant cost approximately $1,000,000. Allowing for depreciation and decreased values, it is carried on the books of the company at $750,000. The management informs this Committee that if it has to dispose of this plant for only $250,000—one-quarter of its cost, and one-third of the value at which it is now carried on the books—the company nevertheless can, out of the tax saving to be had from moving across the river into New Jersey, completely amortize the cost of the New Jersey plant in from five to seven years.

We add one more case at this time. About 51 years ago the Nolde and Horst Company, manufacturers of full-fashioned women's and seamless men's hosiery, began business in a modest way in the City of Philadelphia. Shortly thereafter it removed to Reading, and later established an additional plant in the nearby community of Womelsdorf.

In those two plants it employs 2,500 workers, at an average annual payroll of approximately $2,000,000. Last year it built an additional plant in Tennessee and removed a part of its Pennsylvania equipment to the southern mill.

To avoid unnecessary trouble with its present employees, the Company is reluctant to reveal definitely its plans. But in view of the action already taken, and in the light of the data that has been set forth in this report, it is not difficult to guess the nature of those plans.

We have felt that these specific cases—produced within the short period that your Committee has been at work—should be presented to the Legislature at once, although they cannot be considered to comprise anything like a complete report.

REMARKS OF HON. JOHN H. DENT FROM THE FLOOR OF THE SENATE

As Chairman of the Tax Study Commission I view with regret the current misconstruction of its third preliminary report, dated May 24, on the part of individuals attempting to make political capital of the Chairman's findings.

Those findings admittedly were incomplete, and were submitted solely because of the imminent adjournment of the General Assembly. Since they have been subject to misconstruction, the Chairman deems it advisable to report immediately upon other phases of the problem, in order to correct any false impressions in the public mind, without waiting to complete its researches into those related questions having a direct bearing upon the general problem.

In its preliminary report the Chairman merely stated the fact that certain industries had moved from the State, and gave the reasons offered by those industries for such removal. The Commission had intended to reserve for future study and report those general trends in industrial activity which are responsible for the shifting of plant operations from State to State. We now deem it necessary to report upon these questions.

We have called attention to the fact that a number of textile establishments have left the State. In doing so we have merely stated a fact without discussing the many reasons involved.

It is a well known fact that the entire Northern textile industry has been steadily shifting to the South, in order to take advantage of lower wages and other inducements. The public press has reported from time to time that such inducements have included free plant construction from public funds, tax exemptions, misuse of Federal relief funds, and the use of convict labor in industry.

In this connection we present a statement given to this Commission by John Edelman, research director of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, as follows:

"The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has made extensive surveys of the entire economic background of the textile industry. In addition national research projects of the Works Progress Administration have covered this field thoroughly.

"We find that the question of State taxation has never been raised by textile operators as an impediment to successful operations in Pennsylvania. The problem was entirely one of wages and hours of labor. In Philadelphia, for instance, the wage cost per dozen pairs of hose was $2.00 to $2.35, while in the South there was a differential of from 50 cents to $1.00 a dozen. Add to this the tax and other inducements, and it is easy to see why they moved.

"The proof that State taxation was not responsible is seen in the fact that textile migration from Pennsylvania halted when NRA stabilized labor conditions throughout the country. In fact one company moved back. After NRA the migration started again, but has since been halted by several factors. One is that the plants which did move have learned that the Southern field is not all that the Chamber of Commerce prospectuses say it is, and the other is that the South's competitive advantage is being wiped out by the CIO drive in the southern area."

This statement by Mr. Edelman is supported by testimony presented to Congress on behalf of the Ellenbogen Textile Bill. Impartial students of the textile industry, among them Mr. George Taylor of the Industrial Research Department, University of Pennsylvania, have recognized and called attention to these factors.

Therefore, while this Chairman is deeply concerned with the effect of State taxation upon industry, its researches to date indicate clearly that taxation has played a relatively small part, if any, in textile migration.

We wish to call attention to the statement of the Armstrong Cork Company, of Lancaster, which was included in our third preliminary report. This statement was presented at its face value, without comment. Lest there be any misunderstanding, however, the Chairman is obliged to point out that the company's figures of comparison with other States are not comparable. Its corporate income tax, for instance, is high because its profits are high, and the corporate loan tax is not chargeable against operation, since it is paid by the borrower.

The Chairman also reports with regret that the Armstrong Cork Company does not come before us with clean hands, inasmuch as it has been cited by the Department of Revenue for failing for two years to make a report on its capital stock tax and corporate loans tax, with the result that the Department of Justice was required to take legal action. Its statement must be considered in the light of this fact.

Any study of industrial removals from Pennsylvania must take into account the record of foreign corporations withdrawing and domestic corporations dissolving. This record the Department of Revenue keeps. The record shows the number of corporations which have been removed from the files of the Department as a result of withdrawals, dissolutions, mergers, and the filing of out-of-existence affidavits. These totaled 6308 in 1934, 4594 in 1935, and 2961 in 1936. It is apparent that the number of corporations withdrawing, dissolving, merging and going out of business in Pennsylvania has been declining steadily and rapidly since 1934.

It is universally agreed that the chief index of industrial activity is employment. Employment statistics, prepared by the Department of Labor and Industry from the reports furnished by employers show steady employment increases through 1935, 1936, and the first months of 1937, as follows:

NUMBER OF WAGE-EARNERS EMPLOYED

January	753,000	775,000	820,000
February	765,000	771,000	831,000
March	772,000	787,000	852,000
April	768,000	793,000	.....
May	782,000	802,000	.....
June	787,000	805,000	.....
July	755,000	793,000	.....
August	748,000	793,000	.....
September	781,000	813,000	.....
October	803,000	843,000	.....
November	784,000	858,000	.....
December	805,000	857,000	.....

It is hardly necessary, in the light of these figures, to call attention to the fact that during the past few months many great corporations have expanded their facilities, at a cost of many millions of dollars, with the full intention of remaining in Pennsylvania despite labor and tax inducements offered by other States. The reason for this is simply that increased taxes have been infinitesimal in comparison with increased profits. For example, the Jones and Laughlin Steel Company has spent $100,000,000 for new plant facilities in the Pittsburgh district, and the Carnegie Illinois Steel Company, only the other day, broke ground for a $60,000,000 rolling mill.

I also consider it advisable to correct a mis-statement in the report, in which it was said that the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia had obtained a site in Burlington County, New Jersey, and had made plans to move its plant there. The Curtis Publishing Company has not purchased a site in Burlington County, New Jersey. It has not made any plans to move its plant to New Jersey. In this case the Chairman acted in good faith upon false information, which it believed to be true.

The Chairman submits this additional data, not because it is definitive or complete, but solely to clarify the situation resulting from unwarranted conclusions drawn by many persons from the Chairman's third preliminary report.

MINORITY REPORT OF THE TAX STUDY COMMISSION

On Monday, May 24th 1937, the Third Preliminary Report was filed by this Commission which, from a cursory examination of said Report, evidenced the fact that high taxes were driving plants and industries out of the State of Pennsylvania. The Report stated:

"The Committee wishes to emphasize the fact that it has been functioning but a very short time. But even at this early date we are in a position to say that the migration of industries from Pennsylvania has reached a point where all thoughtful citizens, and especially those entrusted with the making of our laws, well may pause to give serious consideration to the causes of these removals, and the painful consequences of this continued exodus of production, employment and payrolls from our State.

"We give the names, former addresses, number of workers that were employed and the approximate payrolls of twenty-four concerns in a single branch of manufacture that have moved out of Pennsylvania from a single city within the last two years."

As far as my membership in the Commission is concerned, I have not at any time since my appointment to this Commission made any investigation of the above facts due to stressing and important legislative business, and only had opportunity to make a cursory examination of the Report submitted to me by the Hon. Harry E. Trout, my colleague and member of the Commission from Lancaster.

I must disagree with the Majority Report since I have had an opportunity to make a somewhat hasty investigation of some of the details concerning the taxes on industries within the last several years as compared with prior years. The Report filed by the Commission on May 24th, 1937, evidences the fact that taxes have greatly increased with the majority of the industries, but let me make my position clear. The facts clearly disclose that the income of the majority of the corporations in Pennsylvania have also increased, from 55% in 1930 to 500% in 1936, from 1929 at the beginning of the Depression up to the income reports filed by these same manufacturing concerns at the end of 1936. It is certainly evident that with increased income, taxes should correspondingly increase.

We must further bear in mind that the State of Pennsylvania was confronted with the great emergency of thousands in this Commonwealth being without work and on Relief, and it became the duty of industry and all of us as loyal Americans to contribute our share towards this Relief load. The Depression was one of the worst and longest in the Nation's history between the period from 1929 to 1936, and it either meant the imposition of taxes to help a great American people survive, or it meant internal revolution with a total disrespect for law and order.

From a cursory examination of a Report submitted to me by one of the State Departments, the manufacturers of hosiery in Philadelphia have always had industrial strife within their plants due to the fact that they have maintained sweat-shop labor conditions, and paid grossly inadequate wages. Under this Democratic Administration and the laws enacted by this Legislature, these same hosiery manufacturers have been compelled to comply with better working conditions for their employees, decent working hours, and decent wages. Their principal complaints have been over such regulations, although it is apparent from reports submitted by them at the end of the business year on December 31, 1936, that their income far exceeded those of Depression years. There is little doubt in my mind that the hosiery manufacturers of the City of Philadelphia, and within the County, are preparing to get out of Pennsylvania.

If Pennsylvania taxes are driving industries out of this Commonwealth, can anyone conceive existing industries spending millions of dollars for new plants or improvements in this Commonwealth? Yet, a week ago, William Irvin, President of the U. S. Steel Corporation, broke ground in Camden, Pennsylvania—within a stone's throw of my home in Glassport—for the construction of a new $60,000,000.00 plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation. In addition, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation is spending over $100,000,000.00 in modernizing their plants in this Commonwealth; the Copperweld Steel Company of my community, the National Tube Company of McKeesport and other industries are also spending millions in improving and modernizing their plants. Can the Members of this Commission or the Membership of this House conceive real progressive industrial leaders like William Irvin of the U. S. Steel Corporation, or the leaders of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation gamble the spending of over $160,000,000.00 in this Commonwealth if our Pennsylvania taxes are discriminatory, burdensome and destructive? The foregoing actual evidence of construction and improvement disproves any such conclusions. (Over $10,000,000.00 was spent by the U. S. Steel Corporation last year in the construction of a new plant in Homestead, Penna.)

As a Member of this Commission, I desire to be extremely fair, and when we talk about increased taxes, we must at the same time publish definite reports showing that the income over this same period has greatly increased; and in addition, that working conditions for the employees have been made much better. I believe that this Commission should not file any more preliminary reports until a very careful personal investigation is made of industries and taxes on industries in Pennsylvania as compared with taxes on industries in our neighboring states, at the same time comparing the income of industries in this State as compared with the income in neighboring states; then, after careful digest of these facts, to file a Report that expresses the facts.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE ANTHRACITE COAL INDUSTRY COMMISSION

May 15, 1937.

Hon. George H. Earle,
Governor of Pennsylvania,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sir:

I beg leave to hand you herewith the Ad Interim Report of the Anthracite Coal Industry Commission.

The Report consists of three parts, as follows:

(1) Report of Chairman W. Jett Lauck and Commissioner James W. Angell.

This Report is divided into two main sections.

As to the problem of illegal mining, it holds that the provision of sufficient additional employment in the collieries to absorb a substantial proportion of the men now engaged in illegal mining is essential to put a permanent stop to illegal mining itself; and that in view of the present attitude of the operators, the duty devolves upon the Commonwealth of adopting a constructive program to provide such additional employment.

A specific and detailed recommendation is made for establishing such a program. It is a proposal to create a Commonwealth-owned corporation; financed primarily by the sale of its own corporate bonds, and free from political influences; this corporation being authorized to lease or acquire lands and collieries and to operate the same in the bootleg areas. When sufficient employment opportunities have thus been created to employ about three thousand men, it is further recommended that the Governor shall issue a proclamation, and take proper measures to end illegal mining. The Report holds that under such a policy illegal mining will disappear and danger of disorder and bloodshed will be avoided.

Since the state-owned corporation would produce a tonnage not greater than that now produced and sold by the so-called bootleg industry, it is held that such procedure would not constitute unfair competition by the Commonwealth against the anthracite industry, but would be in fact an enlightened relief project. For this reason also, and in the light of the further fact that the operators consider the continuance of illegal mining a menace to the entire industry, the Report also recommends the placing of a small tonnage tax on anthracite produced for commercial purpose for a period of two years, the proceeds to be used by the Commonwealth in purchasing the entire stock of the corporation and thus to provide the corporation with initial capital.

In the second place this Report holds that the permanent solution of illegal mining is dependent on a general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry—a rehabilitation also judged necessary to the permanent prosperity of the anthracite industry and anthracite mining communities. It further holds that to accomplish this end some form of constructive action by the Commonwealth or the federal government, or both, is essential. In this connection it reviews plans now being considered and states that final recommendations as to a permanent constructive policy will be made at a later date.

(2) Report of Commissioners Harrison Hoblitzelle and W. R. Lynett:

This report disagrees fundamentally with the foregoing report both as to the solution of the illegal bootleg mining problem and as to the general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry. With respect to the latter problem, it holds that action by the Commonwealth is unnecessary. It also holds that if such action were in fact attempted, it would be unsuccessful, and would subject the Commonwealth and the anthracite industry to large and indefensible financial losses. It recommends only the application of a modified Guffey Act to the anthracite industry.

As to the solution of illegal mining, the report holds that the provision of additional direct and work relief and the like, and the re-validation of the ordinary legal processes and compulsions will suffice to solve the problem in a peaceful way.

(3) Report of Commissioner Morris L. Ernst.

This report consists of an elaborate and extensive review accompanied by critical comments and general recommendations.

As to a constructive policy it states:

> "The problem of bootlegging is interwoven with that of the industry as a whole. Specific attention has been accorded the bootleg situation; but the more intensely it is studied, the clearer it becomes that the bootleg problem is merely a phase or symptom of a disease; it may be alleviated by piecemeal measures, but it or some similar trouble is likely to recur so long as the industry as a whole is not restored to health. On the central job—reform of the industry—shortness of time prevents the submission of any single recommendation or the preparation of legislation incorporating such recommendation. I am in substantial agreement with Mr. Lauck and Mr. Angell as to certain lines of inquiry that may prove profitable and with their ultimate objectives. I differ from them however in various important details which may become most important in the attainment of the results sought. Moreover I have not been able to examine fully their legislative proposal, tax program, fiscal items, etc. relating to the corporate entity referred to in their report."

With sincere regret that the Commission was unable to reach a more unified series of recommendations, but trusting that the results of our investigations and conclusions to date may be of real assistance to you, I am,

Sincerely yours,

W. JETT LAUCK

PART I. PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF THE COMMISSION'S WORK TO DATE

I. Instructions of the General Assembly and the Governor

Under Section 2 of the Act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved February 16, 1937, creating the Anthracite Coal Industry Commission (House of Representatives No. 66, Session of 1937), it was declared to be the duty of the Commission

> "to make a careful and thorough study and investigation of the economic and social conditions in the antracite coal region of this Commonwealth, the causes underlying the present dislocation of the anthracite coal mining industry, the extent of illegal mining and the causes therefor, the methods and means by which the existing economic and social conditions in said district may be alleviated or remedied and such other matters and affairs as may be deemed pertinent by the Commission in order to carry into effect the intent of this act to secure reliable and accurate facts concerning actual conditions with respect to the anthracite coal region and the coal mining industry therein."

And further, under Section 4 of the Same Act, it was declared that

> "The Commission shall make a report of its findings and recommendations to the Governor before the adjournment of the General Assembly of one thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven containing such drafts of legislation if any as the Commission deems necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act."

When the present Commission was appointed by the Governor under this Act, the Governor and the Commission were agreed that because of the shortness of the remaining time, the Commission could not complete its task before the adjournment of the General Assembly. It was agreed and understood, in consequence, that the Commission should submit such recommendations as it could agree upon before the adjournment of the General Assembly; and that it should complete its investigations and draft legislation as rapidly as possible thereafter.

II. Scope of the Commission's Work

The Commission has held extended private hearings with representatives of all the groups directly involved, has held public hearings throughout the regions chiefly affected by illegal mining, has collected and begun to study carefully large quantities of documentary material, and has now in process a complete survey and census of illegal mining operations. It has also inaugurated original studies of various other special problems of the anthracite industry. The present ad interim report is based on the above sources of information and on the Commission's conclusions therefrom. The Commission has not as yet had time to investigate the problem of surface subsidence.

III. General Character of the Commission's Ad Interim Report

A profound cleavage of opinion has arisen within the membership of the Commission, both with respect to the treatment of the bootleg problem and with respect to the general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry as a whole. The differences of opinion are so deep, so tenaciously and honestly held, that it has not been possible to develop even a semblance of unanimity on more than a few of the larger problems and alternative policies which confront the Commission. With great regret that this should be the case, the Commission therefore finds itself unable to submit a unanimous report.

IV. Summary of the Report by W. Jett Lauck and James W. Angell

The report that now follows has been prepared by W. Jett Lauck, Chairman, and James W. Angell. A separate report by Morris L. Ernst, and another separate report by Harrison Hoblitzelle and W. R. Lynett, are attached hereto and form an integral part of the Commission's ad interim report.

On the problem of illegal mining, for reasons given below, we believe that the provision of sufficient additional employment in the collieries to absorb a substantial proportion of the men now engaged in illegal mining is essential to put a permanent stop to illegal mining itself; and that in view of the present attitude of the operators, action of some sort by the Commonwealth must be resorted to, to provide such additional employment. A specific plan for such action will be presented below. We do not believe that any other measures which are both within the financial capacity of the Commonwealth, and which will command public support, are likely to prove successful.

We also believe that the permanent termination of illegal mining is likewise dependent on a general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry itself,—a rehabilitation also judged highly desirable on other grounds,—and believe that to accomplish this end some form of action by the Commonwealth is again essential. The plans now being considered will be outlined below.

PART II. ILLEGAL MINING

I. The Facts

The immediate cause for the creation of the present Commission is the development of extensive bootlegging of anthracite, or the mining and sale of stolen coal, in the Schuylkill fields since 1932. The Commission now has under way an exhaustive investigation of bootlegging, which it believes will yield accurate details. The general character of the bootleg situation, however, is agreed to by all interested parties.

It is believed that between 12 thousand and 14 thousand men are now more or less regularly engaged during the winter months in mining coal illegally. Of these a substantial proportion, probably more than half, were formerly employed in legitimate mining. In addition, about 6 thousand men and boys are engaged in breaking the stolen coal, in trucking it, and in distributing it to markets as far away as Baltimore and southern New England. The quantity sold in 1935 and 1936 has been estimated at around 4 million tons a year, with a sales value of above $30 million a year. This tonnage is equal to roughly 8% of the present output of the legal mines, and has undeniably cut heavily into the markets of the legal mines themselves. Further facts as to the average age, nationality, previous employment, etc. of the illegal miners, as indicated by preliminary results of the Commission's census, are given in an Appendix to the Commission's Ad Interim Report.

The bootleg coal is produced under conditions substantially less safe than those prevailing in the legal mines, and with a substantially higher proportion of accidents. In a good many cases the bootleg mining has imperilled adjacent legal mines, or has made adjacent coal unworkable, or has endangered surface structures and roads. The bootleggers pay no royalties, no property taxes, and make no provision for compensation in case of accident.

There is no dispute on the legal standing of bootlegging. The bootleg miners are trespassers and are stealing property, and the bootleg breakers and truckers are handling stolen goods. It is alleged in defense, however, that the right of human beings to live is superior to legal property rights strictly construed. This defense is valid in principle, but does not apply in full to the present circumstances. It is true, however, that government relief, W.P.A. and similar payments have frequently been very low on a per capita basis, and often wholly inadequate to support what the miner regards as a minimum decent standard of living. It is also obvious that receiving relief in return for doing nothing must be distasteful to any self-respecting able-bodied man. Nor is employment in other local industries, which are relatively few and small, available in sufficient volume to absorb more than a small fraction of the idle miners. It is therefore not impossible to understand how men who are otherwise honest and law-abiding citizens, but who found themselves thrown out of work through no fault of their own, came to resort to bootleg mining. The mining and sale of stolen coal is merely one acute symptom among many of a depressed condition throughout the whole anthracite industry, which has been cumulative since 1926.

Efforts to stop bootlegging in the Schuylkill fields by resort to the ordinary legal processes have this far been almost wholly unsuccessful, except where surface buildings and roads or the operations of adjacent legal mines were in immediate danger. This breakdown of the legal process is explained both by the fact that a majority of the communities affected and even the local judiciary have apparently been sympathetic to the bootleggers, and by the real threat of mass violence in certain cases.

II. Proposals to End Illegal Mining

It is obvious that bootlegging cannot be allowed to continue indefinitely. Such a policy will impose still larger losses on the legal owners and operators, will not help the bootleg miners, and will imperil the whole structure of law and order in the regions affected. The bootleg situation will not cure itself. Nor does it seem probable that the mere working-out of easily accessible coal will put an end to illegal mining in the near future.

The Commission has therefore considered a wide range of proposals for the solution of the bootleg problem, and has itself conducted extensive negotiations in an attempt to find a basis for action. The principal channels which it has explored are indicated in the following paragraphs.

1. Voluntary action by the operators. The Commission has exhausted every effort to secure the cooperation of the operators in dealing with the bootleg problem. The Commission was agreed that if the operators would undertake in advance to employ even a few thousand additional men in the bootleg regions for a period of a year, the Commission would then recommend immediate closing of the bootleg holes by the Commonwealth. The Commission believed that recapture of the markets now held by bootleg coal would enable the operators to come out without substantial financial loss to themselves from giving this increased employment; and that the gesture of voluntary re-employment would so strongly arouse favorable public opinion in the bootleg regions that the bootleg holes would be closed without precipitating serious disorder or bloodshed.

The operators as a whole have been unwilling to accept the Commission's suggestion, or to advance any alternative plan of their own which would accomplish a similar result. They allege grave doubt as to the extent to which they can recapture the markets now held by bootleg coal, even if bootlegging is completely stopped. This view, however, does not seem to be fully in accord with the operators' own statements that the bootleggers have developed no new markets. The operators also point out the undisputed fact that the number of men in the bootleg region who were formerly employed in legal mines, but who are not now engaged in bootlegging, is at lease twice as great as the number of such miners who are engaged in bootlegging; and they assert that to draw off the present bootleggers into legal-mine employment is merely to invite other unemployed miners to come into the bootleg holes thus vacated. Since the Commission's proposal was predicated on the closing of the bootleg holes by the Commonwealth, this latter argument is not wholly convincing. The majority of the Commission also feels that it would definitely be to the operators' own financial advantage to accept some such proposal as the Commission has made to them. Their real choice is not between making profits in their present situation and risking small losses under the Commission's proposal. It is between risking small and probably temporary losses under the Commission's proposal, and taking large assured losses from the further theft of coal and the further demoralization of their nearer markets by bootleg sales.

2. The operators' own program. The operators' own program is, in brief, as follows: (1) The Commonwealth shall proclaim that on and after a specified date bootlegging shall cease, and where necessary shall take action to secure enforcement; (2) A complete census of bootleggers shall be taken; (3) Relief shall be provided to those bootleggers who come originally from the anthracite regions, and especially to those previously employed in the anthracite industry, as determined by the census; (4) The operators will employ additional men as markets expand or as present employees drop out, without discrimination because of former bootlegging activities.

3. Objections to this program. The signers of the present report are completely convinced that in the present factual situation, these measures alone will be wholly inadequate to end bootlegging without violence. The Federal Government is now reducing its aggregate outlays for relief and re-employment, not increasing them, while the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is not in position to take over the whole burden itself except at great sacrifice. The Commonwealth would probably also incur an enormous additional financial burden for the continued maintenance of armed forces in the present bootleg areas, to keep the bootleg holes from being reopened. The combined Commonwealth and Federal outlays for relief and works projects in Schuylkill and Northumberland Counties alone, for 1936, were greater than the comparable combined outlays for the entire State of Maine, which has twice the population, in 1936. Moreover, any intelligent program must take account both of the creditable reluctance of the mining population to accept relief or "made work" except when the alternative is starvation, and their reluctance or inability to move to other parts of the country.

We are therefore convinced that if all that is done is to offer the present bootleggers relief and the like, in amounts that must inevitably be inadequate, and if the bootleg holes are thereafter forcefully closed by the Commonwealth, the bootleg miners will not be persuaded of the justice of the action; public opinion in the bootleg regions will remain hostile; and the exercise of overt force in closing the bootleg holes is then likely to be the signal for violence and disorder.

4. Equalization and spreading of work. It has also been urged to the Commission that most of the present bootleggers could be absorbed by spreading working time thinner among a larger number of workers, in the collieries now operating. This step is wholly impractical at present. It would put the whole burden on the men now employed, and would reduce working time per man, in the southern regions, to hardly two days per week. It would thus give less than subsistence-level earnings to all.

5. The development of important new industries in the anthracite region is wholly improbable in the near future.

6. Large-scale emigration from the anthracite regions to other parts of the country, though most desirable, is also improbable in the near future. Employment opportunities elsewhere for which the miners are fitted are scarce; and the miner's reluctance to leave his familiar hills under any circumstances is notorious.

7. Recommendation: To increase colliery employment. We therefore believe that the only workable solution for the bootleg problem lies in the provision of a substantial volume of additional employment in the collieries, in the regions chiefly affected by bootlegging. We are convinced that employing between 5 thousand and 7 thousand additional men, at a number of days per year to be not less than the number worked by the average of the industry, will swing public opinion in the regions involved, and will thus make it possible for the Commonwealth to close the bootleg holes without serious disturbance.

We therefore recommend the following steps.

(a) The Commonwealth shall create a new Corporation controlled by the Commonwealth. The new Corporation shall obtain operating control of enough collieries (say six to twelve) in selected regions where illegal mining is now especially concentrated to give employment to at least 5 thousand to 7 thousand men, at a number of days per year not less than the average worked by other collieries in Southern and Western Middle fields while the new collieries are in operation. The annual output of the new Corporation will thus be roughly between 2 million and 3 million tons a year at the outset.

(b) The Corporation shall sell its product under fair competitive conditions in the market, and shall pay particular attention to the development of direct mine-to-consumer deliveries by truck, so far as economical. These sales will not constitute unfair competition with the present operating companies, since the tonnage contemplated is less than those sales, by illegal miners, which the present companies have been unwilling to attempt to recapture at the price of themselves assuring a limited amount of colliery re-employment in advance of such recapture.

(c) The new Corporation shall hire employees on the basis of seniority and length of previous employment by the present operating companies, so far as such employees are not now suffering from physical disability. No discrimination shall be made because of prior connection with illegal mining activities or present receipt of relief.

(d) The new Corporation shall pay the wage scales, and make the agreements with labor on all other aspects of work, which prevail in the other active collieries in the surrounding regions. It shall also pay taxes like any private operator.

(e) The new Corporation shall acquire operating control of the collieries in the following manner:

(i) The new Corporation shall make an immediate survey of the possibilities and costs, in the bootleg areas, of leasing or otherwise requiring collieries now active, in which employment can be materially increased; of leasing or otherwise acquiring collieries recently closed down which can be reopened at little additional cost; of leasing or otherwise acquiring other collieries which have been closed for some time and which can be reopened only after substantial outlays; and of providing necessary additional preparation plants.

(ii) On the basis of this survey the new Corporation shall lease or otherwise acquire collieries in appropriate parts of the bootleg areas, as prescribed under paragraph (a) above. It is believed that the advantages to the present owners, both in terms of royalty receipts and in terms of relief from present tax burdens, will be so great as to induce acceptance of any reasonable offer to lease from the new Corporation. But the Corporation should also be given authority to buy collieries and coal lands outright, or to acquire them by condemnation proceedings, if that becomes necessary to achieve the re-employment objectives of the Corporation. It shall also have power to build any necessary additional preparation plants.

(iii) Because bootlegging is especially prevalent in areas where collieries have been closed for some time and are now flooded, it is believed that many of the collieries to be leased or otherwise acquired by the Corporation can be reopened only with a substantial initial outlay. (See the preliminary rough estimate in an appendix to the present report, which is included for purely illustrative purposes, for certain collieries of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co. alone).

(f) The Corporation shall be financed as follows:

(i) The Corporation shall be authorized to issue and sell its own bonds in an amount not to exceed say $20 million. The bonds shall be secured against all revenues and other assets of the Corporation. Provision shall be made for their amortization according to their maturities. It is believed that because of the tremendous economic and other interests which the communities in the bootleg areas have in the reopening of collieries, most or all of these bonds can be sold locally, without resort to the open market. The bonds will be protected not only by the Corporation's rights in coal lands, collieries and marketable coal produced, but also by the additional revenues and other assets provided below.

(ii) The Commonwealth shall immediately impose new taxation in an amount sufficient to yield at least $2.5 millions a year, and preferably $3.5 millions a year, for a period of two years or more; shall assign the proceeds of such taxes to the purposes of the corporation; and in order to provide an initial capital for the Corporation at once, shall issue and sell discountable tax warrants a year in advance against such proceeds. From the fiscal point of view the Corporation is to be regarded as a device for establishing and administering a combined Commonwealth works project and relief fund; and the payments from the Commonwealth to the Corporation are to be regarded as a means for providing part of the financing for such combined project and fund.

(iii) The constituted Commonwealth authorities of course will have to determine the sources from which the tax proceeds referred to above are to come. We should like to suggest, however, the possible appropriateness of securing a part of the funds from a small tonnage tax, say 5 cents a ton, on the production of the other present anthracite operators. These operators will benefit greatly from the termination of illegal mining by the Commonwealth action, which in later paragraphs we propose shall be undertaken when the Corporation comes into operation. They will benefit both by the stopping of thefts of coal from some of them, and—not less important—by the stopping of that unfair competition price cutting, market disorganization and outright loss of market themselves, which the sale of bootleg coal is now imposing on nearly all of them. In the light of these large and real benefits, we believe that the burden of the tonnage tax here suggested will be almost negligibly small.

(iv) We believe that the above proposals will impose a far smaller financial burden on the Commonwealth than the burden of providing direct relief over a period of several years for the number of men otherwise idle who will be employed by the new Corporation. Relief for 7,000 men at $60.50 a month comes to $5 millions a year. The present proposals place a much smaller annual burden than this on the Commonwealth's general finances, particularly if a part of the revenues are obtained from a tonnage tax on the present operators.

(g) The Corporation shall be set up and administered by a disinterested Board of Directors who shall be adequately compensate and who shall give full time to its work.

(h) A suggested draft of legislation is appended to the present report.

(i) It will take time, perhaps a year or more, to recondition enough collieries to give employment to the full quota of 5 thousand to 7 thousand men. When it is definitely known that by a certain date employment opportunities in these collieries will be available for at least 3 thousand men, under the above conditions, but not before, the Governor shall issue a Proclamation pointing out these employment opportunities, and declaring that on and after that date illegal mining shall cease. Additional provisions must also be made for direct and work relief for those who are in genuine need and who are now engaged in bootlegging, but who are not helped by the colliery re-employment.

We believe that this procedure will commend itself universally to public opinion in the regions involved, as being fair and effective; that the Proclamation will be accepted and peacefully obeyed by the great majority of the present bootleg miners; that forceful ejection and forceful closing of the bootleg holes will be required only in a small minority of cases; and that any extensive violence and bloodshed will be avoided.

In proposing the above plan we wish to make certain things clear. First, if the Commonwealth is to open collieries in the bootleg regions, the quid pro quo must be the closing of all the bootleg holes. This must be clearly understood in the communities involved. Second, we are convinced that bootleg mining is simply an acute symptom of the profound distress of nearly the whole anthracite industry. Third, therefore, it follows that measures aimed only at bootlegging are likely to have only a limited and temporary effectiveness if not coupled with measures of wider scope and purpose. Fourth, we hence propose the above plan not for its own sake and not as an end in itself, but only as a transitional measure pending the adoption of other steps looking to a more fundamental rehabilitation, and an ultimate expansion, of the anthracite industry in the aggregate. Possible steps of this character are examined below.

PART III. THE REHABILITATION AND EXPANSION OF THE ANTHRACITE INDUSTRY

I. The Acute Depression in the Anthracite Industry Today.

For many decades the Pennsylvania anthracite industry was one of the richest and most lucrative monopolies in the United States. There was no other important known supply of anthracite on this continent; anthracite was unquestionably the best and most convenient fuel for domestic heating; and profits, dividends and royalties swelled in an ever-increasing golden flood. The fact that the largest part of the real control of the anthracite lands and operations lay in the hands of the railroad interests and their bankers, and that these frequently predatory groups channeled most of the anthracite profits into their own coffers, made no difference; anthracite was still a golden monopoly.

In the last ten years all that has changed. Pennsylvania still possesses the great bulk of all American anthracite. But anthracite's monopoly of the domestic fuel market has gone, perhaps forever. It is no longer unquestionably the best domestic fuel, and it no longer dominates the domestic fuel market. Fuel oil, coke, bituminous coal, natural gas and even electricity have all made tremendous inroads on anthracite's former markets, and while their sales have been increasing steadily, the sales of anthracite have dropped disastrously. These facts are available for all to read. But the operators themselves, the distributors, the railroads, labor, and the various local tax authorities have all blindly persisted in treating Pennsylvania anthracite as though it were still a rich monopoly. This utterly erroneous view is responsible for most of the profound distress in which the anthracite industry now finds itself. Instead of trying to push anthracite in competition with other fuels, until recently most of the parties concerned have merely tried to squeeze every penny they could out of the ultimate anthracite consumer. It is past high time that the industry itself, the railroads and people of Pennsylvania woke up to the real situation.

The peak in anthracite production was reached during the war, at roughly 100 million gross tons a year. The beginning of the real decline came after the disastrous strike of 1925-1926. From 1926 to 1934 the trends of production, shipments and realizations from sales were all persistently and sharply downward. In 1934 there was some recovery, but 1935 and 1936 were again below 1934, contrary to the movement of economic activity in most parts of the country. Production in 1936, at under 52 million net tons, was only 75% of production in 1929; 66% of production in 1926, ten years before; only 58% of the peak production of 1917; and was hardly equal to the output of forty years before.

These simple figures themselves tell most of the story. The steady shrinkage in output has inevitably been accompanied by large operating losses to the aggregate of the companies since 1932, by declining capital values and passed dividends, and recently by application of the largest company in the industry for relief under Section 77b of the Federal Bankruptcy Act. That other companies will likewise join the unhappy procession to the bankruptcy courts, unless some quick and drastic change takes place, seems almost inevitable. In 1935, on their own showing, the working capital of companies producing 90 to 95% of the total output was only $9 millions. This is a decline from $70 millions in 1929, and from $111 millions in 1926. In 1932-1935, these companies lost a total of $31 millions, and lost over $10 millions in 1935 alone. Similarly many of the anthracite railroads, which for decades took the richest part of the anthracite monopoly's profits in the form of high freight rates, have suffered declining tonnage, operating losses and the threat of even more serious troubles.

The shrinkage in anthracite output has also been accompanied by the appearance of the so-called unfair competitive practices, and the complete collapse of that mutual trust and feeling of unity among the operators, which can alone enable them to deal effectively with the problems of the industry as a whole.

Finally, the shrinkage in output has been accompanied by the severe and protracted unemployment which is the immediate cause of bootlegging. The industry employed roughly 152,000 men in 1929, but employed only some 99,500 in 1936; and in 1936 these latter miners did not average much over 3½ days of work per week. The industry has also obviously been utterly unable to absorb the new generations of boys and young men who are growing up in the mining region.

Such are the broad facts on the position of the anthracite industry today. In the aggregate it is a sick industry; it is losing money steadily; it is faced with a new era of destructive price wars and possible bankruptcies; and it is totally incapable of caring for the more than 50,000 miners whom it formerly employed. The real size, power and financial worth of the industry are not half what they were a decade and a half ago. These facts, of whose significance most of the people of Pennsylvania seem to be wholly ignorant, must be frankly recognized, and must form the basis of all subsequent programs of public and private action affecting the industry.

II. Broad Objectives

We are agreed that a broad and constructive attack on the economic, social and financial problems of the anthracite industry must be aimed at two major objectives.

The first objective is a substantial increase in the present output and sale of anthracite, obtained especially by large reductions in the price of anthracite to domestic consumers relative to the prices of competing fuels. Any probable increase in output, however, is unlikely to be great enough to absorb more than a fraction of the men now unemployed in the anthracite regions. The second objective must therefore be the development of machinery to find other occupations for the unemployed, and to shift workers out of the anthracite regions. These problems are discussed briefly in the following sections.

III. The Rehabilitation of the Anthracite Industry

1. General pre-requisites for an enduring expansion of output. We believe that any substantial and enduring expansion in the present aggregate output of anthracite, and hence in the volume of employment the industry can offer, is dependent on two types of measures.

First, under existing competitive conditions there must be substantial and permanent decreases in the present average price of anthracite to domestic consumers, relative to the prices of competing fuels. We believe that operating methods in the mines, strippings and breakers are efficient in the main, and that further improvements here are unlikely to yield large further decreases in present mine costs. The fact that labor alone is now about 60% of mine costs supports the latter conclusion. But we are also agreed that freight rates on anthracite are much too high (ton-mile rates average roughly half again as much as bituminous rates, and ton-mile earnings perhaps a third higher). Various other handling charges also seem to be too high. The railroads still persist in regarding anthracite as a rich monopoly, however, and have stubbornly refused to make any large and lasting freight rate reductions on a wide front. We fear that if the railroads do not contribute their share toward increasing the market for anthracite by cutting rates heavily, they may find themselves both losing still more anthracite tonnage, and losing return hauls because of the progressive economic collapse of the anthracite regions. For at least certain of the railroads, this will mean bankruptcy. Finally, the margins exacted by wholesale and retail domestic distributors are commonly excessive. This does not mean that the distributors are making unusual profits, however. It means only that they are commonly badly organized and inefficient, and that the average distributor handles too small a tonnage to do the work cheaply. Reduction of average dealers' margins and improvement of service to consumers are among the most vital pre-requisites for an enduring increase in anthracite consumption.

Second, there must be a large increase in the aggregate market for anthracite obtained by intensive sales promotion, research and purchaser-financing, to increase the use of improved anthracite-burning equipment, and to develop new markets and new uses for anthracite. The newly organized Anthracite Industries, Inc., has recently begun work along these lines, which should be pushed much further; but at the present time the latter organization is merely an educational enterprise.

We believe that the adoption of measures which will both increase the aggregate demand for anthracite, and which will lower present prices to domestic consumers by cutting the shipping and distributing costs just mentioned, will greatly increase the power of anthracite to compete with other fuels, and will thus make possible an enduring expansion of the whole anthracite industry. We feel convinced that unless such measures are adopted, the industry may well remain in its present acutely depressed conditions for years, and may even sink still lower—with the inevitable accompaniment of further bankruptcies, losses to investors and to the railroads, and still greater unemployment.

2. The justification for government intervention in the anthracite industry. If anthracite were merely one of the many industries which have reached a peak, and which then entered on an inevitable downward path of contraction, decay and dissolution, there would be no special case for intervention by the government or any other outside agency. No government undertook action to succor the manufacturers of horse-drawn carriages, or of kerosene lamps, or more recently—of cotton textiles. The fact of losses to operation and investors is not a sufficient reason for intervention in the industry itself.

Three facts, to our minds, justify serious consideration of the various possible forms of intervention in the anthracite industry by some government body. The first is the fact that anthracite coal is still one of the nation's most prized natural resources. Unrestricted exploitation of an exhaustible natural resource by private competing groups, however, is not likely to produce the best results from the point of view of the national welfare. At one extreme, the competitors combine and a monopoly results, as was the case in the anthracite industry before the war. Then prices are far too high, and the rate of production is too low. At the other extreme destructive competition develops, as it now has in the petroleum industry. Then output is too great, prices are too low, and tremendous wastes of natural resources inevitably ensues.

Second, unemployment has been severe in the anthracite industry for many years, and now amounts effectively to nearly half of the number of men employed ten years ago. Relief, works projects and the like are expensive ways of taking care of the unemployed. Government intervention of some sort may well prove to be financially the cheapest way out.

Finally, unemployment in the anthracite regions has been accompanied by illegality on an unprecented and ominous scale. Unless an enduring expansion of anthracite production develops, thus drawing off at least a part of the pressure of unemployment in the anthracite regions, we fear that bootlegging and other illegalities will later expand, and will thus imperil the whole structure of law and order in the entire anthracite area. Obviously, the proposals made in Part II above for dealing with the immediate bootleg situation are limited in scope, and can touch only a small part of the aggregate unemployment problem. Moreover, in view of the present complete disorganization of the operators and their inability to agree on any constructive program, we believe that the operators will not be able by their own unaided efforts to expand the production and sale of anthracite substantially in any near future; will hence not be able to provide any large volume of additional employment; and hence will not be able to lighten materially that profound economic distress in the anthracite regions, in which the present grave peril to law and order originates.

On these three principal grounds, we are therefore now giving serious consideration to the various forms of government intervention enumerated below, and in our subsequent final report we are contemplating that adoption of one of them (or of some variant) be recommended in the special case of the anthracite industry.

3. Forms of government intervention which are now under consideration.

(a) Application of a modified Guffey Act for anthracite. If such an act were passed by the Commonwealth, perhaps in combination with a code of fair competition, it could probably now be made to give control over mine and consumer prices, wages and labor conditions within the Commonwealth. The passing of complementary legislation by the Federal Congress would also permit some control to be exercised over prices in other states. These possible steps deserve serious consideration. Two aspects, however, must be borne in mind. First, the original Guffey Act was designed to operate in the bituminous industry, where over-production and depressed prices were the evils to be corrected. The problem in anthracite is quite the reverse. Here, prices to consumers are too high and production too low. What is fundamentally required in anthracite is not as yet restraint of excessive competition, but the introduction of new aggressiveness in dealing with the problems of distribution and the competition of other fuels. Second, the principles of the Guffey Act leave both initiative and control in the hands of the present operators. We have already indicated, in the preceding section, our grounds for pessimism on this head. The operators are now disorganized and mutually distrustful, and it is doubtful if placing the powers given by the Guffey Act in their hands would produce much change.

(b) Declaring the anthracite industry a public utility, and placing it under a regulatory commission. This scheme has merits. It could be made to lead to control over both the opening and the abandonment of collieries and strippings, and over mine prices. But it would still leave the initiative on most current questions in the hands of the operators, who have already demonstrated their inability to agree on and to enforce a constructive set of policies, it would do little of a positive sort to solve the problems of production, railroad relations and distribution, and in itself it too would not increase the aggregate market for anthracite. The public utility mechanism is primarily a regulatory and restraining device, whereas what is needed in the anthracite situation is the introduction of new initiative, aggressiveness and power to act.

(c) Creation of a new Corporation by the Commonwealth to take over the permanent ownership and operation of part of the anthracite coal lands ,on the model of the Tennessee Valley Authority. This would not at once solve the problems of the whole industry; but it would provide a yard-stick test to gauge the efficiency of the private operators, and by competition would in due course force improvements in marketing techniques upon them. Its inherent danger, however, is that because of better equipment and more substantial capital facilities, such a Corporation may become over-ambitious and unfairly destructive in its competitive activities.

(d) Compulsory amalgamation of all the present anthracite coal-land owners and operators into one new Corporation (or passibly two) to be established by the Commonwealth. This step would permit a direct and unified attack upon all the major problems of the anthracite industry, namely, the problems of freight rates, railroad-coal company tie-ups, distribution, and marketing methods. If successful, the new Corporation would produce a large and enduring expansion of output and employment in the anthracite industry. It can be so set up as to protect the financial interests of the present owners and other investors in the industry, when those interests are fairly valued at their present real worth; it can be placed under disinterested controls which will insure reasonable operation and merchandising efficiency; and it can be financed largely from the issue of its own new securities, at little or no lasting cost to the Commonwealth. Moreover, we believe that a Corporation thus set up under Commonwealth auspices will not be viewed as running counter to the Federal anti-trust laws, and that it will hence be able to attack the vital problem of reducing distribution costs and prices to consumers in other states. Obviously such a Corporation must be properly safeguarded from the outset, to prevent its falling under the control of purely political groups and to prevent its consequent exposure to all the familiar dangers of favoritism, graft and inefficiency.

(e) Federal ownership and operation. This may be the ultimate solution of the anthracite problem. But it is a solution which lie outside the power of the Commonwealth, and is not one which we feel it proper to consider extensively until all other alternatives have been thoroughly explored and found inadequate.

(f) Acquisition of unused anthracite coal lands, either by the Commonwealth or by the Federal Government. This step could be taken simultaneously with any of the first four proposals above. It would leave the present owners enough land for, say 25 years of operation. It would thus lighten the present great burden, of taxes and interest and royalty charges on idle property, which the present operating industry carries. It would not, however, make any large immediate contribution to the problems of freight rates, distribution and marketing.

IV. The Transfer of Surplus Workers From the Anthracite Regions

We believe that appropriate government intervention of some sort, as outlined in the preceding section, will place the present anthracite industry on a sound and healthy base and will encourage expansion in future years. It is merely unrealistic, however, to believe that any conceivable growth of the industry in the next decade or two will absorb all the workers who are now effectively idle in the anthracite regions. Even after allowing for former legal miners who are now thought to be engaged in bootlegging, when nearly 50,000 who were employed in legal mines in 1929 are now unemployed therein; the 99,500 men now in the legal mines are working little more than three days a week on the average; and many thousands of boys have come to working age in the region since 1929, without ever having had employment in the legal mines. Even if we assume that the average miner desires to work only 200 days a year, the anthracite regions hence now contain the equivalent of perhaps 75,000 to 100,000 unemployed men. To absorb all these men into the anthracite industry would require that the present tonnage be nearly doubled. To expect this in any near future, under present conditions, is merely fantastic.

The problem here involved is strictly beyond our present mandate. But it is so integral a part of the bootleg situation and of the present general position of the anthracite industry, and is so important in its human and social aspects, that we desire to call it urgently to the attention of the General Assembly. The indefinite continuance of individual direct relief is both demoralizing to the recipient, and if granted on any large scale must soon become financially unbearable to the Commonwealth. We urge careful consideration of the following partial remedies:

(1) Projects operated by the Commonwealth, and analagous to the Federal P. W. A. and W. P. A. in general character. The reforestation of stripped regions, and the control and utilization of brooks and rivers, seem meritorious types of enterprise. The development of partly self-supporting local industries should also be explored.

(2) Free Commonwealth employment bureaus.

(3) Vocational training and guidance, both for unemployed miners and for other men and boys, to teach them new forms of work of types than can be followed in other regions. At the same time, these workers should be encouraged to leave the anthracite regions; should be helped to find new jobs by the Commonwealth employment bureaus; and where necessary should be given financial aid during the training and transfer period. Restrictions upon the entry of new employees into the anthracite industry is also an essential and obvious part of this transfer program. Similar training should be given women and older girls who desire it. The recent experience of Great Britain shows that a program of this sort can be eminently successful.

(4) The development of subsistence homestead communities. This can be viewed as one phase of the preceding proposal, but may require a larger initial capital outlay, and presumably could be undertaken only in cooperation with the Federal authorities.

V. Proposal for a Federal Fuel Board

We also urge that the General Assembly invite the Federal Government to appoint a Board to investigate the status of all competing fuels, with a view to controlling possibly unfair competition between them and to stopping the present needlessly wasteful exploitation of the country's fuel reserves. Rapid exploitation is frequently advantageous to the country as a whole. But mere waste can claim little defense. At least a part of the present situation in the anthracite industry is traceable to the economically wasteful and in part unequal competition of other fuels.

Part IV Plans for Further Work

The Commission proposes to go ahead at once with a detailed consideration of constructive programs for the general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry, along the lines suggested in Part III. Proposals which have already been placed before the Commission, and others that may be submitted later, will be analyzed from the standpoint of their probable practical effectiveness and their cost. Within as short a time as is possible, the Commission will submit its final report.

From our initial appropriation of $50,000, a total of $32,094.93 has already been expended or authorized for expenditure by the Commission as follows:

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Appropriation		$50,000.00
Expenditures
Salaries	$16,331.59
Wages	4,248.41
Traveling and Misc Expenses	1,514.93
	$22,094.93
Allocated to Census	10,000.00
Total Expenditures and Allocations		32,094.93
Balance Available		$17,905.07

STATEMENT OF CENSUS ALLOCATION

Allocation		$10,000.00
Expenditures
Salaries	$36.13
Wages	995.00
Miscellaneous	234.68
Total Expenditures		1,832.61
Balance Available		$8,167.39

A balance of $17,905.07 is still available for the Commission's work.

The Commission estimates that an additional appropriation of $50,000.00 will be necessary to complete its investigation of the general rehabilitation of the anthracite industry. This is in addition to the sums proposed above, in connection with the program to stop the present bootlegging.

Respectfully submitted.

APPENDIX I

Proposals for Commonwealth Acquisition of Collieries to End Present Illegal Mining

In connection with the proposals made in Part II above, we offer herewith a purely speculative estimate of the possible costs of re-opening and operating certain collieries of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., prepared by an independent engineer. This estimate is offered for illustrative purposes only, and should not be taken as definitive.

Proposed Re-Employment Project

Shamokin Division

It is proposed to de-water, place in working condition and operate the following collieries of the Shamokin division:

Name of Colliery	Possible Production Single Shift
1. Big Mountain	1000 tons
2. Henry Clay	1250 tons
3. Burnside	1250 tons
4. Stirling	1500 tons
5. North Franklin	2000 tons
Total	7000 tons

The above collieries are at present flooded. The problem would then consist of de-watering the North Franklin colliery at Trevorton as a separate unit and the Big Mountain, Henry Clay, Stirling and Burnside Collieries at Shamokin as one unit, since these four collieries are at certain points interconnected.

At present, the P. & R. C. & I. Co. maintains a pumping plant and holds the water of those collieries at a certain elevation to prevent this from overflowing into the Bear Valley colliery, which is the only live colliery of this Company in this division. It is estmated that the operatng and maintenance cost of this pumping plant to the Company is $75 thousand per year.

Preparation Plants, Equipment, Etc.

There are no preparation plants or breakers available at these collieries. The North Franklin breaker burned down in 1931. The Burnside breaker which handled the production of the Burnside shaft, water level and Stirling slope operations and the Henry Clay breaker which in turn handled the Henry Clay and Big Mountain production are practically dismantled and worthless.

It would therefore be necessary in the new project to erect new modern preparation plants, one of a 2000 ton single shift capacity to handle exclusively the North Franklin Colliery production, and another central preparation plant of approximately 5000 tons, single shift capacity, to handle efficiently and economically the combined production of the Burnside, Stirling, Henry Clay and Big Mountain collieries.

The above operations are practically depleted of any worthwhile modern mining, hoisting and pumping plant equipment and it would be necessary to acquire this new as the development of collieries involved in the project progresses.

The main traveling and working arteries of the collieries, such as shafts, slopes, planes, tunnels and gangways, will probably be found in more or less good condition.

Coal Reserves

The virgin coal reserves of the Shamokin division controlled by the P. & R. C. & I. Co. are very large, possibly in excess of 100 million tons, with the sole exception of the Burnside and the Big Mountain collieries. These possess only a very limited amount of virgin coal area, but have a considerable amount of second mining and excellent quality coal.

The coal of this division in general is of excellent quality, free burning white ash anthracite, with a specific gravity of about 1.51 for the division.

Pottsville Division

It is proposed to de-water, place in working condition and operate the following collieries of the Pottsville division:

Name of Colliery	Possible Production Single Shift
1. Reevesdale	1500 tons
2. Silver Creek	1500 tons
3. Pine Knot	2000 tons
4. Wadesville	1250 tons
5. Pine Forest	750 tons
6. Lincoln	1500 tons
Total	8500 tons

The above selected collieries cover about evenly the entire Pottsville division of the P. & R. C. & I. Co., and the bootleg-affected area of the Southern anthracite field.

Practically all of the collieries are flooded and the problem of de-watering and placing them in operation would be a repitition of the Shamokin division problem.

Preparation Plants, Equipment, Etc.

There are no efficient preparation plants or breakers available at those collieries, and no worthwhile mining, pumping, etc. equipment is in evidence. As in the case of the Shamokin division, brand new equipment would have to be acquired for the collieries.

The main communication arteries of the collieries, such as shafts, slopes, tunnels, etc., are probably in good condition.

Possibly three new preparation plants of approximately 3 thousand ton single shift capacity each, to take care of this division output, would have to be erected at points centrally located in respect to the collieries they might serve.

The coal reserves of those collieries are ample to sustain their operating life for a considerable number of years. Large areas of virgin undeveloped coal are also available in this territory.

The coal of this division is of excellent quality, mostly white ash anthracite, although some red ash coal is also available in the area, at least at the Lincoln and the Brookside collieries. The specific gravity of coal in this division is approximately 1.65 wth the exception of the Brookside colliery which analyzes about 1.50.

Estimated Cost of Rehabilitation

The cost of placing the above named collieries of the Shamokin and Pottsville division on a productive basis as indicated in this report, and the amount of capital necessary to operate those collieries and merchandise their product, is broadly estimated as follows:

Shamokin Division
1. To de-water the North Franklin, Burnside, Stirling, Henry Clay and Big Mountain units and install permanent pumping plants to take care of the water problem of those collieries:— For Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$900,000.00
2. To introduce and install the necessary hoisting, ventilating and mining equipment plants in those collieries:— For Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$2,000,000.00
3. To develop the collieries to the required production and cost efficiency level:— Labor and Supplies	$1,250,000.00
4. To erect two modern preparation plants, one at the North Franklin Colliery for a single shift capacity of 2,000 tons and the other to be located at a selected central point in the vicinity of Shamokin, for a single shift capacity of 5,000 tons:— Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$1,000,000.00
TOTAL	$5,150,000.00
Pottsville Division
1. To de-water the Reevesdale, Silver Creek, Pine Knot, Wadesville, Pine Forest and the Lincoln Collieries, and install permanent pumping equipment plants:— For Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$1,000,000.00
2. To introduce and install the necessary hoisting, ventilating and mining equipment plants:— For Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$2,500,000.00
3. To develop the collieries to the required production and cost efficiency level:— For Labor and Supplies	$1,500,000.00
4. To erect three modern preparation plants for a single shift capacity tons each, to be located at certain central points more or less evenly distributed over the area of the sections:— For Equipment, Labor and Supplies	$1,200,000.00
A re-adjustment in the amount of investment may occur in the event that the Bear Valley and the Brookside collieries are incorporated in the project. It is considered that a working capital of $3 million may be found necessary in order to insure the smooth functioning of the project.
Total Investment and Working capital	$14,350,000.00

Time Limit for Construction and Development Work

The time limit for the execution of the above work and the period required to bring the collieries to full production, and the cost of production to the desired cost level, is estimated at fourteen (14) months after the completion of necessary detailed surveys and plans of the project. The re-employment of labor would in such case assume a steadily mounting line until it reached its full effect.

APPENDIX II

Proposed Draft of Legislation

We append herewith a rough draft of legislation to implement the recommendations made in Part II. This draft, because of the shortness of available time, has necessarily been made without extensive consultation with legal authorities, and is hence subject to modification.

An Act to create the Pennsylvania Anthracite Authority; to reemploy anthracite mine workers; to reduce the cost of public relief, and to eliminate "bootleg" mining; to rehabilitate the anthracite coal industry; to relieve the depressed anthracite mining communities; to assist in the conservation of the anthracite coal resources of the Commonwealth; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same as follows:

Section 1. (a) There is hereby created the Pennsylvania Anthracite Authority, hereinafter called the Authority, a public body and a body corporate and politic created and organized in accordance with the provisions of this Act, for the purposes, with the powers and subject to the restrictions, hereinafter set forth.

(b) The Board of Directors of the Authority shall consist of three (3) persons, appointed by the Governor of the Commonwealth, who shall designate one of them as Chairman. One of the original members of the Board of Directors shall be appointed for a term of three (3) years, one for a term of four (4) years, and one for a term of five (5) years, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of five (5) years each, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. A vacancy in the Board of Directors shall not impair the right of the remaining members to exercise all the powers of the Board of Directors, and two members shall, at all times, constitute a quorum. One of the members of the Board of Directors shall be a mining engineer who shall have had practical experience as such, and he shall also serve as Presidnt of the Authority. One of the members of the Board of Directors shall be a person who has had practical experience in the operation of anthracite mines, and he shall also serve as Vice-President of the Authority in charge of operation. One of the members of the Board of Directors shall be a person who had had practical experience in the fields of investment banking and corporation finance, and he shall also serve as Secretary-Treasurer of the Authority. No member of the Board of Directors shall have any financial or other interest in any corporation, partnership, or firm engaged in the business of mining, distributing, or selling anthracite coal, or financing such mining, distributing, or selling, nor shall any member of the Board of Directors have any financial or other interest in any business which may be adversely affected by the operations of the Authority. Upon taking his oath of office, each member of the Board of Directors shall be required to register his agreement with the purposes and provisions of this Act.

(c) Each member of the Board of Directors shall receive a salary of twelve thousand (12,000) dollars a year, without additional salary for serving as an officer, shall be eligible for reappointment, and shall not engage in any other business, vocation, or employment. The Authority may employ any assistant secretary, such technical experts, and such other officers, agents, and employees, pemanent or temporary, as it may require, and shall fix the compensation of such persons according to their qualifications.

(d) The Board of Directors shall at the close of each fiscal year make a report in writing to the Governor of the activities of the Authority during such year, and shall make such other reports as the Governor may from time to time require.

(e) The major general purpose of the Corporation itself shall be to establish and administer a Commonwealth works project for the provision of additional employment in and around collieries in anthracite coal regions, the necessary funds being obtained partly by contributions from the Commonwealth, partly from the issue and sale of the Corporation's own securities, and partly from the sale of anthracite coal produced by or at the direction of the Corporation; to reduce the cost of public relief; and to relieve the depressed anthracite mining communities.

Section 2. (a) The Authority shall have an initial capital of $5 million, represented by 50,000 shares of stock of $100 par value, all of which shall be subscribed and paid for by the Commonwealth. Receipts for payments by the Commonwealth for and on account of such stock shall be issued by the Authority to the Governor of the Commonwealth and shall be evidence of the ownership of the stock by the Commonwealth.

(b) The shares of stock representing the initial capital of the Authority shall be issued from time to time during the first two (2) years of operation of the Auhtority. The funds necessary for the payment for such stock shall be raised by taxation, and shall be appropriated from time to time for the purposes herein set forth. It shall be legal for the Commonwealth to issue and sell discountable tax warrants one year in advance of actual receipt of such tax proceeds. (Note: It is suggested that consideration be given to raising part of these tax funds by a small tax, say 5 cents a ton, on anthracite coal produced in the Commonwealth and marketed for commercial purposes.)

(c) The Authority is hereby authorized and empowered to issure debentures for any of its corporate purposes, including administrative expenses. The total amount of such debentures shall not exceed $20 million and shall bear such date or dates, mature at such time or times (not to exceed twenty (20) years from the date of issuance), bear interest at such rate or rates, and be in such denomination, as the Board of Directors by its resolution shall determine. The debentures issued by the Authority shall constitute a first lien on its income and other assets. The Authority shall from its annual income, and as a first charge thereon, pay the interest on its debentures, and set aside sinking funds in amounts sufficient to amortize the debentures as and when they mature. Neither the members of the Authority nor any person executing its debentures shall be liable personally thereon by reason of the issuance thereof. Such debentures shall not be a debt of the Commonwealth, and shall so state on their face; nor shall the Commonwealth nor any revenues or any property of the Commonwealth, be liable therefor.

Section 3. The Authority is hereby empowered to operate anthracite mines and collieries, and shall have all powers necessary or appropriate to carry out and execute the purposes and provisions of this Act, including the following:

(a) To acquire by lease, purchase, or by eminent domain, any anthracite mines, or any interest therein, and to improve, develop, and operate such mines;

(b) To acquire by lease, purchase, or by eminent domain, any anthracite collieries, preparation plants or other necessary equipment or any interest therein, and to improve, develop, and operate such mines and collieries;

(c) To acquire by lease, purchase, or by eminent domain, any real estate, or any interest therein, for its proper purposes, and to hold and improve such real estate;

(d) To construct collieries for the exploitation of anthracite coal lands leased, purchased or otherwise acquired, to establish marketing agencies, to cooperate with other anthracite coal producers in the marketing and distribution of coal, to operate trucks, and to do all other things necessary to the production and marketing of anthracite coal from mines and collieries acquired and operated by it, including the right to sell anthracite coal itself;

(e) To grant, sell, lease, or exchange any anthracite mine, colliery, real or personal property, or any interest therein, when the Authority determines that such mine, colliery, real or personal property, is no longer needed for the purposes of this act.

(f) To sue and be sued;

(g) To make and execute contracts and other instruments necessary or convenient to the exercise of its powers;

(h) To conduct and supervise research into the problems of the anthracite coal industry, particularly into the problems of reducing costs, improving methods of marketing and distribution, and increasing efficiency, and, as a result thereof, to make recommendations to the Governor and the General Assembly for further action for the rehabilitation of the anthracite coal industry and the conservation of the anthracite coal resources of the Commonwealth;

(i) To conduct investigations, and to hold public or private hearings on any matter material for its information or action, and in connection therewith, to hear testimony, take proof under oath or affirmation, make findings, and issue reports thereon.

(j) To make, amend, and repeal, such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Section 4. The Board of Directors of the Authority is hereby directed, immediately upon the organization of the Authority, to consider the recommendations set forth in the Ad Interim Report of the Anthracite Coal Industry Commission (created by the Act of February 16, 1937) submitted to the Governor on May 17, 1937, and by him transmitted to the General Assembly on May—, 1937.

Section 5. (a) The Authority shall, in the operation of mines and collieries acquired by it, give employment in and around the mines and collieries only to former anthracite mine workers, and shall operate mines and collieries only to the extent necessary to reemploy former anthracite mine workers. The Authority shall give employment to such workers according to seniority, the term "seniority" being defined as meaning length of time such workers have been or were employed in the anthracite coal industry.

(b) In formulating its reemployment program, and in connection therewith its program of acquisition, construction, and operation of anthracite mines and collieries, the Authority shall have due regard for the social and economic welfare of the communities most seriously affected by unemployment among anthracite mine workers, by the consequent public relief burden and by the growth of "bootleg" mining. In its discretion, however, the Authority may acquire, construct ,and operate mines and collieries in communities where "bootleg" mining has not developed to serious proportions, but where unemployment among anthracite mine workers is serious and where the public relief burd n is consequently heavy.

(c) All workers employed in and around mines and collieries operated by the Authority shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities, for the purpose of collective bargaining or of mutual aid or protection.

The Authority is hereby directed to enter into a collective agreement with the labor organization representing such workers at each of the mines and collieries operated by it which shall broadly conform to the collective agreements in effect between other employers in adjacent districts in the anthracite coal industry and the labor organizations representing their employees.

Section 7. This Act may be referred to as the "Anthracite Authority Act".

Part II Report by Harrison Hoblitzbelle and William R. Lynett

Anthracite Coal Industry Commission
Report of Messrs. Hoblitzelle and Lynett

Perspective.

The basic ills of the anthracite industry are attributable to a perspective of monopoly which has been shared over a long period of years by all parties at interest. Although there has been a declining trend in anthracite production since 1926 accompanied by increasingly distressing problems of many kinds, the industry as a whole has apparently not yet been able fully to comprehend the fact that the old perspective is no longer tenable. A realization of this psychology is necessary to an understanding of the reasons for the inertia of the various affected groups in efforts which have been made to date to bring the industry to a place where it can compete and expand its market.

Concerted Effort.

The owners and operators of coal properties, including distributors, the railroads and labor must face the problem,—not in the usual way as to how they are individually and immediately going to be affected by any suggested changes but as to how the industry as a whole is going to be affected because if the industry decays they will all suffer. There is no one group acting independently of the others, regardless of its action, which can bring about recovery. There is no one place in the industrial structure which can be indicated as the one weak spot. There are many weak spots and it is only through real cooperation on the part of every one of these groups that any substantial success can be expected.

Land Owners.

The fee holders of coal properties have received and are receiving royalties based on various schedules and arrangements from lessees of their lands. In many cases downward adjustments have been made, some however are of a tentative nature. It behooves these fee holders, in their own interest, thoughtfully to review their arrangements in view of the obvious fact that their income can be assured only if their lessees' operations are profitable.

Operators.

Over a period of many years the operators, relatively few in number, controlling through ownership or leasehold practically all of the known anthracite properties of the continent, enjoyed a virtual monopoly of the high grade domestic fuel market. Problems of production occupied primary attention and those of marketing were secondary; realization prices were sufficient to provide satisfactory margins for all. Steadily rising costs of production and the encroachments of competitive fuels however have developed to the point where today the coal companies find themselves in the position where they are unable to sell their product either in large enough volume or at a high enough price to recover their costs.

The problem of the coal companies is to recover and expand their markets. The solution lies along the lines of materially improving their merchandising methods and reducing the cost of their product to the ultimate consumer.

The companies have made a step in the first direction through the formation last year of Anthracite Industries, Inc., a broad sales promotional organization jointly financed by a majority of the industry. This project should be vigorously supported and expanded as a supplement to but not as a substitute for aggressive sales efforts by the individual companies.

The cost of anthracite coal to the consumer is roughly made up of three parts,—production, transportation, and final delivery costs. These will be dealt with subsequently, however insofar as production costs are concerned it is generally conceded that the operators are doing a creditable job in keeping their reducible elements to a minimum.

It is apparent in the coal fields that some of the companies have been lacking appreciation of the necessity of having the communities, of which they are the foundation, conversant and sympathetic with their problems. A continuing public relations program of an informative nature would go far to convert what is now a feeling of apathy and in some cases open hostility to one of cooperation and public support.

Labor.

Labor costs exclusive of salaries are by far the largest factor in the cost of producing a ton of anthracite, amounting to roughly sixty per cent of the total. It is interesting to note that since 1902 there has been a steady uptrend in wage rates with no downward revision at any time notwithstanding the fact that in practically every other industry temporary reductions have been made from time to time during periods of economic depression; further, the work week since 1902 has been reduced from six 10-hour days to five 7-hour days. Anthracite wage rates are relatively very high and average annual earnings are low,—208 days having been the largest average number of days worked per man in any year since 1929. The facts point to an inescapable conjecture as to whether a reduction in wage rates would not produce larger earnings per man and also give further additional employment to some of those now unemployed. Where labor costs play as important a part in production as they do in the mining of anthracite coal flexibility in labor agreements is indispensable to the survival of the industry.

One factor which has played an important part in the decline of the anthracite market has been the closing of the sources of supply due to prolonged strikes, notably those of 1922 and 1925-6. During these periods many consumers changed to other fuels and subsequently did not return. Canada, the principal export market, in past years drew virtually all of its anthracite supply from this country, whereas now United States producers enjoy less than half of its business. Although Canadian importations of Welsh anthracite are now admitted duty free as against a 50c per ton duty on U. S. anthracite one of the important reasons for the successful development of the Welsh competition was the impetus given by the aforementioned strikes which caused acute fuel situations in Canada.

Railroads.

The U. S. Supreme Court in 1920 ordered the anthracite carrying railroads to divorce their mining properties. Irrespective of how completely that order may have been effected at the time it appears that there are today very close relationships financially and otherwise between a number of the railroads and coal companies.

Since 1933 the railroads have voluntarily made some substantial reductions in their anthracite freight rates to various territories. Futhermore many petitions for rate reductions have been filed from time to time with the Interstate Commerce Commission so that body has presumably had the general subject of anthracite freight rates under more or less constant review. Nevertheless there is a widespread opinion outside of railroad circles that rail rates on anthracite are still too high. If any rate controlling body, responding to this pressure of opinion, should arbitrarily reduce rates without the most careful study of the facts serious threats to the stability of some of the anthracite rail carriers might result. On the other hand there is certainly reason to believe that some lower rate level might produce higher net revenues, particularly when it is borne in mind that the movement of other collateral freight broadly follows the coal traffic. For example the permanent abandonment of certain collieries would mean the ultimate loss from those areas not only of the coal traffic but of all other commodity and merchandise traffic as well.

It is suggested that the railroads formulate a schedule of reduced anthracite rates to apply for an experimental period only and that the Interstate Commerce Commission recognize unreservedly the experimental status of the schedule, giving assurance that the railroad's right to withdrawal on reasonable notice shall not be contested if they find that the rate reductions have not been productive of increased net revenues from all traffic in and out of the anthracite regions.

Dealers.

The coal dealers are in much the same plight as the coal miners; their per ton rate is high but there are too many of them and the volume handled on the average is not sufficient to make the business profitable. Moreover most of them handle competitive fuels and with divided interests it is not reasonable to expect effective anthracite sales promotion,—in any event it is certainly not to be found now. Merchandising methods must be completely overhauled and in this development the coal producing companies must take the initiative and, until such time at least as retailing is established on a sound and progressive basis, should direct their product through to the ultimate consumer.

Burning Equipment.

The coal companies under the auspices of the Anthracite Institute have been carrying on for several years research work in connection with anthracite burning equipment. If through further industry cooperation mass production of such equipment could be effected and thereby first costs reduced a considerable impetus would be given to their successful introduction.

Legislation.

State legislation is pending which would impose an increase of 250% in workmen's compensation costs or approximately $10,000,000 annually. Other compensation legislation covering occupational diseases would impose a further serious burden of a now indeterminable amount. In addition of course social security taxes, which also follow in direct ratio to dollars of payroll, are rising in accordance with the Schedule in the federal act. Private enterprise cannot indefinitely survive mounting burdens of taxation levied on production.

Legislation has also been proposed placing a heavy tax on fuel oil consumed within the State of Pennsylvania and this move apparently has the support of the coal industry. The primary purpose of the legislation is to displace fuel oil with coal, however what the actual net effects would be are highly problematical. Aside from the belief that such a principle of taxation is unsound economically, it is felt that the desired result if obtained would be temporary only and that the solutions of the anthracite problem do not lie along those lines.

The production of coal involves, as previously stated, a very high labor factor in its cost. Broadly speaking, if competitive relief is to be considered through the route of taxation it would be preferable to apply to producers of all fuels, and all other goods for that matter, taxation based on scientific studies of the factor of labor in the respective costs, varrying the taxation inversely.

Imports.

In the year 1936 a total of 630,000 tons of anthracite was imported into the United States from Great Britain and Russia. Of this amount 450,000 tons came from Russia alone where presumably lower production costs permitted them to sell in this market despite our tariff imposition of $2.00 per ton.

Conclusions

The Industry.

Comments have been offered in the foregoing observations calling attention to specific points of weakness which should be strengthened but which can be effectively dealt with only by the respective groups themselves. There is always a tendency under ordinary circumstances to delay action in the hope that the other group will yield first and thereby render unnecessary any further contribution. The time has now arrived, however, when this strategy must be abandoned in the mutual interest of self-preservation. The monopoly party is over and the cold facts must be faced realistically—the anthracite industry is definitely on a decline which will not be checked unless there are effective contributions not from some but from all parties at interest in reducing the final delivered cost of the product to the consumer.

If the necessity for this cooperation is not now apparent the economics of the situation will soon make it so beyond any question of doubt.

It has been demonstrated that the coal companies, under the present limitations imposed by the Sherman Act, are unable to offer a united front to deal effectively in a cooperative manner with the many problems of the industry requiring attention. There is rather equal division of opinion among the operators as to whether or not some form of federal legislation similar to the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937 would be beneficial to the industry. The task of restoring the industry to a prosperous and healthy condition is certainly an economic and not a political one and it is undesirable under any circumstances to consider a substitution of governmental for private initiative and enterprise. Nevertheless in view particularly of the expressed needs and desires of a substantial portion of the industry it appears advisable that some action be taken to permit the industry to act as a unit in its competition with other branches of the fuel industry and to effect the much needed improvement in its merchandising methods and controls. To this end we recommend for your consideration the desirability of federal legislation involving a minimum amount of governmental participation with concurrent suspension of the Sherman Act, and further drawn along the general lines of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937 providing, as that act does, for automatic termination at a stated time. The drafting of such an act might be charged to a joint committee composed equally of employers and employees drawn from the anthracite industry. After preparation of such a bill it could be memorialized by the State legislature to the Federal congress and recommended by the Governor.

Although the anthracite coal resources of the nation are principally confined, so far as is now known, to the State of Pennsylvania, the consumption of the majority of the product takes place without the State and for this reason the conservation of those resources has more than an intrastate importance.

Our colleagues recommend for further study numerous alternatives involving various degrees of State regulation, operation and ownership of the anthracite industry. We are firmly opposed to any of the State alternatives suggested in the belief primarily that none of them could effectively deal with the problems of distribution, which are clearly interstate, and secondarily because we believe that any injection of State authority would ultimately lead to a further decline of the industry and a further burden to the taxpayers of the State. We frankly do not feel that any further time or expense involved in the exploration of State control theories are justified.

Bootlegging:

Bootlegging since its beginning in a small way in 1931 has developed into an industry of considerable proportions. It has been roughly estimated that there are at certain times of the year as many as 12,000 or more people engaged in the mining, and about 6000 in the preparation and marketing of bootleg coal and that last year such production approximated eight percent of the anthracite legitimately mined. A census of this situation is now being taken by the Commission which when completed should reveal, among other things, a reasonably accurate picture of the numbers engaged in the various phases of the work, their ages, origins, and former connections, if any, with the legitimate mining industry.

Irrespective, however, of the results of the census we believe bootlegging should be stopped and that its continued condonement will lead to increasingly serious consequences, among which might be cited the further moral degradation of those engaged therein and of the communities in which the activities flourish, a threat to the earnings and even personal safety of the miners legitimately employed in collieries, and a continued disruption of the anthracite market.

Acute unemployment arose during the depression in many other industries and communities and yet did not lead to wholesale violations of property rights. The explanation advanced with respect to the development of anthracite bootlegging is that there were many of the unemployed who were faced with the alternative of either bootlegging or starving and the correlative argument that the right of survival transcends all others. If the threat of such an alternative still exists it should be immediately removed. The support of the unemployed and of other public dependents on a subsistence basis should be the obligation of society generally inasmuch as, to advance one sufficient reason only, industry cannot carry the financial burden.

The areas in the Southern Pennsylvania anthracite fields where most of the bootlegging activities take place should be permitted to regain their morale and clear themselves of the charges of moral turpitude which are being directed against them from all parts of the nation. To accomplish this there will have to be a re-recognition of law and order, made possible without further delay through State assistance of various kinds to those who through need claim to have been forced into bootlegging. It is obvious that the impoverished finances of the coal companies will not enable them to take care of the unemployed, and it is just as obvious that there are no rehabilitation plans for the industry which can in themselves lead to large scale reemployment in the near future. If these statements are true, as we believe them to be, it is clear that the State will have to make its choice between either permitting bootlegging to continue indefinitely or extending relief in one form or another to those in need and thereupon stopping and keeping stopped the admittedly illegal mining of coal. As stated, we strongly urge you to follow the latter course. Arguments are made that nothing short of the reopening of collieries or at least the reabsorption of bottleggers in collieries now operating will prevent armed resistance and bloodshed. We do not concur in this position but are of the opinion that once the bottleggers are assured of subsistence through State aid and a better opportunity for employment in regular collieries public sentiment in the afflicted areas will promptly crystalize in support of the elimination of those practices which everyone including the bootleggers themselves must recognize to be fundamentally wrong. Once bootlegging is stopped there will naturally follow a need for increased employment and working time in company collieries to replace the tonnage formerly produced illegally.

We recommend the immediate carrying out by the State of the following program:

1. Establishment of offices conveniently located in centers in the bootleg areas for the issuance of relief funds on an adequate subsistence basis to those who are actually in need;

2. Extension through these local offices or others of free employment service, with the giving of all possible aid to any in the regions, who are willing to accept employment in other parts of the State. These offices should be clearing houses of information as to work opportunities outside the region and the service should extend even so far as the giving of funds for transportation expenses to those in need of them, where chances of employment elsewhere are reasonably assured through advance negotiations.

3. Establishment of work relief programs along one or several of the following lines:

(a) Reforestation,
(b) Flood control and stream purification,
(c) Highway work, and
(d) The refilling, where safe, of bootleg holes.

4. Give assistance to counties and communities in the founding of vocational trade schools which will fit the young men of the communities to follow other trades than mining.

5. Endeavor to secure federal cooperation in the establishment of a Citizen's Conservation Corps camp in Schuylkill County.

6. When essential preparatory steps have been provided for the administration of adequate State aid through the several channels outlined, the issuance and effective enforcement of a governmental proclamation setting a date on and after which the State will use whatever powers may be necessary in support of local authorities to suppress and keep suppressed all bootlegging activities.

There are approximately 150,000 miners in the anthracite fields with only about 100,000 now employed on a part time basis. A materially increased demand for anthracite which would require a substantial increase in current production could be adequately handled by those men now on the payrolls if they were afforded full time work. In the present emergency the companies and the mine workers' organization will undoubtedly cooperate as far as possible to spread the work, however, in the long run the situation here is serious in view of the fact that there are 150,000 men available with full working time potentialities conceivably available even under greatly improved conditions for only two-thirds of that number. It is therefore important that the problem be faced realistically and that serious attention be given to the matter of first fitting the excess men for other vocations and means of livelihood, and secondarily the gradual transplanting of this part of the population elsewhere where better opportunities for employment or self support are available. It is obviously impractical to expect substantial results in this direction with respect to the older generation, however, all means should be employed to divert rising generations from the natural instinct of following their fathers' course into the mining vocation. It will even be advisable in our opinion to incorporate education along these lines in the schools.

It might be claimed that the State itself cannot afford the financial burden of the assistance program outlined, which is admittedly large, however we are firmly of the belief that failure or delay in assuming that responsibility will ultimately result in far greater expense to the State in financial as well as moral values.

Any proposal injecting the State directly or indirectly into the operation of anthracite coal mines, even though it be effected presumably for a limited period only, would unquestionably lead to a future necessity of the State taking over the entire industry, as it is irrefutable that private enterprise cannot long co-exist with subsidized governmental competition however inefficient. In addition we believe that even though state operation of collieries were actually confined to an emergency period the cost to the Commonwealth would be considerably in excess of the cost of the assistance program we have recommended.

Insofar as we are concerned, this report contains our final recommendations.

Sample Results from the Census of Illegal Mining

The following are the preliminary partial results of the ceusus of illegal mining referred to in the preceding reports which the Commission is now conducting. It must be understood that these results are based on a small sample of the total, and hence may be somewhat unrepresentative of the final results to be submitted later. Because the results cover only a part of the total, no attempt can be made as yet to estimate the total annual output of illegal or bootleg mining operations, or of the total number engaged.

In addition, the figures are based only on the untested replies of bootleg miners to the questionnaires. Nevertheless, these preliminary results are sufficiently interesting in their general character to justify their presentation at this time. The completed census will be comprehensive, will be checked with all possible sources of information, and will cover many other questions not considered in the present preliminary partial summary.

This preliminary study covers only part of Northumberland county. The majority of the mines located in Zerbe and Coal townships, and part of the mines in Mt. Carmel township, are represented. As yet only a small percentage of the breakers in these townships have been surveyed. A study of the truckers engaged in transportation of illegal coal will be made for the final survey.

The census concerns itself with all pertinent information relating to the bottleg mines, the bottleg breakers, and the study of the personal histories of those engaged in these places. The number of questionnaires thus far answered totals 1,033. Of these, 253 cover bootleg holes treated as operating units. These 253 holes employ 980 workers; 666 questionnaires are personal questionnaires answered by the workers in these 253 holes. Schedules covering bootleg breakers treated as operating units, total 37. These 37 breakers employ 122 workers; 77 questionnaires are personally answered by the workers in these 37 breakers. The following are some preliminary results derived from a preliminary study of the questionnaires.

Data Concerning Bootleg Holes and those Working in these Holes

The following are the results that have been obtained from questionnaires covering 253 bootleg holes. These holes employ 980 men, of whom 666 have been personally questioned.

(1) The average length of time the bootleg holes have been operated by the bootleg miners now found there is six (6) months.
(2) Of the holes thus far studied, 95% are partnership affairs, 4% are family enterprises, and 1% are individually operated.
(3) Of the total number of workers, 98% work on a full time basis. The remaining 2% work part time.
(4) Of the total number of bootleg miners, 46% say they have anthracite miners' certificates.
(5) Of the total number of bootleg miners, 4.6% are at present employed on W. P. A. projects. 1% have regular employment in private industry.
(6) The present average weekly rate of earnings per worker per mine is $16.00. The average number of hours worked per day per mine is 8, and the average number of days worked per week is 5.
(7) The average sales price of coal at the mine at present is $2.70 per ton; three months ago, the price per ton was $3.04.
(8) Of the bootleg miners personally questioned, 62% say that they were formerly engaged in legal mining, and 46% as stated above say that they have anthracite miners' certificates. 38% were not previously miners. The average age of the bootleg miners questioned is 32.6 years. The average age of those who previously had some occupation is 36 years. The average age of the 21% who never had any occupation is 20 years.
(9) Of the former miners now engaged in bootlegging, the stated average length of service in a legal mine is 18 years. Of these former miners, 2% say they last worked in a legal mine before 1925; 34% between 1925 and 1932; the remaining 64% last worked in a legal mine within the past six years. Of the former miners who are now engaged in bootleg mining, 75% say they have anthracite miners' certificates.
(10) Of the total number of bootleg miners, 98% say they have lived within or near the coal region for at least ten years past.
(11) The average length of time the present bootleg miners have been engaged in bootleg mining is 2 years.
(12) 88% of the bootleg miners state they are native born citizens of the United States; 11% are naturalized citizens; 1% are aliens.
(13) The percentage of those who are married is 51; widowed 3%; single 46%; divorced, less than 1%.
(14) The average number per family is 5. In each family, the average percentage employed is 9%.
(15) Of the total number of bootleg miners, the percentage who declare they are at present on relief is 11; the percentage who declare they were formerly on relief is 32. Th percentage claiming present employment on W. P. A. is 4.6, (as stated above) making a total of 15.6% at present either on W. P. A. or relief.

Data Concerning Bootleg Breakers and those Working in these Breakers

The following are the results obtained from questionnaires covering 37 bootleg breakers. These breakers employ 122 workers, of whom 77 have been personally questioned.

(1) All the breakers are individual enterprises. 95% of the operators own their own breakers.
(2) The average investment in each breaker is $856.
(3) The average length of time of operation of the present breakers to date has been 2 years.
(4) Of the total number employed by the breakers, 64% are engaged in actual breaker work, 33% are on trucks, and 3% are engaged in other occupations at the breaker.
(5) The average present weekly earnings or profits of the breaker owners is $75. Workers hired by the breaker owners receive wages averaging about $12 a week.
(6) The average price received per ton for coal sold at the breaker is $2.09 for buckwheat, $4.00 for pea, and $5.00 for nut.
(7) For coal bought at the breaker the estimated average price per ton is $3.50, and for coal bought at the mine, the estimated average price per ton is $2.70.
(8) The average number of hours worked per day is 8, and the average number of days worked per week is 5½.
(9) Of the total coal sold by bootleg breakers, 12% is sold locally, 7% is sold outside of a 20-mile radius by trucks owned by the bootleg breakers, and 81% is sold to truckers who sell the coal more than 20 miles away.
(10) Of total breaker workers personally questioned, 46% stated they were formerly engaged in legal mining, the remaining 54% being non-miners. Of the total bootleg breaker workers, 34% never had any previous employment. The average age of the workers in and around the bootleg breakers is 31 years. The average age of those who have had some other previous employment is 33 years. The average age of the 34% who never had any previous employment is 19 years.
(11) Of the former miners who are now engaged in breaker operations, 36% say they have anthracite miners' certificates.
(12) Of the total number of bootleg breaker workers, 96% say they have lived within or near the coal region for the past ten years or more.
(13) The percentage who say they are native born citizens of the U. S. is 97; the percentage of naturalized citizens is 3; none are aliens.
(14) Concerning marital status, 49% are married, 3% are widowed, 1% are divorced, and 49% are single.

(15) The average number per family is 5. In each family the average percentage employed is 13%.
(16) Of the bootleg breaker workers, 5% say they are at present on relief, and 18% that they were formerly on relief. The percentage claiming present employment on W. P. A. is 4, making the total percentage on either W. P. A. or relief at present 9.

Anthracite Coal Industry Commission

Report submitted to the Governor of Pennsylvania by Morris L. Ernst

This Commission was appointed on February 16, 1937. It was directed by statute to render a report before the adjournment of the General Assembly of 1937. Its duties, which are investigatory and advisory, cover the subject of illegal mining of anthracite coal, the general economic dislocation of the industry, and the more technical problem of the subsidence of land due to mining operations. In view of the shortness of time available for research and deliberation it has been found impossible to touch on the latter problem and this Report accordingly does not attempt to treat of it.

The problem of bootlegging is interwoven with that of the industry as a whole. Specific attention has been accorded the bootleg situation; but the more intensely it is studied, the clearer it becomes that the bootleg problem is merely a phase or symptom of a disease; it may be alleviated by piecemeal measures, but it or some similar trouble is likely to recur so long as the industry as a whole is not restored to health. On the central job—reform of the industry—shortness of time prevents the submission of any single recommendation or the preparation of legislation incorporating such recommendation. I am in substantial agreement with Mr. Lauck and Mr. Angell as to certain lines of inquiry that may prove profitable and with their ultimate objectives. I differ from them however in various important details which may become most important in the attainment of the results sought. Moreover I have not been able to examine fully their legislative proposal, tax program, fiscal items, etc. relating to the corporate entity referred to in their report.

Outline of Report

I shall (I) sketch briefly the general condition of the industry in terms of the various groups engaged therein, noting some of the factors entering into the bootleg problem; (II) summarize and analyze various suggestions looking toward correction of the bootleg situation, which lead logically to a conclusion as to the basis upon which the recovery of the industry as a whole must rest; (III) analyze the factors determining cost and price in the industry in the light of such tentative conclusion; (IV) consider in broad outline the major proposals for reform or relief of the industry.

1. Outlines of the Anthracite Industry

A. Topographical and General

Through geological accident, anthracite coal is a natural monopoly of the State of Pennsylvania. Thus, while having National repercussions, the problem of the anthracite industry is largely indigenous to this State. This aggravates the problem but at the same time facilitates a solution by intra-state means.

Of the total amount of anthracite coal imbedded in the soil of North America, not less than 95% resides in this State. This State produces about 99% of the anthracite produced in the United States. 8½ billion tons are untouched.

Pennsylvania anthracite is confined to about 500 square miles lying in ten counties of this State, regionally divided into the Wyoming territory (Northern Field), Lehigh territory (Eastern Middle Field) and Schuylkill territory (West Middle and Southern Field). Of this area of anthracite coal land at least 400 square miles will not be touched for decades to come.

Such high concentration of natural wealth, exploited on a commensurately concentrated scale, has resulted in the peculiar dependence of many of the counties mentioned on the prosperity of the industry. When anthracite goes sour, such counties are prostrated; the few other industries in the coal territory are unable to take up the slack. The great majority of all persons normally employed in the anthracite area are employed in and about the production of anthracite. Thus the economic, physical and moral well-being of the citizenry living in this area has depended essentially upon the shifting fortunes of hard coal; or—translated into gross figures—hundreds of thousands of people resident in the State are tied to anthracite by the ineluctable chain of economic realities.

Without tracing in detail the place of the anthracite industry in the economic structure of the State, it may certainly be said that anthracite is and will continue to be a factor of tremendous importance. The problems briefly considered in this Report are therefore of vital concern to the State and deserve fundamental treatment by the General Assembly.

B. The producing end of the industry.

The anthracite business dates back more than a century. For decades it was the primary fuel of the United States. The peak output of anthracite was reached in

Note: The figures herein are taken from government records or from reports supplied by parties interested in the industry. Like all facts based on non-uniform accounting records they serve merely as general guides.

1917 at almost a hundred million net tons. By 1929 the figure had declined to about seventy-five million net tons. Further declines were recorded during the National depression:

Output—(as per Sawards Annual, 1936) Net Tons:

	1895	53.000.000
Peak—	1917	100.690.000
	1929	73.828.000
	*1931	59.646.000
	*1933	49.399.000
	*1934	57.385.000
	*1935	51.003.000
	*1936	54.760.000

*Not including "bootleg" or stolen anthracite.

In 1936 54,760,000 net tons were produced. All of these figures, to reflect actual marketing output, are subject to reductions representing anthracite used at collieries for power and heat. It will be observed that the decline of anthracite production ante-dated the National depression and there is no indication that it will cease when that depression is over.

Thus, in terms of production, the industry is back to where it was in the 1890s, in spite of the prodigious industrial expansion of the country during the past fifty years. This startling fact gives a clue to the present position of the coal mine owners in this State.

Today anthracite coal production is divided between 8 large "old line" corporations, owning 65% of all the coal lands now being mined and producing about 60/65% of all the anthracite coal produced in Pennsylvania and upwards of 160 independents owning or leasing the remaining 35% of coal lands now being mined and producing the remaining 35/40% of anthracite coal produced in Pennsylvania.

For many years there was an intimate financial tie-in between the "old line" corporations and the railroads employed in transporting the product. In 1923 the direct connection between old-line companies and the railroads was as follows:

Railroad Dominating or substantially Owning	Coal Operating Company
Delaware, Lackawanna & Western	Glen Alden Coal
Delaware & Hudson	Hudson Coal
Lehigh Valley	Coxe Brothers Lehigh Valley[1]
Reading (holding company for Philadelphia & Reading)	Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron[1]
Erie	Hillside Coal & Iron Pennsylvania Coal
New York, Ontario & Western	Scranton Coal Co.
Lehigh & New England[2]	Lehigh Coal & Navigation[2]
Central Railroad of New Jersey[3]	Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal[3]
Pennsylvania Railroad	Susquehanna Coal Co.

[1] Then in process of dissolution.
[2] The coal operating company in this instance owned the railroad.
[3] Connection had been dissolved by the United States Supreme Court.

Although these financial ties have in some cases been relaxed there persists a strong financial and subtle non-financial connection.

The degree of "monopolization" of the industry by the old-line companies has been on the decrease. In 1923 it could be said that they owned and controlled between 75% and 80% of all anthracite mined and 90% of the future supply of the product. Today the figures must be revised respectively, to 60/65% and 65%. Independent operation has markedly increased during the past several years. In 1919 there were 60 independents; in 1936, 160. It is likely that the number would be still further enlarged if old-line companies owning substantial percentages of presently unmined coal lands would change their leasing policies. There is considerable sentiment against some companies for their failure to do so.

Of the total coal content of anthracite coal fields only a small proportion is actually being mined. Independents by and large do not own the land which they mine but lease it on a royalty basis from coal operating companies or from estates or companies owning coal lands but not individually engaged in operation.

The tax burden against coal lands, productive and non-productive, is enormous in the aggregate, and is said to constitute 6% of the recovery cost of anthracite at the mines, or 26 cents per net ton of coal to the consumer (exclusive of cumulation) in 1936. The royalty figure is also large: 4% of the recovery cost at the mine, or 15 cents per net ton of coal to the consumer (exclusive of cumulation) in the same year. Many operators pay no royalties or negligible amount, being owners in fee. Hence these figures must be substantially weighted to show the realistic burden of royalties. Royalties, although tending to lower levels during recent years, are still fixed, by and large, at the highest the market will bear. They are not so geared with production as to encourage maximum output by lessees through provision for decreasing royalty charges as production increases.

Other important fixed charges on the industry are depreciation, depletion, interest and various items of insurance. It is not possible to speak with any confidence about these factors, since there appear to be wide differences among operating companies in their methods of calculating these items, and the validity of almost any theory of computation may be questioned. It is however, plain that taxes, royalties and depletion and depreciation, as reflected in the accounts of operators owning coal lands and independents leasing lands, rest heavily upon the industry as a whole and so upon the ultimate consumer.

There is small doubt that the operators are, generally speaking, efficiently conducting the operations at the mine. During the past years of depression the cost of producing coal at the mine has decreased even though the labor cost has remained approximately the same,—a token of increased efficiency at the mines. There has developed a tendency toward concentration of operations and the use of large scale breakers fostered by the belief that the cost of production could be decreased by the operation of a smaller number of collieries fuller time rather than a large number of collieries part time, and by the concentration in large breakers. This policy may prove of questionable business value in view of the heavy capital investment and additional capital burden involved in connection with large breakers and ultimate cost of reopening closed collieries.

Although there is a high concentration of ownership in the hands of the old-line companies, there has been no proof adduced before this Commission of any overt or concealed attempt in more recent years to limit the production of anthracite coal. To a certain extent, however, old-line companies have stabilized their sale prices at the mine; the striking variances among sales prices at the mine of the same size of coal, where not due to differences in quality or the like, are probably to be accounted for in part by the effect of low cost independent producers or some large units representing the least efficient segment of the industries, or temporary market-wise pressures.

Analysis of the statements of major coal operating companies, in an effort to find whether they are presently making a profit, is hindered by the fact that no uniform accounting practices obtain throughout the industry. For instance, depletion and depreciation may be charged up against gross profit in an extravagant amount. These doubts are only suggestive of many more that could be mentioned. Before a reliable conclusion may be advanced, careful study would have to be made of the interlocking relationships between coal mines and railroads, and coal mines and wholesale and retail distributors, to ascertain whether real profits are not being drained off through these channels.

The general statement is, however, justified, that the anthracite business is at present by no means a profitable one. 74% of the coal produced in 1935 was sold at the mine at an alleged loss of 17c a ton to the producers.

In 1936 a net average loss per ton at the mine of over 20 cents is asserted.

The consolidated balance sheet of companies producing 90% of anthracite coal would show in 1935 current assets of $71,000,000, and current liabilities of $62,000,000, leaving a net current asset position of only $9,000,000. The current net assets of the companies has decreased about $100,000,000 in about ten years. These companies would claim a book value respecting equipment and coal lands owned by them of $300,000,000 but this is presumably calculated without reference to the fact, or without sufficient weight being accorded the fact, that frozen assets have no realistic present value if when employed by result in net losses.

The consolidated income account of companies producing 85% to 90% of the total anthracite tonnage for the years 1931 to 1932, and 90% to 95% of the total tonnage from 1933 to 1935, as recently presented by the Anthracite Institute, shows a deficit in net income for each of the years 1932, 1933, 1934 and 1935 in the amounts respectively of upwards of $10,500,000, $8,500,000, $1,600,000, $10,-200,000. These losses would be increased by excluding dividends received during these years from investments.

It is plain, no matter what angle of analysis is adopted, that the tremendous decline in the saleable output of anthracite coal is leading to the gradual ruin of coal mine operations. The principal cause for such decline may be summarized in a sentence. Anthracite has not met the challenge of other competitive fuels in this country. In addition, exports from this country have been on the decrease. Omitting the export factor, and putting to one side the basic, comparative high cost of withdrawal of anthracite from the earth due to the lay and tenacity of coal-bearing veins, the general and drastic decline of the anthracite industry must in the long range be due to either of two causes, or both,—an inherent disability of anthracite as a fuel or invalid prices charged the consumer. The first cause will not, we are convinced, stand up under analysis. As to the second cause, it is immaterial to the present discussion whether the cost is exorbitant in the sense that there is unjustified profit in some branch of the industry, or the industry is so uneconomically organized as to foster high prices without profit to anyone. The only point now material is that cost to the consumer must be reduced if saleable output is to be increased, and unless saleable output is increased, the industry as a whole cannot be rehabilitated. In economic theory it might be possible to give up the struggle for rehabilitation of the entire industry, allow economic pressures to close up all marginal companies with continued production only by a handful of companies working a small percentage of available mine labor at full time. This would bring profit to those companies permitted to continue operations, but would involve destruction of all other companies and permanent displacement of all other mine laborers. It is a counsel of futility. The social catastrophe of such competitive economic slaughter may well result unless the state or nation promptly retards the process! The remaining approach is to press for reduction of cost to the consumer resulting in increased production and the restoration of the industry as a whole to profit and prosperity.

C. Position of Labor

In the year 1914 upwards of 179,000 persons were directly employed in the production and processing of anthracite coal in and about the mines, and the average number of days per year worked by these persons was 245 days. When production reached its highest point, in 1917, 154,000 men worked on an average of 285 days. During the years 1924-1928 upwards of 160,000 men were at work well over 225 days. In 1929 and 1930 there was a decline to a level of around 150,000, the average number of days worked being still upwards of 200. By 1933 the number of men employed had dropped to but 104,633; the average number of days worked to 182. The year 1934 showed a slight upward trend, but by 1935 a record low of 100,000 men, working an average of about 180 days per year, was reached. There were less men at work in the anthracite fields in 1935 than in 1890. If the total present output of coal were produced by persons working the full annual complement of working days, approximately 60,000 persons would be employed.

As above noted, of late there has arisen a tendency to concentrate operations and to use large-scale breakers, in an effort to reduce production cost. This practice, whose business wisdom from the point of view of the coal operators I have already questioned, has the effect of leaving devastated human areas where collieries are closed. A counter-tendency is found among large operators to work a larger number of men fewer days per year in an attempt to stagger employment. Thus the workers are sharing their misery. Some independent operators, to the contrary, furnish work to fewer men, but employ them fuller time. There is some suspicion that these independents are chiseling against union wage rates, and that this practice is to a certain extent condoned.

The wage scale in effect in 1923 has been continued with minor modifications by agreements of 1926 and 1930. In 1935 the hourly rate ranged from $1.20 (for contract miners) to less than 50c, averaging 80c to 85c over-all. Under the wage scale to come into effect in May, 1937, union labor will be paid as much for the seven-hour day as it has in the past been paid for the eight-hour day. Taking 1929 as index 100, payrolls had declined 44.1 points by 1934, and the per capita weekly earnings of those employed had declined 6.2 points. The annual earnings of those employed were: in 1929 $1610, falling off to $1368 in 1932, with a further decline to 1936.

The charge for labor constitutes about 60% of the recovery cost of coal at the mine, but for services rendered risk taken and skill required, the real annual wage of the workers is deplorably low. It will be noted that the ratio which the labor charge bears to the production cost of anthracite is many times higher than the cognate ratio for fuel oil. Concomitantly, any improvement in the condition of the anthracite industry results in putting to work a relatively larger number of men,—a factor which bespeaks for the industry the highest possible cooperation of the Nation and the State, which are presently bearing the brunt of relief expenses in the anthracite area. And this should be recalled in the future formulation of a National or State policy respecting fuel production and consumption.

Destitution in mining communities has been proverbial during depression years and is today not appreciably different from what it was in the blackest of depression years. If we assume the low figure of 150,000 as representing employable miners who cannot get other employment, around 50,000 may be considered out of work today. In the ten anthracite counties, an average of 304,000 persons were on relief during the twelve months ending June 1, 1935,—21.9% of the entire population. As this compares with an average of 17.7% for the State of Pennsylvania, it is indicated that mine labor has contributed a larger percentage of people to the public relief rolls than any other major industry in Pennsylvania. For the year 1936, $7,500,000 was expended for relief and W. P. A. by State and Federal agencies in Schuylkill County alone. This County bears the brunt of the bootlegging. The emergence of bootlegging, it may be noted, has attracted from other areas and possibly from other States a new group of unemployed.

The introduction of new industries in the anthracite area to take up the glut of unemployed does not appear to be feasible and may be discounted at this point. Solvent businesses are not likely to move into the territory because they wisely will regard themselves as peculiarly subject to tax. On the other hand, transportation of large numbers of mine workers to other sections of the country where they can find other employment appears to be equally unfeasible and at least not readily attainable. For mine workers, therefore, not less than for mine operators, rehabilitation lies only in increased distribution of the product.

It need hardly be added that anthracite mine labor is completely organized in the form of one of the strongest unions in the United States. Far from being a factor which need cause alarm to the industry, this is a circumstance which should conduce to more ready solution of the anthracite problem, as it establishes an articulate bargaining unit which may be called on to do its part in any proposed reform.

D. Distribution and Marketing.

The distribution and marketing of anthracite coal are in a highly uneconomical and disorganized condition.

Most of the transportation of coal to principal consumption points and to tidewater is performed by the several railroads whose connection in the main with the ownership of coal lands has for generations been intimate. Freight rates to distant parts of the country are so high as to be prohibitive and have resulted in abruptly restricting the available market. The railroads charge considerably more to move a ton of anthracite coal a mile than to move a ton of bituminous the same distance. Granting even that the charges for switching and other handling on short hauls tend to swell the price, so that absolute comparisons may not fairly be made, it is still evident that cost to the railroads does not determine anthracite freight rates. This conclusion is reinforced when we consider that the same railroad which gets about $2.25 a ton for carrying anthracite 130 miles will carry bituminous coal 300 miles for approximately the same cost. Sand in empty cars in the opposite direction back to the mine at less than $1.00 per ton, although the way is uphill; and it will carry flour back to the district for less than what it charges for anthracite carriage.

It is estimated that the freight charge accounts for about 25% of the consumer's dollar in the East, and up to 40 percent in the mid-West. There has been no general rate revision downward in recent years. The district reductions of 1933 did not flow consistently to the consumer's pockets as was hoped. Even the inroads of trucking have not created an intelligent approach to this problem on the part of the railroads.

The precipitous decline in anthracite production has had, of course, a commensurately disastrous effect on the servicing railroads; the interdependence is shown by the fact that in 1935 the anthracite traffic accounted for 38% of the tonnage and 30% of the freight revenue of the mine servicing railroads. The gross revenue collected on anthracite has declined from over 130 million dollars in 1924 to 72 million dollars in 1935.

Moreover, the railroads are yearly losing goodly percentages of their anthracite traffic to trucks, whose emergence as a factor in transportation has been one of the prime developments in recent years. Truckage is cheaper than railroad transportation for short hauls; from the point of view of consumers within short haul areas it has the marked advantage of largely eliminating rehandling and wholesale and retail profit by reason of "mine-to-house" distribution. Even if bootleg coal—which constitutes about a third of the present total of truck carriage—were eliminated, trucks would continue to be a major threat to the servicing railroads. It minimizes the degradation of the product.

Since the area served is economically largely dependent upon the anthracite industry, loss in anthracite traffic means also a loss in the carriage back of consumer's goods to the area.

The wholesale and retail trades in anthracite are notoriously unstable and feebly organized. Notwithstanding the fact that the spread between cost at the mine and cost to the consumer is (including transportation), on the face of it, excessive (average 1935, more than 100%) wholesalers in and retailers are by and large not making a go of their business. They blame the producing end of the industry for a large part of their troubles. They point out that there is commonly a wide range of price at the mine at any given month, due to the marked differences in production and sales methods existent between old-line companies and independents. They say that seasonal variations of cost at the mine are also economically miscalculated. They complain of the absence of quality standards in the industry. They say they are unable to advertise or plug the product to the public for lack of any long term sales policy of the operators, and that the operators are falling down on this important job. The operators are now starting an educational campaign for the use of anthracite coal through an organization representing about two-thirds of the tonnage.

In addition, there are various distressing factors for which the wholesale and retail trades are themselves responsible or for which, in any event, the producers are not wholly responsible. Wholesalers do not stick to their last; on accasion they sell direct to consumers. The bootleg coal traffic has further demoralized the legitimate retail trade. The cleavage between old-line producers and independents is paralleled in the marketing and distributing end of the industry by a cleavage between wholesale and retail units owned or controlled by producers, and units which are independently owned. Most independent wholesalers and retailers have divided loyalties; they market bituminous coal, coke, oil and other products together with anthracite, and have no particular stake in plugging anthracite as against other fuels. Forced scarcities to raise the prices to the consumer have been induced from time to time—although not in the more recent years—either by producers alone or by wholesalers and retailers acting alone, or by both interests acting together, working permanent damage to the consumers' market as a whole. In many districts the number of retailers has been so great that no single retailing unit gets a sufficient quantity of business to operate at a decent spread. In cities such as Utica, N. Y. (Pop. 100,000) we find 60 separate retailers, no one retailer doing enough business to market the goods at a reasonable spread.

E. The Consumers.

Anthracite coal is no longer used in large quantities for industrial heat and power. A heavy percentage of hard coal sold in this country is used for domestic or home heating. Consumption has fallen off through the introduction and widespread use of competitive fuels—bituminous coke, oil, electricity and gas. Further factors that must be noticed are loss of the export market, increase of imports, increased use by anthracite consumers of efficient gas and electric stoves, improvement of heat insulation in houses, and increase of multiple dwellings.

In any case, the figures above given as to yearly production of coal may be taken as fairly indicative of yearly consumption. The drop has been continued and great.

As I have repeatedly noted above, costs to the consumer have been high in the sense that the spread between cost of anthracite coal at the mine and cost to the consumer has obviously been excessive. Moreover, the ultimate purchasers of anthracite are not a happy or satisfied group. This is due to various causes, among others the absence of uniform quality standards, wide fluctuation in price resulting from unstable and disorganized marketing, and insolent price announcement derived from a monopolistic background.

Notwithstanding the plain fact that cost to the consumer is exorbitant, the inherent qualities of the product are such as to render anthracite a most attractive subject of salesmanship. If prices could be established to consumers at valid levels, extensive advertising employed, the public educated to the advantages of efficient heating and cooking devices using anthracite, and the geographical market expanded through reduction of transportation costs, there is every reason to believe that consumption could be measurably increased. I am persuaded that the decline in the consumers' market is more a reflection of deficiencies in the structure of the industry than of any other factor, and may be corrected in substantial degree through removal of those deficiencies.

II. The Bootleg Problem.

During the last few years there has developed a situation which is symptomatic of the demoralization of the industry and specifically related to the serious unemployment problem, namely, illegal mining of coal. It is estimated that about twelve thousand persons are engaged in stealing coal from other people's property in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania, particularly the Southern region and about 6000 engaged in the preparation and marketing of bootleg coal. A substantial percent of these persons are licensed miners out of legitimate work. Recent estimates indicate that 50 percent of those engaged in bootlegging were engaged in mining at one time or another. Quite a number are actually on the public relief rolls. It is estimated that the total production of stolen coal has risen from one and a half million tons in 1933 to 4,000,000 tons in 1936. Those engaged in actually breaking ground and retrieving coal in this unlawful manner are probably making less than those engaged in ancillary branches of the bootleg industry such as processing the product, shipping and distributing it.

Illegal mining is not scientific mining. It leaves millions of tons unrecoverable and wastes the smaller sizes. It is conducted at great peril to life and limb. It leaves as a heritage for future miners hazards of life and for future owners of mnes excessive costs of withdrawal.

Transportation of bootleg coal is largely effected through trucks rather than rail. It sells at lower prices than legitimate coal, thus undermining legitimate wholesaling and retailing, because it pays lower real wages, no royalties, no taxes, no work compensation, no insurance. It constitutes a threat to organized labor by indirectly breaking down labor standards. Since bootleg mining is almost solely confined to domestic sizes, which are the only sizes sold by the legitimate operators at a profit, the figures as to gross production of bootleg coal must be weighted upward if they are to reflect the actual menace to legitimate business.

Sentiment in the anthracite territory respecting bootleg mining has altered during recent months. Originally it was condemned by most people. Now it is condoned by an increasing number, including the clergy, court juries and other sections of responsible opinion. It is said that if the untold riches lying in the soil of Pennsylvania are not so exploited by the operators as to give all miners a decent living wage, the miners have a moral right to exploit these riches for themselves. A changed attitude is also noticeable respecting the concept of property as applied to the natural resources of the State. Miners will tell you that coal does not belong to any group of persons or corporations but to the people at large and therefore may be seized by self help. In any case, there has begun a subtle process of differentiation between private property and social property, induced by the raw necessities of making a living and keeping one's family out of the poorhouse or off the relief rolls.

Relief of Bootlegging.

Proposals for relief of the bootleg situation reduce to the following:

(1) Some have said "let nature take its course." This rests on the hope that the available holes will be exhausted shortly, that there will be a drastic drop in prices, or that some unusual stretches of weather or other fortuity may avoid the necessity for constructive thought or intelligent planning. This suggestion deserves no serious consideration.

(2) Some members of the industry have simply insisted that bootlegging is illegal (a point with which the Commission is in entire agreement), and that the State is therefore under an immediate and forthright duty to eject the bootleggers, with use of troops if that be necessary. Accordingly it has been proposed that a date be fixed, by proclamation or otherwise, at which repressive measures will be adopted unless the coal lands are then clear of interlopers. It is urged that such proclamation should follow a fuller acceptance by the State of its duty to take care of the unemployed. Special relief, public works, C. C. C., employment bureau facilities should be established in the areas.

Without in any way condoning the wholesale theft of coal, I must record my opposition to the tactic just described. In the first place, the threat of force, even if effective, offers no permanent solution to the problem. So long as the industry fails to reemploy a substantial percentage of the miners now unemployed, or other constructive steps are not taken to alleviate the unemployment situation in the anthracite territory, bootlegging is likely to recur. In the second place, I do not believe that bootleggers will peaceably vacate unless the companies or the State who are charged with gross ineptness in the social management of this industry (they cannot escape major responsibility for the existence of bootlegging) come forward with some tangible evidence of willingness and capacity to assist in the solution of the problem; nor do I believe that public opinion will condemn the bootleg miners for declining to vacate unless some such token is forthcoming. The use of force to eject those who refuse peaceably to withdraw has obvious dangerous implications and I recommend that it should not be applied in the light of other plausible means of solution.

(3) The Commission suggested to the industry that the operating companies join in a reemployment program. It was pointed out that such reemployment would have to take place at specified and agreed upon collieries within convenient distance of the men affected; that employment would have to continue for a period of say 200 days; and that the reemployment program must not adversely affect men now employed at legitimate collieries. The number of men so reemployed should approximate the number now engaged in bootlegging who formerly worked around the mines. The basis of such rehiring might well be on accepted seniority but without discrimination against former bootleggers. The program might well involve the reopening of certain presently abandoned collieries. It might involve a joint underwriting by the industry as a whole or by those large companies now particularly hard-hit by bootlegging,—the Commission being sensible of the consideration that it would be unfair to ask any particular company to shoulder the entire risk. While bootlegging has been more or less confined to the Southern field, the problem is in fact one which touches the entire industry, for, first, there is no assurance that bootlegging, if it continues, will not creep into other fields, and, second, bootlegging affects the market price of all anthracite wherever produced.

The operating companies have freely admitted that bootlegging has not opened up any new market but has cut in on the existing market. They claim a loss of 5 million tons of coal business. It follows that if bootlegging is eliminated the operating companies will reacquire a substantial part of the present production of bootleg coal. Thus the program here outlined should have recommended itself to the self-interest of the mining companies had they had confidence in their own statements that the bootleggers found no new markets but merely stole the markets of the legitimate operators.

It was proposed that the State should do its share in conjunction with such industrial action. Special extended relief programs in the anthracite territory, special employment bureaus to aid those of the district who desire to move to active manufacturing localities, special C. C. C. enlistment, a state reforestration work program and the like, would be sound adjuncts. A fitting valuable project of filling the bootleg holes—for the safety of future miners would be a partial compensation to the owners of the stolen coal.

The foregoing was discussed with representatives of operating companies and union officials and considered from various angles. For reasons which were doubtless sincerely advanced, but which did not carry persuasion to me, the companies have refused to cooperate in the working out of this general proposal. They did state that if bootlegging were stopped they would naturally rehire consistent with increased resulting sales.

Recommendation.

In view of this refusal of the industry to recapture lost tonnage and to undertake cooperative solution of the problem, I recommend that the State acquire by condemnation, purchase or lease a few collieries or parcels of coal land in the affected areas and go into the active production of anthracite as a means of contending with the bootleg and unemployment problems. Such project is nothing more than a special works project, certainly preferable to the expenditure of an equivalent amount of public moneys for simple relief. It has, moreover, the advantage of simultaneously creating yard-stick plants against which private enterprise in the coal business may be measured and evaluated. As will be seen from other sections of this Report, government ownership and operation of the industry either in absolute or modified form, may well be the ultimate prescription for the ills of the industry; but State endorsement of this bootleg present solution involves no such large commitment.

Coincident with the acquisition of collieries or coal lands conveniently located, the State, by some public authority or corporation appropriately designated and empowered, will undertake the reemployment of miners now unemployed. The State should also undertake those ancillary aids mentioned under (3) hereof. When the project has actually gone into operation, and not before, should the removal of bootleggers by State compulsion be undertaken. The commencement of actual operations of a State project along the lines indicated will muster public opinion against continuance of bootlegging and may render unnecessary the use of force. The return of the community mores to former attitudes of lawfulness cannot be attained by bullets, but only by realistic approaches to the real distresses of the communities affected.

If the General Assembly and the Governor favor this approach I recommend that a single person be authorized to develop the proposal in terms of capital required, prospective pro forma operating budget, persons to be employed, etc. He would survey the field for cheapest available leases or purchases and report back legislation designed to carry this proposal into effect. Two observations are pertinent. As against initial capital outlay and possible operating deficit of such state authority there must be kept in mind as a financial offset the relief moneys running into the millions which would have to be paid by the state year after year to the same persons if not hired in such project. These relief dollars are the margin of financial protection residing in the undertaking. As relief dollars they produce nil. As coal project dollars they will produce saleable coal. The coal so produced—with bootlegging abandoned—would be sold by the state at prevailing market prices. In any event the recovery price of the coal, in excess of the cost of production, would be less than the cost of relief. Second—After an initial appropriation by the State the project should be set up so that the States credit would not be involved. The structure of the New York-New Jersey Port and Bridge authorities might be viewed as a guide.

Bootlegging a Mere Symptom

It must be quite clear, however, that a permanent solution of the bootleg problem and related problems is hardly possible independently of a solution of the vital economic questions facing the industry as a whole. So long as the anthracite industry continues at its present level, or declines still further, the problem of unemployment will remain, and so long as that problem remains, bootlegging may well emerge in one form or another. An anti-social device once tried and receiving substantial acquiescence by the community enters into the mores and has a tendency to reproduce in kind. Moreover, if it can be established that the industry is capable of general resuscitation, that fact has an important bearing on whether piecemeal relief, even if it can be successfully applied, should not be shelved in favor of the more inclusive solution.

In the belief that bootlegging is merely symptomatic of the prevailing illness in the industry, and can only be corrected along basic and permanent lines by restoring the industry to economic health, I now turn to the more general enduring and important problem into which I have been directed to inquire.

Even a cursory preliminary investigation of the industry discloses a most distressing condition. The factors tending toward depression and continued decline have been sketched briefly in the foregoing sections of this Report. If constructive steps are not soon taken, it is highly probably that a battle will ensue for the diminishing market, involving the spiral reduction of prices, the lowering of labor standards, and all the well-known indicia of an expiring industry. Some skirmishes in the battle have already begun. I am persuaded that the only ultimate hope of rehabilitation lies in increasing consumption through reducing cost to the consumer, and by this and other related means increasing profitable production and swelling the general level of employment. I reject as unnecessarily defeatist the view expressed from time to time that the industry cannot any longer hope to increase total consumption.

This Nation is essentially underheated. There are thousands of homes which need additional fuel for a decent life. While such conditions persist, it is absurd to take the position that anthracite is a finished industry. Indeed, from a point of view of National policy, it is plainly wise to encourage the domestic consumption of anthracite coal. The switch to fuel oil carries the threat of possible future shortages in this vital and mobile source of energy, with parallel great increase in price. A wise program of conservation would look to a continuing large reservoir of oil as opposed to anthracite. And those who believe in preserving the National arsenal in case of war should remember that it is easier to kill human beings with oil than to kill them with anthracite.

III. Analysis of Factors Determining Cost and Price

Labor (Coming Under Wage Agreement)	$2.531
Wages and Salaries of Employes Not Coming Under Wage Agreement	.303
Material and Supplies	.415
Heat, Light and Power Purchased (Net)	.151
Stripping by Contractors	.179
Other Operating Expenses	.100
Insurance	.098
Depletion	.034
Depreciation	.169
Royalties	.154
Taxes—State and Local	.262
Total Production Cost	$4.446

These are averages prepared by operators and are listed here with full knowledge of the danger of references to averages and with appreciation of the wide variations of accounting on which the averages stemmed.

I shall now examine certain of these factors to determine whether they can be reduced, so that price to the consumer may be minimized.

A. Labor Charges

While the labor charge on the production of coal in and about the mine aggregates a large percentage of the recovery cost of anthracite, being about 60% thereof, no substantial economies are feasible or possible as to this item. The prevailing union charge for mine work is not, in my opinion, excessive, and it may indeed be anticipated that the industry will in course of time be expected to revise wage scales upward. This must be true as long as the dollar yearly income per worker is so meager. Interpreted in the light of index prices for the necessaries of life, the yearly wage is less than sufficient to afford a decent living. But even if the industry were so reorganized and rehabilitated as to assure all the employed full annual employment, it is unlikely that the workers could justifiably be asked to reduce the existing wage rate.

It is suggested that ultimately this industry as all others may find it feasible and economical to give work to miners fifty weeks a year on a sliding scale of hours, the peak of hours to come in the peak season of production. Properly arranged and enforced, such a program should meet with the approval of organized labor and will result in economies in production.

B. Economies Through Increased Efficiency at the Mine

Efficiency at the mine has increased during the past generation, due to engineering and other industrial improvements. Although some collieries fall below the high level of industrial efficiency maintained by others, it is not likely that any marked economies can presently be effected—under non-unified control—in this direction. The peak of efficiency has not been reached, however, and I believe that individual output may be increased in amount and improved in quality through further application and spread of engineering improvements and mining skill. If it were possible to organize the industry without regard to the boundaries of individual ownership, great economies could doubtless be effected. The extent of submarginal coal lands now employed is a real factor in cost, but a shift to richer coal lands carries serious implications—shifts of population, etc.

C. Royalty Charges

Although not all of the industry is tied up with royalty arrangements, a re-shuffling of these fixed charges might lead to some reduction of price to the consumer. Inducements may well be provided for rewriting lease and royalty agreements by tying the royalty charge to the amount produced, on a decreasing scale per ton, thus fostering increased production at lower cost. It is clear from the figures given in the forepart of this Report that the royalty burden, expressed either in gross amount or by percentage of recovery cost at the mine, is presently excessive, when compared to returns paid to workers. A wierd anamoly lies in the fact that underpaid miners are truly supporting some of the great charities of Philadelphia via royalties to a charitable trust. Royalties of more than a dollar a ton are not unknown.

D. Encouraging Lease of Presently Nonproductive Lands

Considerable sentiment has developed, as above noted, against large coal operators who refuse to offer their extensive holdings of presently nonproductive land to lease by independents. Legislative pressure might be brought to bear to open more lands to independent operation. This might increase production but in itself would be of no use while consumption remains static. It would have the effect merely of partially shifting the situs of production. It is highly doubtful whether it would decrease cost to the consumer, as high initial capital charges are incurred in the exploitation of new coal lands and production by small units is in any event likely to be at high cost.

E. Tax Burdens

The local and State tax burden on coal lands is substantial and quite probably is figured on valuations far exceeding actual or potential value. Realistically the taxes on going companies are increased by the failure of others to meet tax charges, since local communities are compelled to raise the rate of assessment. Even so, many localities are in dire financial straits on account of tax arrearages. The consumer of anthracite is paying in one form or another for taxes levied against the vast acreage that is not being mined. Re-examination of the law in regard to escheat to the State of coal lands in default of taxes might well be of value. The industry is now faced with this Alice in Wonderland situation: A mountainside contains a million tons of anthracite, but the anthracite will not be touched for fifty years. Its present value is of course negligible. No one would give more than a pittance for it. It has only a negative value in 1937. But a fifty year tax burden is still to be impressed on that reservoir of coal. In fact if, as in many or most cases, the unused mountainside is owned by an operating company, that enormous continuing tax burden is largely paid by the consumer at the present time in the form of a charge on every ton of coal that the operating company produces and sells. It is no answer to say that the tax burden is not added to the consumer's cost because some companies have no large unused coal reserves, since all major companies sell their coal at substantially the same price.

Any consideration of tax reduction runs into the paramount and intransigent fact that local communities and the State must meet their large and increasingly larger costs of functioning in one way or another. Cutting down the tax charges on mine land in the hope of recouping the tax in some other way less burdensome to the industry, as by income tax, while deserving of further legislative consideration, is not an immediate or important prospect, since the companies have scant taxable income.

F. Railroad Freight Rates

A goodly percentage of the great spread between cost of coal at the mine and cost to the consumer is taken up by railroad freight rates. As above noted, the average freight rate on hauling anthracite to tidewater is $2.25 per ton. Roughly a quarter of the consumer's dollar, in the best territorial market for anthracite, goes to pay the freight rate. It is too obvious to require further explanation that these freight rates are not based on cost to the railroads. Comparisons such as the ones given above of freight rates on anthracite with freight rates on other commodities, would indicate that anthracite is paying too large a price for freightage. It may be answered that the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1925 found otherwise. But the situation facing the railroads is actually so acute that they might wisely forego such legal rights that they may have a fair present return on the carriage of anthracite, in the prospect of realizing a true future fair return. It might be financially sound for the railroads to carry anthracite coal to market at an experimental rate for a period of a year or more at far less than theoretical cost, so as to revive the industry by artificial stimulus, create a large consumption of anthracite and beat off the mounting threat represented by truck carriage. The resulting flow back into the anthracite territory of consumer commodities which would be purchased out of increased wage payments to those engaged in the mining industry, might to a considerable extent compensate the railroads even during such interim period. The tariff principle as applied to sick, failing or new industries, affords an interesting parallel. Transportation of anthracite coal at negligible rates during an experimental period might serve to create something resembling a tariff embargo against competing fuels.

In any event it is plain that if the railroads do not soon reduce their rates, they will find that they have lost not only their anthracite freight but virtually their entire freight business in the district. Substantial reducion of railroad rates is not only needful for the anthracite industry but may also prove vital to the continued solvency of the railroads serving the district.

G. Pyramiding of Price to the Consumer

Apart from the differential taken up by railroad freight rates, the marketing and distribution of coal from the mine to the consumer results in a great spread in which are reflected wholesale and retail distribution charges, with the conventional pyramiding of cost and profits familiar in many other industries which largely rely on independent marketing, aggravated in the anthracite industry by various special causes not now necessary to relate. There is frank recognition among operators of the fact that this spread can be minimized and many operators have in fact concentrated on this front as offering a strong possibility of reducing cost to the consumer.

H. Advertising, etc.

Anthracite is losing its market to competitive fuels not through any deficiency in the product itself but through lack of organized and intelligent advertising by the industry as a whole. For instance, the comparative advantages of automatic anthracite stokers for home use as compared with devices used at present for oil, have never been sufficiently brought home to the public. Anthracite has some inherent superiorities over all "substitutes" now in use and could make a great bid in the fuel market against bituminous coal, coke, oil, natural gas and electricity if the cost of anthracite could be rendered market-wise valid. The educational program begun recently by Anthracite Industries, Inc., is certainly in the right direction. It does not, however, touch upon joint marketing, joint financing of appliance purchases, or controls over middlemen and retailers. In many anthracite consuming states we now find legislation permitting price maintenance through to the consumer of branded articles. This new economic pattern should be explored for branded coal.

Sine Qua Non of Recovery: Unified Action

Any survey of the sore spots in the anthracite industry must leave the investigator with a single striking conclusion, namely, that most or all of them cannot be successfully attacked except by concerted action of the industry as a whole. For instance, the reduction of railroad freight rates, if not accomplished by the voluntary and farsighted action of the railroads themselves, can be accomplished only by a unified industry through extensive and costly legal battles and the use of other costly pressures. The Governor of Pennsylvania might well act as the representative of an interested party—the people of his state—in such proceedings. While anthracite coal operators have shown a considerable capacity for standing together against the demands of labor, they have indicated no similar capacity for standing together on other questions at least as vital to their own prosperity. The problem of railroad freight rates is far more vital to the future welfare of the industry than any attempt to reduce existing labor costs. The industry's failure to get together on freight rates is doubtless due in part to the financial or subtle nonfinancial connection between the ownership of coal and the ownership of railroads. In other connections the cleavage of producers between "old line" and independents and the subsistence of marginal competition, as well as various psychological factors, have likewise prevented united action. Yet the industry has now reached a state of demoralization in which unified action is essential not only to the recovery of lost advantages but to prevent complete evaporation of the business. And here it should be noted—as will be more specifically pointed out hereinafter—that there is no such mutual trust in the industry as will render voluntary gentlemen's agreements feasible, even if lawful. If made lawful where legal doubt now exists, voluntary agreements import the danger that they will be used to boost rather than reduce cost to the consumer; here is slight reason to believe that operators would take the long range point of view and realize that they will ultimately make more money by reducing prices in the ultimate market.

IV. Proposals for Reform

Nature of Proposals Here Considered

From a social point of view we should conceive of the anthracite industry as a part of The Fuel Industry of the United States. The national government should dominate, regulate, own or operate all the fuel reserves and supplies of the nation. I am in accord with the suggestions of all other members of this Commission that the national government should act in this field of national necessity. Either by a modified Guffey Coal Act for anthracite, an extension of the Federal Power Commission concepts, the creation of a vital national Heat and Power Conservation Board, or by direct ownership and operation the national power must eventually be employed. In the absence of national steps toward solutions the State should proceed. And State procedure need not be a throttle to subsequent national action. It can pave the way.

While interstitial improvements are possible in the industry and some legislative action may be taken in that direction, I believe that a fundamental attack is necessary to cure the basic defects of the industry.

The principal proposals along this line are the following:

A. Proposals for voluntary cooperative efforts in the industry with or without governmental guidance;

B. Proposals for production, price and labor control of the industry through a code or the like, enforceable by governmental sanction;

C. Proposals for regulating the industry in effect as a public utility;

D. Proposals for complete or partial government ownership and operation of the industry.

To which may be added, as a consideration cutting across the foregoing:

E. Separate treatment of peripheral coal lands.

I repeat and emphasize that the validity of these proposals is to be judged primarily by their probable effect in increasing consumption, and thus profitable production, through reduction of price to the consumer. They are to be judged also by their ability to treat the industry as a process from mine all the way through to the consumer. Where the objective is reduction of consumer prices, controls at the retail end of the chain deserve peculiar attention. The periodic demoralization which has attended the development of the industry cannot long continue without serious effects on the vital interests of the Commonwealth.

A. Proposals for voluntary cooperative efforts within the industry without governmental control or with minimal governmental control.

(1) Agreements respecting marketing and distribution.

The legal victory lately won by a certain branch of the bituminous coal industry in the Appalachian Coal case has given some impetus to a movement toward cooperative marketing and distribution of anthracite coal by voluntary agreement among operators. The substance of the idea is to organize the operators, regionally or otherwise, by voluntary agreement, in such a way as to enable them jointly to fix the prices at which their product shall be sold and facilitate joint marketing and distribution. Such a procedure has been held valid by the Supreme Court, as against an attack under the anti-trust laws, in a situation where there was no overt or concealed effort among the cooperating bituminous mine owners to limit production, and where the combination was not sufficiently large to stifle competition unreasonably by fixing the general price on the interstate market. While only a single combination of this kind was before the court in the Appalachian case, which produced not more than 12% of the entire output of bituminous coal east of the Mississippi, it appeared that a substantial number of bituminous coal producers intended to organize themselves in similar fashion, the proposed result being a series of like combinations organized pursuant to similar agreements, which would compete among themselves.

The proposal is made that a similar device may be applied in the anthracite industry; that operators should voluntarily organize by agreements running regionally or otherwise for the purpose of securing the benefits of stabilized prices and of marketing and distributing their products jointly without, however, stifling competition on the interstate market. This, it is claimed, would stimulate consumption, increase opportunities for advertising and the like, and have the effect of ultimately fixing the price of anthracite coal to consumers at a lower level than now prevails.

Without intimating that the device here considered will necessarily fail to accomplish some slight benefits, if applied to the anthracite industry, I desire to point out several obvious limitations on its effectiveness and some cautions as to its basic desirability.

As contrasted with the bituminous industry, the anthracite industry is to a large extent monopolistic in design and structure; it does not suffer from overproduction as does the bituminous industry. Whereas it is theoretically possible to sustain a reasonable amount of competition in the interstate bituminous market, notwithstanding regional pooling of marketing and distribution, it is to be feared that the effect in the anthracite field would be to enhance and encourage existing monopolistic tendencies. And so, if made effective over large areas of the anthracite industry, the cooperative agreements would run into obvious and necessary legal restrictions, Federal and State. Moreover, it is questionable whether there would be economic or social justification for relaxing these legal restrictions. There is little reason for believing that anthracite producers are so different from other industrialists in the Nation that they would not use these agreements to boost rather than lower prices to the consumer. It may also be predicted, on the basis of past experience, that fractious minorities would appear in sufficient strength to break down general enforcement of the agreements. Finally, I hold out no hope for such a program unless it actually lays hold of conditions all the way down the line to the retailer and consumer.

(2) Voluntary merger looking in the direction of unified marketing and distribution.

It has been suggested that the advantages of unified marketing and distribution—which lie at the base of reduction of cost to the consumer—may be secured through voluntary merger or consolidation of the substantial majority of operating companies, which are now in varying conditions of financial distress. Such merger or consolidation would result in a single entity dominating the industry and dominating the product all the way to the consumer. In due time the entity should be able to compete other operators out of business or educate them to realize the wisdom of coming into the merged company.

Obviously any merger without comprehensive State control both of the consolidated company and its competitors, would be of doubtful legality and socially unthinkable. That control might well extend to the quantum of production and the prices charged and should in any case be as pervasive as public utility control.

This suggestion is subject to many of the cautions enumerated under (1) hereof, but, in point of probable effectiveness, has substantial advantages.

Legislation would have to be prepared in advance setting forth both the framework of the merger and the controls intended to be exercised by the State on the resulting consolidated company and its competitors. The negotiations directed toward merger should be conducted under a definite time-dead-line. Difficulties inhere, of course, in securing a meeting of minds as to the formula under which existing companies, which vary widely in the value of their productive equipment and land holdings, would be taken into the merger. This is not, however, an insurmountable obstacle.

While the consolidated company would be in a position to exercise considerable "restraint of trade" within the conventional definition, the question whether it would restrain trade "unreasonably" might turn on the degree and wisdom of statutory control imposed by the Commonwealth. Statutory regulation of prices in the interests of consumers and prohibition of monopolistic limitation of production should go a long way toward preventing prosecution under the Federal anti-trust laws. The end purpose of the proposal is, as above-noted, not to restrict but to increase production by opening new markets through reduction in price to the consumer. Assuming that the State regulatory power establishes "reasonable" prices at retail in or out of the State, in my opinion the Sherman law could not be successfully invoked. The danger of other States setting up coal authorities to control local coal prices is mostly a phantom and if the State should fix reasonable prices the danger is slight.

(3) Agreements respecting proration or other control on production.

The device of voluntary agreements looking to proration or other control on production, considered even apart from grave legal difficulties, runs into problems such as those outlined above and some additional and special problems. Of course proration or other devices to limit production are not needed; indeed quite the opposite appears to be required. Agreements by which production would not be limited but more equitably and rationally apportioned from any point of view deemed desirable for the welfare of the industry as a whole, would almost unquestionably come to grief against the realities of separate private ownership of mines. Here also should be noticed the fact that the recent tendency to concentrate production and to develop large breakers, involving an investment of many millions of dollars, may well be found to be of doubtful business value. I have also noted and discussed above the sentiment toward compelling large operators owning large amounts of unmined coal acreage to lease these lands to independents.

B. Proposals for production, price and labor control of the industry through code or the like, enforceable by governmental sanction.

Federal control of the bituminous coal industry through the Guffey Coal Act has been declared unconstitutional so far as wage and labor control was concerned. A majority of the justices declined to pass on the price control features of the Act on the ground that these were not severable from the wage and labor controls, and thus denied enforcement of any part of the Act. The wage and labor provisions of the Guffey Coal Act were held invalid, however, solely upon the grounds (1) that they did not relate to interstate commerce, and (2) that they involved improper delegation of governmental power to private groups. This leaves open the possibility of State-wide legislation modeled upon the Guffey Coal Act, with proper safeguards against improper delegation. While it is unlikely that such legislation can correct the bituminous problem, since that is not territorially confined to any single State, State legislation may possibly be constitutionally and effectively applied to the anthracite industry, which is indigenous to the State of Pennsylvania. On the constitutional side, the attitude of the Supreme Court expressed in the recent Labor Act cases gives ground for some optimism.

The proposal is to vest in a governmental agency the power to fix minimum and maximum prices for anthracite coal, based upon detailed legislative standards, scientifically calculated so far as science may be of assistance in so heterogeneous and complex a problem, to control production if that be necessary, with wages and conditions of employment fixed through collective bargaining. I recommend that study be given to this proposal. The following cautions, however, are plainly necessary:

The Guffey Coal Act and most similar legislative enactments, including the National Industrial Recovery Act, were designed to operate principally in industrial areas where over-production and depressed prices were the evils to be corrected. It was hoped that by fixing minimum wages and eliminating unfair trade practices cut-throat competition could be reduced and profits restored; in the long run production might be stimulated, but the initial purpose was to prevent the further accumulation of unmarketable surpluses and sweated operations. And thus under the Guffey Coal Act the immediate task was to fix minimum rather than maximum prices (although the power to fix maximum prices was also conferred) and to halt the further demoralization of the bituminous market. The problem in the anthracite industry is quite the reverse and I am by no means at present persuaded that the technique of governmental control by code will be as effective in such a case.

Moreover, it may be seriously questioned whether a State-wide code (in the absence of a high degree of the exercise of the State price fixing process) can deal effectively with marketing and distribution conditions which extend far beyond the boundaries of Pennsylvania. As control of the middlemen's and retailers' end is obviously essential if the aim be to reduce and control costs to the consumer, this caution is of paramount significance.

Doubtless the unification of the industry through intimate governmental regulation and fixation of standards would place the industry in a far better position than it now occupies in respect, for example, of beating down the railroad freight rates. But in this connection again, the historical and present nexus between the ownership of the anthracite industry and the ownership of the railroad carriers must serve to qualify any optimistic predictions.

C. Proposals for regulation of the industry in effect as a public utility.

Further study is warranted of the proposal which has been made from time to time to convert the anthracite industry into a public utility by legislative direction, and to subject it to regulation as such. While any realistic analysis of the facts would sustain a legislative finding that the anthracite industry in Pennsylvania is affected wit ha public use, it cannot be too confidently predicted that the courts would susain such a finding. The Nebbia milk case holds out some hope.

Apart from legalisms, however, it is again obvious that regulation of the industry by use of the conventional methods heretofore employed in respect to public service industries would not necessarily be efficacious. Requiring a license of public necessity and convenience for the opening of new coal mines, while highly salutary in general, would not at present offer a solution to the pressing problems of the industry—except as it might be used as a questionable corrective to the bootleg problem—since there is no present threat of extreme compteition in production or unnecessary duplication of existing services. Again, public utility control has employed as its central technique the fixing of maximum prices yielding a fair return based on invested capital, the cost of reproduction of plants, etc. Since it is claimed that anthracite operators by and large are now and have for some time past been realizing a net loss from operations, or at any rate have not been realizing any high profits, it is difficult to see how fixation of maximum prices theoretically yielding a fair return would be opposite or significant.

I do not mean to imply that certain controls commonly associated with public utility regulation would not be useful and effective. There is abundant need for at least as great a measure of governmental control over the anthracite industry as is now imposed on railroads, power and light companies and other public service industries. Regulation would have to move, however, in a somewhat different direction. This would be a new type of regulation designed to increase production and reduce consumer cost.

To cite but one minor point in which regulation of the anthracite business might conform to regulation of other public utilities: a uniform accounting system for coal companies is imperatively needed before anyone can speak with entire assurance about the true set-up of the business. Full disclosures should be compelled in various other connections. The legislature, after making an appropriate finding that the anthracite industry is affected with a public use, could proceed step by step to plenary regulation of the industry in the public interest. The process might be slow since, or as we have indicated, the conventional problems faced in the regulation of public utilities are present in many instances in exactly converse form in the anthracite industry.

Here as under the sections of this Report dealing with control of the industry through measures like the Guffey Coal Act, it should be pointed out that one definite advantage will be gained. The industry wil be so far organized as to be able to attack the problem facing it with a united front and with new courage derived from that strength, although it may be questioned, here as in the section dealing with control by code, whether the industry will be sufficiently implemented to deal with such paramount questions as marketing and distribution.

D. Proposals for complete or partial government ownership and operation of the industry.

Increasingly the State and National governments have marked a distinction between ordinary industries and those exploiting great latent natural resources such as timber and oil. Public opinion has come to recognize, and correctly so, that private ownership and the profit-making motive cannot be trusted to develop and utilize these reserves of State and National wealth in the public interest. And therefore public opinion has supported progressively stricter regulation of these industries by governmental authority, and more recently has sanctioned and encouraged the acquisition and operation of these industries by the government as a public trust.

These considerations apply with particular force to anthracite coal. If the history of this industry teaches anything, it is the lesson that private capital, left to itself, can no more be relied on to place the industry on an intelligent basis than could the railroads in the early days of transportation development be relied on to use their franchises in the public behoof. This, irrespective of the high integrity and ability of present management. Inherent in their competition lies also their destructive defeat. Governmental regulation may ameliorate existing evils but it cannot do a complete job: this also is the lesson of history in the cognate field of public utility regulation. The complete solvent of the problem, and one which should be given careful consideration by the General Assembly, may be the acquisition by a public authority of anthracite coal lands and their exploitation by that authority.

It is recommended that study be given to the proposal that there be created a State Coal Authority along the lines of the New York-New Jersey Port Authority, which shall acquire all coal fields by condemnation or other appropriate form of acquisition and, after an initial outlay without pledging the credit of the State, return to existing owners of mines and liens or other creditors thereof, in exchange for their existing holdings, obligations of such public authority having equivalent real value. Such public authority would proceed to reorganize the industry along the best available economic and scientific lines, and would enter the field as an active competitor with other fuels on the interstate market. Such a state owned Authority would clearly be beyond the Federal regulatory power as to monopoly or price where its economic function was to reduce rates, increase production, enhance employment and release trade. It would act to overcome the restraint of trade now implicit in bewildered private ownership.

I am sufficiently sanguine of the competency of the government of Pennsylvania to believe that the State can run the anthracite industry more effectively than private capital. I believe that this proposal offers an exciting possibility in the public control of a natural resource with the odds in favor of its ultimate success. It offers a unique opportunity for procuring for the industry the true advantages of monopoly. I am frank to admit that government operation involves so-called political implications, but it is high time that such implications be faced directly and answered squarely. The record of achievement in government ownership and operation in this country affords no basis for egregious pessimism. For every failure or corruption in the area of state operation I can point to at least two in the field of private finance or industry. Over long stretches private capital in industries fails to yield any net return. The record which the state would have to excel in anthracite gives the State a substantial head start. The creation of a civil service for higher employees and managers is a distinct possibility. As I write this section the press reports that Great Britain has appratched its serious coal problem directly in the avenues of governmental ownership and control.

The figures given above as to the present structure of the industry indicate that the burden of obligations which will rest on the public authority by reason of the conversion of existing holdings into obligations of the public authority would not be excessive even if adjusted at fixed interest requirements. The alternative is the issuance of some form of income debentures. The basic real worth of the industry is at present low, since its profit is low. Even the book values placed by the companies on coal reserves owned by themselves have been shrinking in recent years. I do not suggest that the coal lands may be picked up at bargain rates because of the existing debacles in the industry, but the prospect of acquiring the lands at a good and workable initial capitalization is unquestionably bright.

Since present competitive managements have succeeded only in depressing coal securities to successivley lower levels, existing security holders may indeed welcome the opportunity to convert their present dead investments into new securities of a public authority. In the long run they woudl be well advised to encourage rather than oppose such a proposal.

Failing the adoption of the plan for ownership and operation of the coal lands by a public authority, consideration should be given to the creation of one or more yardstick mines, as heretofore indicated in connection with the bootlegging problem.

While I have suggested above a means of financing government ownership and operation without pledging the credit of the State in the enterprise, alternative possibilities may be equally feasible. In any case and no matter which proposal along this line is adopted, it may be wise to maintain some representation of existing coal interests in the controlling board or governmental corporation. In any event the specific means of putting such a program into effect is a question of choice among innumerable workable alternatives.

It need hardly be noted that government ownership will result in that unification of forces which we have denominated the sine qua non of industrial recovery. It will create a unit powerful enough to meet each and every problem now surrounding and challenging the industry, and in particular it offers the greatest hope short of national ownership of solving the paramount questions respecting marketing of the product. It plainly offers the only state chance of planned exploitation of coal reserves and location and distribution of production in the coal area, in the light not only of industrial but of social welfare. Be it noted that government operation does not necessarily mean further concentration of operations although it undoubtedly means a gradual reallocation of mines.

E. Separate Treatment of Peripheral Coal Lands.

Running athwart several of the proposals considered above is the possibility of adopting a special policy with respect to presently unmined coal lands. Even if the industry is to continue under private management, with or without the various State controls hereinabove discussed, there is much to be said for Federal, or State, or combined Federal and State, acquisition of the huge reserves of coal lands not being mined. Such reserves are many times as large, geographically and tonnage-wise as the coal areas now being mined.

I have to point out again that these lands are not so much a State as a National heat and power reserve for future generations. Unscientific or uneconomical use of the reserve is equivalent to the waste of a National asset. A National Fuel Authority to advise on National problems of conservation of all natural repositiories of energy is vitally needed. It is reasonable, therefore, to suggest that the Federal authority (possibly through the R. F. C.) or, failing the Federal, the State authority (and joint effort is not impossible), take over by purchase or condemnation the peripheral coal lands and exercise a needful check on future development of the industry by controlling subsequent exploitation. This control might take the form of leases or royalty arrangements geared to production, as operating companies, having exhausted their present lands, are obliged to move into new areas under government ownership. Through this basic control of coal to be mined conditions of operating and marketing might be laid down for all future users.

Operating companies presently owning substantial unused coal lands would, after such acquisition, be directly relieved of taxes, depletion and certain interest burdens and other similar charges. The payments made to the government authority as consideration for the later exploitation of these lands would take the place of such tax and depletion charges, etc., but there is more than a fair possibility that the aggregate burden would be less, through more favorable interest rates, reduction of bookkeeping depletion entries and the like, thus implying lower prices to the consumer. Of even greater importance, perhaps, is the fact that such a program would make the mining of coal virtually dependent upon a franchise, which might be appropriately conditioned in the public interest.

Conclusion

This Report contains (1) a definite program for legislative action in respect of the bootleg problem; (2) various suggestions for the basic reform of the entire anthracite coal industry.

Shortness of time and the absence of factual data have prevented the submission of a single, definite and detailed recommendation from me as to the general reorganization or revision of the basic structure of the industry. I believe that this or a similar Commission should be directed to continue investigation to the end that a concrete program may be submitted for legislative and executive action some time before the winter months. The work of this or any similar Commission may be expedited by a legislative declaration at this time indicating which if any of the several proposals should be pursued.

To adopt any one of the aforementioned proposals will seem too adventurous to some people. But may it be pointed out that the habit of laissez faire has of recent years not brought peace and plenty to any of the interests impinging on anthracite coal, and a policy of "do nothing" may be the most costly path for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The cooperation of John Habistrah and P. Bernard Nortman is appreciatively acknowledged.

Respectfully submitted,

.....

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE BOARD OF PUBLIC EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PITTSBURGH

To the Honorable House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Your Committee appointed pursuant to Resolution No. 27, Serial No. 53 of the House of Representatives of the Session of 1937-39 has the honor to submit the following as its report.

Foreword

Resolution No. 27, Serial No. 53 of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was introduced on February 15, 1937 by the Honorable Homer S. Brown of Allegheny County. Same was reported from the Committee on Education on March 31, 1937 and was adopted by the House of Representatives on April 6, 1937. On April 7, 1937 the following Representatives were named by the Honorable Roy E. Furman, Speaker of the House, to serve on this Committee: Chairman—L. Kenneth Harkins, Allegheny County; Homer S. Brown, Allegheny County; Elmer J. Holland, Allegheny County; George J. Sarraf, Allegheny County; Al Tronzo, Allegheny County.

Pursuant to the aforementioned resolution, the Committee held two public hearings in the Council Chambers in the City-County Building in the City of Pittsburgh on April 24 and May 1, 1937.

At the hearings numerous witnesses, both for and against the resolution, appeared and their testimony was recorded and transcribed in detail by the official reporter of the House of Representatives, Mr. Harry Bastow, together with numerous exhibits and schedules; said schedules and exhibits are filed herewith and made part of the record of this report.

The specific assignment given the Committee is expressed in a clause of the Resolution of the House of Representatives hereinbefore referred to and stated as follows:

> "Resolved That the Speaker of the House appoint a Committee of five members of the House of Representatives whose duty it shall be to make an investigation bearing upon the question as to whether or not the said Board of Public Education of the City of Pittsburgh refuses to employ Negro teachers on the basis of color. Said Committee to make its report to the House of Representatives before the close of the present session."

The Committee takes pleasure in acknowledging the assistance and co-operation of the City of Pittsburgh for permitting the use of Council Chambers for the purpose of conducting the hearings, and also to all others whose efforts aided the Committee in the conduct of the investigation.

The Committee finds from its investigation the following facts which are undisputed and undenied; namely,

That the City of Pittsburgh is a school district of the first class having an enrollment of approximately 110,000 students of which 9%, or approximately 10,000 pupils, are Negro children.

That there are approximately 3,200 teachers employed by the Board of Education in the City of Pittsburgh among which there are no Negro teachers regularly employed on a full time basis.

That the Board of Education of the City of Pittsburgh consists of 15 members appointed by the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas in conformity with the provisions of the School Code.

That of the many schools under the control of the Board of Public Education, the record shows that in several instances the number of Negro children far exceed the white children in certain schools. An example of this may be found in the Watt Street School which has an enrollment of approximately 1,100 students of which there were, according to the estimate of the Superintendent of Schools of the City of Pittsburgh, 25 white children. Other schools in which there is a preponderance of Negro students are Rose Street School, McKelvey School, Moorehead School. Franklin Street School and the Herron Hill Junior High School.

The Committee in discussing the findings of fact feels obliged to divide the question into two distinct parts; namely, the period covering the time from the enactment of the School Code in 1911 to 1932 and the period from 1932 to the present day. The latter period covering the time when a new method of establishing a new eligibility list took effect.

In the discussion of the appointment of teachers for the period first stated—said period being from 1911 up to 1932—the Solicitor for the School Board who appeared in opposition to the Resolution stated in his brief as follows:

> "The evidence shows that shortly after the School District was established in 1911, the Board adopted a rule that no teacher should be elected except on recommendation of the Superintendent of Schools; that during all the intervening years, no teacher had ever been elected except on his recommendation, and that a recommendation of the Superintendent in this regard had never been turned down."

The evidence further discloses that beginning in the year 1915 when the first graduating class of teachers training school, formerly known as the Colfax Training School and now the Frick Training School for Teachers, was established there have been eight or nine Negro students who have graduated from that school. That during the same years, it was the policy of the School Board to appoint a large number of the graduates of this school to teaching positions. One year, particularly, all the students graduating from this school were appointed to teaching positions with the exception of two Negro students and this notwithstanding the fact that in the class eligible to teacher in the kindergarten a colored student ranked No. 1 on the rating of the graduates of that year. That during this period numerous protests were made to the Superintendent of Schools concerning the appointment of the colored graduates from the training school, and, likewise, protests were made to the members of the Board. But it does not appear, from the testimony, that the Board has officially taken action on this question.

However, from all the testimony, including letters written to the Solicitor which are in evidence, communications and interviews from many prominent citizens of the City of Pittsburgh, together with the fact that one R. Templeton Smith, an outstanding industrialist and friend of the Negro, was asked by the President of the Board of Education to appear and did appear at the Board of Education Building to present the problem of colored teachers before the Board, the Board has not a record of a single instance of any action taken upon this issue. The Committee, therefore, from all the testimony, feels that the lack of action on the part of the School Board was not due to the lack of knowledge but due to the desire of the Board not to consider the issue.

Beginning with the second period as designated above which was in 1932, new eligibility rules were established by which the selection of teachers was limited to those persons whose names appeared among the three highest and the Superintendent of the Board of Education was restricted in his recommendations to this classification.

Since 1932 the eligibility lists from which teachers have been selected has been composed of two sets of applicant —60% of whom have been graduates of the Frick Training School and 40% of whom have reached the eligibility list through competitive examinations.

The ratio of graduates of Frick Training School for Teachers with respect to the total number on the eligibility lists has been arbitrarily fixed by the Board of Education at 60% for the purpose of developing the Frick Training School for Teachers.

From the testimony it appears that entrance to the Frick Training School was largely accomplished by certification of the principal of the high school from which the student entering the Frick Training School graduated. It seems that others who may not be on the list recommended by the principals but who stand high in the classes may apply.

The remaining 40% of the persons on the eligibility list reach their positions by reason of successfully passing a competitive written examination.

The testimony shows that an applicant for a high school teacher must have experience of three years of teaching and must be a college graduate, that an applicant for a position in the elementary schools must have a teachers' certificate for elementary work and must have had four years professional training beyond high school. An applicant is not permitted to take the examinations referred to above unless these requirements are met. From the results of the written examination together with a consideration of the applicant's scholastic and professional training, a composite ranking is given the applicant which establishes his or her position on the proper eligibility list.

The records of these students are studied, they are given a series of examinations or tests and a composite score of the result upon these factors of scholastic and professional qualification determines their relative standing. They are numbered 1-2-3-4 etc. in rank. Then the individuals who rank highest are asked to take a medical examination and the 30 applicants who stand highest relatively in rank and who pass medical examinations conducted by the doctors employed by the Board of Education are accepted for admission to the training school.

The Committee finds:

That since 1922 no Negro applicant has been admitted to the training school although many have applied. Since 1930 only one colored applicant's name has appeared on the eligibility list and that one appeared through the examination of March, 1936. This one applicant has qualified as a teacher in the department of music but has not as yet been appointed.

That one Negro applicant, a young girl, finished high school with the highest honors and in 1936 made application to the Frick Training School for Teachers. Having reached fourth place in rank on the list of all the students who applied that year to enter the training school, this Negro applicant, as is required of all applicants, took the competitive medical examination and was disqualified after having been examined by the school's medical authorities. The Committee also finds that this applicant was at approximately the same time examined by her family physician and was found to be physically fit. The testimony of the physician for the school board leads the Committee to believe that the medical examination given by the School Board was of such a nature and character that it did not show the actual physical condition of the applicant.

That the legal responsibility for the appointment of teachers under the provisions of the School Code rests upon the members of the Board of Education of the City of Pittsburgh.

That prior to 1932 the Board of Education adopted a policy of treating the problem of the Negro teacher in an informal manner with the result that no records appear on the minutes of the Board of Education with respect to the issue at point.

That the Board of School Directors accepts the recommendations of the Superintendent of School with regard to the appointment of teachers.

That up to 1932 that several Negroes although qualified and although in high positions on the eligibility lists were neither recommended by the Superintendent of Schools for appointment nor appointed by the Board of School Directors, although other candidates for appointment were selected from lower positions on the same eligibility list.

That the present Superintendent of Schools will recommend those Negro teachers whose names appear on the respective eligibility lists either now or in the future in the order of their rank, but that the actual appointment of such Negro teachers would be a matter resting with the discretion of the Board of Public Education and that such recommendations would not be an appointment unless the Board approved of the recommendation. However, the attitude of the several influential members of the Board who have been leaders in formulating the policies of the Board did not show a helpful attitude with respect to the solution of the issue involved.

That there is no direct evidence of discrimination with regards to the competitive examination but that the instance of the young Negro girl referred to earlier as an applicant for admission to the Frick Training School for Teachers is a direct example of discrimination and of abuse of the purposes of a medical examination.

Conclusions

Your Committee from the facts as stated above draws or makes the following conclusions:

In view of the fact that several Negro graduates of the Frick Training School for Teachers met all of the requirements necessary for their appointment as teachers and that they ranked higher than others who did secure appointments and that they were not appointed and further that subsequent to the new eligibility rules, which were inaugurated in 1932, no Negro applicant has been able to enter the training school although one in particular met every requirement except a physical examination which the Committee feels was of such a nature as to cause said applicant to be disqualified unfairly. The Committee feels

That from 1915 to 1922 there is sufficient evidence to indicate direct discrimination against Negro teachers;

That since the new eligibility requirements of 1932, although the evidence of discrimination is not as clear and direct as in the period mentioned above, that nevertheless from the sum total of all the evidence sufficient proof has been presented to conclude that the allegation of the resolution, to wit, "the said Board of Public Education of the City of Pittsburgh refuses to employ Negro teachers on the basis of color" has been substantiated.

Recommendations

1. Each member of the Board be sent a copy of the report of this Committee.
2. Hereafter the Board of Public Education be called upon to exercise closer supervision of appointment of teachers to the end that all persons be given a fair opportunity to become teachers regardless of race, color or creed.
3. The Board recognizes the fact, both as a unit and as individual members, that the legal responsibility for the appointment of teachers under the law rests with the Board and that conversely the refusal to appoint teachers on any basis other than as provided by law rests likewise upon the Board.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO STUDY THE UNICAMERAL SYSTEM AS APPLIED TO LEGISLATIVE BODIES

of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

Extraordinary Session of May, 1936.

To the Honorable House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Your Committee appointed pursuant to Resolution No. 40, Serial No. 60 of the House of Representatives of the Extraordinary Session of May 1936 has the honor to submit the following as its report.

Foreword

Resolution No. 40, Serial No. 60 of the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was introduced on July 10, 1936 by the Honorable L. Kenneth Harkins of Allegheny County, Honorable Eugene A. Caputo of Beaver County, Honorable William J. Eroe of Lawrence County and Honorable Al Tronzo of Allegheny County. This resolution was reported from the Committee on Rules on July 10, 1936 and was adopted on July 29, 1936. On November 18, 1936 the following Representatives were named to serve on the Committee:

Chairman—L. Kenneth Harkins—Allegheny Co.
Eugene A. Caputo—Beaver Co.
James Kelso—Lawrence Co.
Eugene J. Hagerty—Philadelphia Co.
Al Tronzo—Allegheny Co.
E. Kent Kane—McKean Co.
Jacob B. Schrock—Somerset Co.

Pursuant to the aforementioned resolution, the Committee investigated and studied the subject matter referred to in the resolution.

The specific assignment given the Committee is expressed in a clause of the Resolution of the House of Representatives herein referred to and stated as follows:

"Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives appoint seven members of this House to serve as a committee to study the unicameral system as applied to legislative bodies, and to report its findings and recommendations to the House of Representatives at its regular session in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven."

The Committee finds that in many respects, the Legislative branch of our political structure has remained the most static part of our system of state government. The Constitutional amendment adopted by the State of Nebraska which inaugurated the unicameral system of government in that state was the first successful attempt by any of our states to reform its Legislative structure since the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution. As operated today, the present system is almost exactly like that in existence a century ago. The Legislative system consisting of two separate and individual houses, each with authority and powers substantially alike, is the same as that which was in existence a century ago. Members of both houses get their authority from and in many cases are elected from the same voters with but slight differences with respect to territory represented. However, members of the various State Senates have certain advantages over members of the various lower houses which are essentially as follows:

1. The number of Senators is usually smaller than the number of members of the House of Representatives.
2. The Senatorial term is usually longer than the Representative or Member of the House.
3. Senators have reserved for them the confirmation of nominations made by the Governor which at least indirectly assures the Senators a finger in the state patronage.

With regard to most legislation, both houses have usually the same powers. Although appropriation bills are required, by Constitutional provision, to originate in the lower house, in actual practice this procedure amounts to little or nothing in any state. Legislative committees still meet behind closed doors where the most vital business of legislatures is transacted. The present system does not lend itself to the solution of the problem of establishing party leadership and party responsibility in state legislatures.

Society was agricultural in nature and wealth individual in nature at the time of the establishment of the old bicameral system. But now society is largely urban and wealth has become corporate in nature.

From a study of the material, one observes that from a practical standpoint State Government in the United States is a form of local government and that, therefore, it should resemble more closely in its structure and workings the form of local government than that of the National Government. For this reason, the reforms made recently in local government, noticeably in municipal government, should be quite suggestive towards the obtaining of the similar practices in the State Government.

It seems that the opportunity is at hand for state authorities to take heed to the experience of city governments and to set about to make a complete re-organization of our legislative structure and procedure along similar lines. Adjustment to new economic and social conditions makes imperative sweeping changes in the machinery of our state government. For a long time there has been a growing realization of this need. Reforms have already been attempted in executive and administrative branches of State Government and have progressed to some degree. But in almost every instance, the benefit of these reforms is denied to the people due to the antiquated legislative organization and procedure.

The weaknesses of the present legislative system may be summed up into these groups:

1. Legislatures today are generally large and unwieldy in respect to structure.
2. Legislative bodies of today are generally cumbersome and employ ineffective methods.
3. Legislative bodies suffer because of a lack of cooperation between the Legislature and the executive branch of the state government.
4. Legislatures are typified by the failure to provide responsible leadership.

Senator Norris says: "One of the evils of our state legislatures is that they are entirely too large. In theory, a large legislature is supposed to give more complete representation of the entire citizenry. In practice, however, it has been demonstrated that a membership which is too large is detrimental to real representation of the people. A large body of men is not deliberative, and in order to accomplish any legislative results they must necessarily surrender many of their independent rights and prerogatives. In large bodies, members must deny themselves, in some degree at least, the right to debate, and even the right to offer amendments. They must surrender to a smaller number of men, or committees, the right to determine procedure. The very size of the body sometimes makes it impossible for the necessary and proper deliberation and discussion which should always take place before legislation is enacted into law."

It may be added that Senator Norris believes the Legislative Body should consist of one house of from 20 to 50 members depending upon the size and character of the population within the State.

The tremendous cost of the salaries of the 208 members of the House of Representatives in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and of 50 Senators plus the necessary hire of legislative assistants and clerks and of mileage for traveling expenses, of printing and other necessary expenses, it is believed, could be expended to greater benefit if a unicameral system prevailed as such would undoubtedly tend to reduce the expenses of the Legislature.

The argument that two houses provide for class or group representation which is a justifiable reason for the large and unwieldy structure of the present legislative bodies is not of much importance today due to the improved methods of transportation and communication which have broken down the class distinctions of early Colonial days which were based mainly on property ownership and rights.

Nor is the argument that time for added deliberation of legislative measures is afforded by two houses, one house acting as a check on the irrational and hasty performances of the other. Careful studies of Legislative output made in recent years show that this argument is clearly overrated and that there is little merit to it. The veto power of the Governor has, it seems, provided a more effective check on poor or hasty legislation than does the two house system. It is generally agreed that a two house system enables legislators to evade responsibility for measures. Bills may be sponsored in one house with the express purpose of permitting them to die or have them killed in the other house.

Duplication of work by similar committees in each house are disadvantageous to the speedy consideration of legislation introduced.

By the existence of the two house system, out of necessity conference committees arise with extremely autocratic powers as the only practical means of solving difficulties of disagreements between the two separate houses. Thus, the bicameral system appears to be generally cumbersome and involved. Adequate safeguards to promote open handed action are not provided.

In the present system, the speakership and the Committee arrangements are most important items from the viewpoint of legislative output. Due to the political power of the speakership, this position is, in most states, the most important, next only to that of the Governor. The power of the speakership is so important that it usually ranks higher than the office of Lieutenant Governor or the President of the Senate. The speaker has control of the appointments to standing committees, reference of bills to such committees, the control of the Committee on Rules and the power to designate the members of conference committees. In the hands of the speaker lies the power to appoint committees and to refer the bills introduced to any committee which he determines he wishes the bill to go. Due to the combination of these powers, it is possible for a speaker to determine in advance, if he cares to, the life or death of a particular bill.

The Committee system is undesirable because of the multiciplicity of committees and because an individual legislator must frequently serve as a member of several committees which often may be meeting at exactly the same time.

Legislative "jams" near the close of a session bring about the custom of selecting a special committee which actually selects the bills already reported for passage by the various standing committees and already on the calendar and ones which should be put up for a vote of the House. This plan places into the hands of the speaker and the few members on the Committee absolute and autocratic powers, by the exercise of which the program of the body will be controlled.

Under the bicameral system the conference system is a source of arbitrary authority in writing legislation when there has been a disagreement between the two houses. When it has reported to the two houses, they must either accept its proposal or reject them as a whole. Political leadership sometimes use the conference committees as a means of machine control. And frequently the lobbyist finds it a perfect method of attaining his ends without much chance of detection.

In most states there is a virtual lack of co-operation between the Executive branch and the Legislative branch of the government, which in some cases creates deadlocks between the Legislature and the Governor. In some cases, even despite party control, this custom of separation persists.

The divided direction and leadership between the two houses is a natural result of the difficulty of providing leadership for two houses of equal authority and responsibility. Any unified direction, therefore, must, from the very nature of the set-up, come from the political boss, sometimes from inside the Legislature but more often from outside. Such ledership is widely criticized by the press as being invisible and irresponsible. But under the present system practically the only method of approach to leadership is by way of the political party controlling the working majorities in the two houses. And this highway, leading as it may to "boss rule", is almost blocked when the houses happen to be controlled by political parties of different complexions which invariably causes the stalemate of much important legislation.

Many proposals have been made for improving the existing legislative system, among which are reduction in number of members, better methods of election which involve many suggestions varying from proportional representation to a plan which would give representation to economic, industrial and social groups within the state and which is known as the plan for functional representation and distinguished by representation as based upon geographic area or population. Longer terms of office are advocated as well as recall of members.

Legislative procedure and methods might be improved by the adoption of "split" session, by the naming of fewer committees in closer co-ordination to the administrative organization and by joint committees of the House and Senate under the bicameral system, by the systematic handling and distribution of committee work, by the establishment of electric roll call and by the regulation of lobbying. It is important to consider the importance of the electric roll call device which cuts down the tremendous waste of time of the entire house in order to obtain a roll call and in many cases to obtain verifications of the roll. The electric roll call device seems to be fair and to operate speedily and yet preserve for each member all of the advantages, if any, that there may be to the delay incident to the roll call at the present time.

Shorter and less frequent sessions, the reduction in the volume of laws and the extension of the veto powers of the Governor and methods suggested to curtail the number and to improve the quality of acts adopted.

A new development intended primarily to develop a legislative program and now in use in Wisconsin, Michigan and Kansas is the Legislative Council composed of the Governor and several members of both houses of the Legislature. The duty of this body is to gather material, prepare a program and draft measures to carry into effect the program. In Kansas such a council in the session of 1935 appears to have met with favorable progress.

A branch of the Legislature which is very important and which is particularly noteworthy in Pennsylvania is the Legislative Reference Bureau which has the duty of drafting bills for members to introduce. The services of this Bureau are indispensable and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania ranks in the foreground in the establishment of this method of improving the type of legislation introduced.

From the foregoing discussion of the nature and the weaknesses of the bicameral system of state legislatures, it is recognized that different and more serious problems confront legislatures beyond the conception of legislators of a century ago. In recent years closer attention has been given to the unicameral, or one house legislature, which recently went into operation in Nebraska.

Although common report would have it otherwise, the unicameral system is not a new experience in State Government in America. When the Federal Constitution was adopted, three states (Georgia, Pennsylvania and Vermont) had legislatures consisting of one chamber. Georgia was the first to change of these three, changing to the bicameral scheme in 1789 with Pennsylvania following in 1790; but Vermont continued a single house until 1836. In the case of Georgia and Pennsylvania, their desire of following in the footsteps of the Federal Government led to the desertion of the unicameral system and to the establishment of the bicameral method. This was supplemented by the desire to maintain what they believed to be a check on hasty and unwise legislative action. Years later the same reasons prompted Vermont to adopt bicameral system.

It is worthy of thought that although all the states, with the exception of the three above mentioned, have consistently adhered to bicameral legislatures since the days of the Revolution, they have nevertheless always employed unicameral bodies in the revision of the constitution. They have not felt the need for bicameral constitutional conventions although these bodies were concerned with the changing of the fundamental law of the land. It seems, therefore, that since the Constitutional conventions have generally been satisfactory that it is not unfair to infer that the same high standard of success of unicameral bodies with respects to altering the fundamental constitutional law of the states would carry if a unicameral system was adopted in the legislative bodies of the United States.

In 1912 definite movements in the furthering of the unicameral legislatures began. The following states considered definite proposals of the adoption of the unicameral scheme:

Arizona 1915-1916
California 1913-1915-1917-1921-1925
Kansas 1913
Massachusetts 1917-1918
Nebraska 1913-1915-1919-1920
New York 1915
Ohio 1912
Oklahoma 1914
Oregon 1912-1914
S. Dakota 1917-1923-1925-1927-1931
Washington 1915-1917

The progress of the bills proposing unicameral systems and the separate constitutional conventions at which amendments were proposed was not in any case indicative of the future for the unicameral idea even though in all of the instances referred to above the unicameral plan finally was defeated although in some cases it did pass one of the two houses.

In 1933 Senator George W. Norris, United States Senator from Nebraska, instituted a campaign for the adoption of the plan for a unicameral legislature. In Nebraska there was considerable sentiment for such a reform. To Senator Norris goes the credit for the adoption of the plan which was accomplished through the use of the initiative in which manner the question was placed on the ballot. His arguments in support of the plan were as follows:

1. The jealousy, friction, and rivalry between the two houses, which often result in deadlocks and the defeat of constructive legislation, will be eliminated by a one house legislature.

2. A one-house legislature will make possible the definite fixing of responsibility for action taken on all bills introduced; where two bodies of persons are involved it is hard to fix blame.

3. A one-house legislature will decrease greatly the opportunity for corruption; special interests desiring to kill proposed legislation find their way twice as easy when it is necessary to control or corrupt only one of two houses.

4. Legislation by conference committees will be abolished.

5. The tax burden of the state will be reduced by the adoption of the one house legislature proposal.

6. By providing that the members shall be nominated and elected on a non-partisan ballot, the one-house legislature will be divorced from partisan politics.

When the election was over and the votes had been counted, the amendment to establish a one-house legislature was found to have received a large majority, the vote being 286,086 in its favor and 193,152 against it. Out of 93 counties in Nebraska, 84 voted for it.

Senator Norris' arguments for the election of the members of the one-house legislature on the non-partisan ballot were well received. For several years the Nebraska voters had been accustomed to the use of the non-partisan election in the choice of judges, school officials, and municipal officers. Senator Norris maintained that if the legislators were elected on a non-partisan ballot, they would then be free from the issues of national politics. They would not be subject to the influence of political bosses and party machines. They would not be responsible to any party on a false issue, but would be responsible to their own people upon issues which have a direct bearing upon the official duties of the members of the legislature. A state should be a business institution and not a political machine. Its government should be conducted on a business principle. It should transact its business much as does a great corporation, with the governor as the president, the legislature as the board of directors, and the people as the stockholders. If politics were eliminated, the members would not be handicapped by partisan considerations.

Whether or not Senator Norris is correct and the ends sought by him in this endeavor will be achieved, time alone will tell. Some persons have expressed serious doubt that it is possible to effectively separate State and National politics.

The effect of the non-partisan ballot in the election of the legislators, some observers hold, will be to dissolve the ties of the partisanship between the legislature and the Governor, and to free the legislature of the influence of the Governor as titular head of his party. The governor will continue to be elected as a partisan, but presumably he will have no party to lead in the legislature. "The platform upon which he is elected," says Roland M. Jones, "will be only remotely and inferentially binding upon legislators, each elected upon a person platform of his own." In this way, the legislature may become a completely independent organ of government, and practically sever its connection with the governor. The governor may still summon the legislature into special session and submit recommendations to it, but if it chooses to provide by law, it may also assemble and consider any proposals made by its members. "It is going to be extremely interesting," continues Jones, "to note how this new independence is exercised. There is considerable expectation that will result in shorter but more frequent sessions."

During 1935 constitutional amendments providing for single chambered bodies were submitted to the legislatures of Delaware, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota. Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. While none of these amendments was adopted, their discussion created quite a bit of interest in the several states just named; so much so that the sponsors of the unicameral scheme felt that it was a good start toward popular education of a much-needed state reform.

In 1935 in the Pennsylvania Legislature, a Constitutional amendment proposing the adoption of the unicameral system was introduced but never reported out of the Committee.

In the 1936 Special Session a Constitutional Amendment was introduced by Representatives Caputo, Harkins, Toronzo, and Eroe being House Bill No. 157 which was also referred to the Committee of Constitutional Amendments and never reported out by that Committee which would have established a unicameral system.

In the 1937 session of the General Assembly, House Bill No. 1187 proposing a unicameral system by way of a Constitutional Amendment and House Bill No. 791 by Representative Marino with a similar proposition also were referred to the Committee on Constitutional Amendments and never reported out.

It appears, therefore, that at present the Pennsylvania Legislature is not enthusiastic concerning a unicameral system and in the last few years no measure has reached the step where debate thereon was possible on the floor.

Historically the Senate, or upper house, was designated to act as an aristocratic check on a more democratic lower house similar to the English House of Lords and House of Commons relationship. During the course of time, however, the House of Lords has lost its power and in our various states time has made both our Senate and our House of Representatives more directly democratic and representative of the citizens whom they represent.

The reasons for the existence of two chambers which we find in the Federal Government at Washington are not necessarily applicable to State Legislatures because in the Federal system one house is made up of representatives of governmental units and the other consists of men chosen by population groups of equal size. In our various commonwealths members of both houses are representatives of population groups of equal size and so merely duplicate constituencies.

It seems that the unicameral system of government has made considerable progress outside of the United States of America. For years Norway has had practically a single house legislature, in as much as the second chamber is in reality merely a committee of the first. Sixteen of the twenty-two states of Switzerland have unicameral systems of legislatures. Eight of the nine provinces of Canada have unicameral legislatures. Nova Scotia changing to that form in 1928. Only Quebec now retains the old bicameral plan. Queensland, one of the six states of Australia, has a unicameral plan. Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Panama and El Salvador have one house parlimentary bodies. Argentina has several provinces or states which have unicameral legislatures. Subsequent to the World War, single chambered bodies were established in more than half of the new parlimentary governments of central Europe, among which may be noticed the Baltic States of Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and Albania, Bulgaria and Turkey. In 1931 the Spanish republic provided for a single chamber body called the Cortes. In recent years the Irish Free State abolished its Senate, leaving only the one house called Dail Eireann. In 1935 the Philippine Islands adopted a new constitution providing for a single house legislature under the congressional form of government.

When the subject is viewed in a scientific manner and all the evidence drawn from experience is summed up, there seems to be very little real justification for the continuation of the large clumsy, two house legislature in our state government. As a matter of fact, the preponderant weight of the evidence appears to point quite strongly to the need for a small and single house. Certainly the unicameral body would reduce the cost of legislative operation and expedite the handling of the law making business, eliminate the dual committees and the shifting of responsibility and would put an end to deadlocks and friction which often occur between the houses under the bicameral scheme. The most serious of the apparent drawbacks to the unicameral plan is the question of fair representation of urban and rural areas in some of the more populous states and this with other possible drawbacks are not at all problems impossible of solution.

Keeping in mind the weaknesses of the existing legislative system as well as the possible advantages to be obtained from the adoption of the unicameral system and bearing in mind, further, the need for the straightening of the difficulties in the present system, your Committee makes the following recommendations:

1. That inasmuch as the Nebraska system has not operated long enough to draw valid conclusions of importance, that a further study of this matter be made.

2. That in order to accomplish a comprehensive study of merit in regards to this matter, a joint commission of the House and Senate be appointed under authority of an appropriate resolution carrying a sufficient appropriation to conduct a further study of this matter and to report to the House of Representatives in the future and to particularly inquire into the unicameral system as in existence in Nebraska in the light of the 1937 session of the legislature in Nebraska.

REPORT OF MINORITY MEMBERS COMMITTEE

We the minority members of the committee have read with interest the learned report prepared by our scholarly chairman, Mr. Kenneth Harkins of Allegheny. We regret that we cannot agree with many of his statements and we doubly regret that many of the recitals of historical and political fact are followed by or interwoven with conclusions in favor of proposed changes with which we cannot agree at all.

We agree that the Unicameral Legislature being tried out in Nebraska will furnish a valuable experiment in practice of a plan which has been debated for decades. But we feel that since it is a brand new wonder babe of the brain of that tireless reformer, Sen. George W. Norris, and is just one session old, having spent its entire existence under the watchful eye of its proud parent, that it cannot be said to have been really given a trial in practice for some years to come. Nebraska, being an almost entirely agricultural state with a comparatively homogenious population, will even then hardly furnish results which can with conclusive assurance be declared workable and beneficial in Pennsylvania.

We agree that our present legislature is far from ideal. Were it so we might not be here. We agree that the term is too short and the salary to meagre to allow the members any satisfactory degree of "security" in which to develop statesmanship instead of continuous campaign politics born of biennial elections. A member taking office in our House in December 1936 must stand for election again in the spring primary of 1938 and probably announce his intentions to run as early in some counties as a year from the time he was sworn in at Harrisburg.

To cure this evil the unicameral feature avails nothing.

We feel strongly that Pennsylvania's own experience in the last few years, not under different circumstances and with other people, but here, now and with our own, has indicated the wisdom or at least usefulness of the checks on legislative haste and the enforced attention to many divergent viewpoints afforded by two differently elected houses. Likewise our own experience has been that the much abused committees should be more used and more empowered rather than curtailed or done away with. We are inclined to accept without argument the view of many observers that the member of a legislature in a state such as ours can not be expected to have the time nor the ability to become conversant with all of the multitudinous problems that face our Keystone State which is in reality a nation of over ten million people.

We incline to favor the increased opportunity for legislative fatalities which have prevented a myriad of worthless bills reaching the executive desk. We pass too many laws rather than too few.

We do not agree that the facilities for executive or party influence or domination should be increased under the plausible arguments commonly advanced for "party responsibility." Most of us realize that a party is elected quite as much on its promises for "next time" as on its so-called "record" of "last time." An economic disaster affecting the mass of the people will unseat any political party regardless of the wisdom of its policies, and will put the opposition in power, however far-fetched its promises. Neither do we agree with our chairmen's statement that the Governor's veto powers should be extended.

On the contrary we feel that a detachment of legislation from the executive will would be decidedly beneficial to the people at large even though it might check the speed with which selfish "pressure groups" hope to obtain favors from an executive whom they each feel they primarily elected not only to administer the state but to boss the legislature.

At the present time the situation in Pennsylvania substantiates our view as to the inadvisability of having a majority group dominate both houses. The experience of the minority party of the 1937 session of the Legislature reveals the fact that worthwhile bills on major questions as well as many bills introduced to correct conditions existing in certain localities have been lost or stifled due to the fact they have been introduced by members opposed to the majority group now in power.

This legislation, introduced with the intent of correcting these situations which has failed to receive the official O. K. from the leaders of the administration, has not been reported out of committee, or if it has been reported, was either defeated or dropped from the calendar without proper consideration. Likewise ill-considered party-sponsored bills are jammed through without thought and must be amended and re-considered many many times. Where a House and Senate differ in political complexion this is not the rule as one house acts as a check on the other. There is less hurry; less driving. And in the final outcome some of the legislation of each side manages to get through. Due to popular demand it is sometimes approved by the executive presiding even though no part of the dominant party's program.

We might even say that we think one house should preferably always have a majority of a different political party than the executive. Even where this is not so the longer term and greater independence and political experience of a senate helps to check the impulsiveness of tidal-wave heard and whose political ideas and personal capacity and quality he would upon learning them most heartily reject.

We the minority members feel that we should first set our present houses in order:

1 By cutting down their cumbersome size
2 By increasing the term and salary
3 By increasing the individual responsibility of members
4 By installing an orderly businesslike procedure in place of the present fly-by-night "begin in leisure quit in frenzy" system
5 Eliminating the coat-tail riding candidate by doing away with straight ticket voting
6 Further investigating the development in Nebraska of unicameral's lone chick from a hundred years of brooding

We concur in the findings of the majority members of the committee that there are enough weaknesses in our present bicameral system as it is IN FACT carried on and enough advantages possible in the unicameral system as its advocates HOPE it MIGHT develop, so that it would amply warrant further investigation by an adequately manned and equipped committee.

We likewise concur in the finding that the Nebraska experiment has not gone on long enough to justify any "valid conclusions of importance."

In general we disagree with the theme that whatever is old or established is prima facie bad, while whatever is novel should be hailed as both a reform and an improvement. Legislature might have to report as medical men sometimes have that "the operation was a great success but the patient died."

And Democracy today is dangerously ill.

Respectfully submitted,

E. KENT KANE

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE COST OF GOVERNMENT IN THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA

Monday, March 15, 1937, Harrisburg, Pa.

To the Honorable, The President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

The above designated Committee was appointed as the result of the joint action of the Senate and House of Representatives on the 13th day of January, 1937, under concurrent resolution. The President of the Senate appointed, as the Senate members of the Committee:

Hon. Harry Shapiro, Hon. Anthony DiSilvestro, and Hon. George Woodward; and the Speaker of the House appointed as the House members:

Hon. Anna M. Brancato, Hon. Paul C. Lewis, Hon. Leo. V. Tumulty, and Hon. George J. Mallen.

Hearings were held by the Committee on the following dates: January 18, January 21, January 22, January 28, January 29, February 4, February 5, February 11, February 12, February 18, February 19, February 25, February 26, March 4, March 5, March 11, March 12.

Thus far the Committee has held seventeen public hearings lasting throughout the day and sometimes into the evenings. The concurrent resolution under which this Committee was appointed requires that the Committee report to this Legislature with recommendations.

The task assigned to this Committee is one which will require considerable time and effort, undoubtedly more time than was anticipated by anyone at the beginning of the work. This is due to the fact that the scope of the resolution is broad and all-inclusive, and the governmental functions of the city and county of Philadelphia have many ramifications.

The Committee have, therefore, come to the conclusion unanimously that it can accomplish more by making as thorough an investigation as possible, of each department separately to ascertain where savings can be effected, and by making to this Legislature separate reports, with recommendations for such changes as in the opinion of the Committee are warranted and necessary to reduce the cost and increase the efficiency of governmental functions in each particular department.

With that thought in mind the Committee has made a thorough, but not final, investigation into the following departments:

Board of Viewers, Board of Revision of Taxes, Receiver of Taxes, City Treasurer, and Sheriff; and is now in the midst of examining into the functions and expenditures of the Municipal Court.

The Committee believes it essential that immediate report and recommendations be made to the General Assembly in connection with the following departments; Board of Viewers, Board of Revision of Taxes, Receiver of Taxes and City Treasurer.

The General Assembly will understand the attitude of mind with which the Committee approached the performance of its duties, by the following quotation from the notes of testimony at the first public hearing held on Monday, January 18, 1927, in City Hall, Philadelphia. We quote from page 11 of that meeting:

"There is no intent on the part of any member of this Committee, or of the Committee as a whole, to assassinate character or to attempt to pillory. I am going to ask the various department heads to come here and give us the information we require for the purpose of our investigation. We assume they will come voluntarily. We are going to have a relentless investigation of every department of the City as soon as possible, and try to find out whether the cost of government can be cut in Philadelphia.

"We are hoping that we will have the cooperation of the press, because we are not after sensationalism—that would not help, but hurt." * * *

"So far as this Committee is concerned, there will be no favorites played, and everyone in public office will be responsible for his own acts. We do not have to make any comments on the testimony, because the facts will speak for themselves, and the people responsible for the conditions will probably realize them and help us."

It should be brought to the attention of the members of the General Assembly at the outset of this report that the Committee has ascertained as a fact that the finances of the City of Philadelphia are in a very deplorable condition. The budget discloses a deficit carried over from 1936 in the amount of approximately nine million dollars, and the Committee hearings have already disclosed that deficits incurred in 1936 in some departments were not included in the amounts allowed to those departments in the 1937 budget.

It is because of this financial situation, and because the Committee, in its investigations thus far, has come to the conclusion that by the adoption of recommendations which it is prepared to make in connection with some of the departments already investigated, a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars per annum can be accomplished, that it makes this preliminary report and recommendations. For a better understanding of the problems involved, we submit the following

FINDINGS OF FACT

(a) Board of Viewers

The Act of 1911 (P. L. 1123) establishes a Board of Viewers for each county. Section 1 reads as follows:

> "There is hereby established in each county of this Commonwealth a Board of Viewers. In counties containing over one million inhabitants such board shall consist of not less than six nor more than nine members, one of whom may be learned in the law and a member of the bar of the proper county. * * *
> "The judges of the Court of Common Pleas of the proper county shall in each case determine within the aforesaid limits, the total number of members of which the Board shall be composed, fixing and determining such number as shall be deemed necessary for the proper performance of the duties imposed upon the board, with power in the court from time to time to change the number within the above stated limits as to the total number of members. * * *
> "Each member of the Board of Viewers must not be engaged in any public employment of profit. The office of any member of the Board shall be vacant immediately upon his ceasing to be a resident of the county in which he shall be appointed, or upon ceasing to possess any of the qualifications above required; the court of the proper county being empowered from time to time to determine summarily any facts thus bringing about a vacancy in the office, and being authorized to fill vacancies thus arising in the manner hereinafter set forth."

Section 2 provides that the judges of all the Courts of Common Pleas shall meet as a body and shall appoint members of the Board of Viewers.

Sections 5, 6, 7, 9, 10 and 11 of the above Act deal with hearings, appeals, conduct of cases and reports thereon.

Section 8 provides for the employment of stenographers and clerical assistants, whose salaries shall be fixed by the county commissioners or legislative body of the county.

Section 3 of the Act, which provides for the term of office, removal, filling of vacancies, et cetera, was amended by the Act of 1913 (P. L. 386), section 1, which reads as follows:

> "Each of the members of the said Board of Viewers shall be appointed for a term of three years from the date of his appointment, whether such appointment be to fill in an original or partly expired term * * * all appointments shall be subject to the powers of the respective Courts of Common Pleas in the respective counties, at any time for cause to them satisfactory, to remove members of the said Board before the expiration of their respective terms of office, and to appoint successors. * * *"

The Act of May 12, 1925, P. L. 619, (amending the Act of 1911, P. L. 1123, and the Act of 1923, P. L. 327), provides that each member of the Board of Viewers in counties of the first and second class shall hereafter receive an annual salary of $6,500.

In the City and County of Philadelphia, pursuant to the method set up by the Act of 1911 and its supplements the Board of Judges have for many years past appointed in the City and County of Philadelphia nine members of the Board of Viewers, who have each received, since the passage of the Act of 1925, $6,500 annually.

The Board of Viewers have appointed annually engineers, clerks, assistant clerks, stenographers and custodians.

The Board of Viewers have consistently, for at least the past seven years, requested from Council, and have received for expenditures annually, the approximate sum of $83,000 for the salaries of the members of the Board and the above-named personnel.

In 1933 the aggregate amount of awards by the Board of Viewers was $2,246,910, and the claimants before the Board in that year totalled 419. In 1934 the awards aggregated $566,713, numbering 506 claims. In 1935 the awards aggregated $987,932, which total amount numbered 335 claims. In 1936 the awards amounted to $237,414 and numbered 106 claims. (See notes of testimony pp. 25 and 30, of the 1st hearing.)

During all of this period, however, the Board of Viewers received and asked for approximately the same budget allowance annually; even in 1936, with 106 claims to be acted upon, the Board asked for and received practically the same amount. It should be noted also that while we speak of 106 claims, that does not mean there were 106 condemnations; on the contrary these claims grew out of only 11 condemnation proceedings, the 106 claims representing the total number of persons affected. (See notes of testimony pp. 30-31 of the 1st hearing.)

The awards by the Board of Viewers are made after condemnation proceedings are instituted, and are based upon the opinion of the Board as to the damages incurred by property owners as the result of the taking of property for public purposes or widening of streets or changes of grade. (See notes of testimony pp. 14 and 15.)

The Board of Viewers sit as juries of viewers in groups of three, each group acting only upon those cases which are assigned to it by the Courts of Common Pleas, the other six members of the Board having nothing to do with the work of the particular jury of three of its members sitting on any particular case. (See page 16 of the notes of testimony, 1st hearing.)

This jury of award, consisting of three of the members of the Board of Viewers, arrives at its conclusion as to the extent of the damages after considering the facts presented to it, plus expert testimony offered by both parties involved.

The Board also has power to appoint its own experts, but although appropriations for that purpose were made for a number of years, the Board has never exercised the power. (See page 53 of notes of testimony of the 1st hearing.)

The City of Philadelphia, for the past five years, engaged and paid for the services of a number of real estate experts to give testimony in connection with these proceedings. (See notes of testimony, pages 15-16 of the 1st hearing.)

The value for which property is assessed for taxation purposes is seldom considered, and in most cases is not even known, by the Board of Viewers or anyone else, in arriving at the value of the property taken. As a rule it is not shown by either side, and there is no investigation by the Board as to the assessed value. Reliance is placed solely upon sales that are testified to by the experts. (Page 33 of the notes of testimony, 1st hearing.)

Under the present state of the law it is doubtful whether the assessed value of a property for taxation purposes could even be offered in evidence in the courts where the question of the value of the property taken in condemnation proceedings is involved. (Page 134 of notes of testimony, 1st hearing.)

In the majority of the cases before the Board of Viewers for many years the damages awarded have been far in excess of the amount for which the same properties were assessed for taxation purposes. As an illustration the following tabulation of valuations for taxation purposes, as compared to the awards made by the Board of Viewers, is illuminating:

Assessed Value	Awards by the Board
$230,000	$324,912
60,000	104,000
63,000	149,590
45,000	108,364
45,000	110,720
50,000	118,237
45,000	118,000
100,000	326,506
650,000	809,960

Startling as these figures may seem, another set of figures is even more shocking. Prior to 1927 the laws of Pennsylvania permitted the acquisition by one county of ground in another county contiguous thereto, for park purposes. For some years prior to 1927, the City of Philadelphia owned, and at present owns, Cobbs Creek Park, which is contiguous to Delaware county. It was not really a park but a playground, on which is constructed a golf course. In 1927 the Legislature amended the Act above referred to, and enlarged the purposes for which such land might be acquired, to include ground to be used for "playground" purposes. Whether this amendment was passed with an eye to the specific case is a matter of conjecture, but the subsequent events lend color to the belief of the Committee that the amendment to this Act was part of a plan to sell to the City of Philadelphia a tract of land in Delaware County at a price far in excess of its value. This land located in Delaware County was adjacent to what was then known as Cobbs Creek Park, and consisted of about 17 acres

One tract, owned by the Wolfenden-Shore Company, consisted of about 11 acres, with a large building which had been used as a mill sometime prior to the condemnation.

This property was acquired by the city of Philadelphia under condemnation proceedings at a cost of $835,000; and at that time the property was assessed for taxation purposes in Delaware County at $85,000. It should be noted, however, that the Board of Viewers in Delaware County awarded damages at $1,084,000, but by agreement entered into between the City Solicitor of Philadelphia and the owner of the property a remittitur was filed for all in excess of $885,000.

Another piece of ground adjacent to the Wolfenden-Shore property was that of the Cardington Land Company, comprising 6.3 acres. The Board of Viewers awarded to the owner, for this property, $141,000, in spite of the fact that the property was assessed for taxation purposes at only $9,000. This award also was reduced, after appeal, to $116,000.

The total result is that the City of Philadelphia paid $1,001,000 for property assessed for taxation purposes at $94,000. The record of testimony which this Committee will submit for the files of the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House will disclose numerous other instances of like character. We will not encumber this report with a multiplication of the instances, but it is fair to say that from a reading of the testimony it will be found millions of dollars of taxpayers' money have been paid to acquire properties at a cost far in excess of the fair market value, as well as of the assessed value.

In this one instance—in connection with the acquisition of property for Cobbs Creek Park—the record shows that awards were made by the Philadelphia Board of Viewers, in some instances running as high as $350,000, which, on appeal, were reduced by jury verdicts to not in excess of $100,000.

In the same instance an award made to the tenant who was said to have occupied the premises as damages for loss of the value of the lease, in the neighborhood of $300,000,—was subsequently reduced by a Common Pleas jury verdict to approximately $30,000.

To provide for the payment of these awards the City of Philadelphia issued its bonds,—the interest burden of the taxpayer was increased—and in the opinion of the Committee many millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money have been squandered because of these excess awards. These excess awards, moreover, were encouraged in a great measure by the failure of the City of Philadelphia to set up an intelligent and scientific system for the valuation of properties.

The existence of archaic and discriminatory methods of assessing property brought about a lack of confidence in "values" set up by the Board of Revision of Taxes, and their conclusions could not be used as a basis for determining values.

As to the personnel of the Board of Viewers, few, if any, of them had any previous experience that would qualify them for their work. Three of them are lawyers, one is a former recorder of deeds of Philadelphia County, another is a ward leader, who has had little or no experience in the valuation of properties, another was engaged in the garbage disposal business before he was appointed to this Board, another is a former clerk of the Court of Common Pleas; another was a physician who is still practicing medicine while acting as a member of the Board, and his only experience in real estate consisted in selling his own properties and investing the proceeds in Peruvian and Bolivian bonds Only one member of the Board had had real estate experience to any extent prior to his appointment. (Pages 161 to 181 of notes of testimony, 2nd hearing.)

CONCLUSIONS

The Board of Viewers are charged with an important duty. In a metropolitan city like Philadelphia, particularly in its growing years, property must be acquired for public purposes as the city progresses, the Board charged with the awarding of damages incurred taking property for the development of the city should consist of men whose experience peculiarly fits them for the task.

The awarding of property damages requires a knowledge of the cost of building, the cost of land, the selling price of property, the costs of material.

It follows that a Board of Viewers should consist of construction engineers, real estate men, trained and experienced in the buying and selling of properties and in the appraising of properties, and, lawyers trained in real estate law, and in the legal responsibility of the City for the taking of properties.

It does not require the services of nine men to conduct the work of ascertaining damages to be awarded in the future in the taking of properties and the changes of grade and the widening of streets in Philadelphia.

The taxpayers of Philadelphia lost millions of dollars by the failure of those who had the appointive power in this respect to see to it that those who were appointed were qualified by their experience and training to meet the demands which would be made upon them in the interests of the citizens.

It is the firm conclusion of this Committee that the Board of Viewers as presently constituted should be abolished, and its functions given over to persons equipped by training and experience for the tasks that will be theirs. Specific recommendations in connection with these conclusions will be made subsequently in this report, following the discussion of the department known as the Board of Revision of Taxes.

(b) Board of Revision of Taxes

The Board of Revision of Taxes was provided for in the Act of July 27, 1842, P. L. 441. Under section 13 of the Act the duties of the Board are defined to be, to examine and inquire whether the assessors' returns have been made in conformity with the laws of this Commonwealth, and whether all property to be valued for taxation for State and County purposes has been valued at a sum or price which it would bring at a public sale. This system, general throughout the State, was altered by the consolidation of the Act of 1854, P. L. 21, for the City of Philadelphia, and the Councils were made the supervisory power.

The present Board of Revision for the City of Philadelphia is provided for by the Act of 1865, P. L. 320, section 1 of which reads as follows:

"The Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County shall, once in every three years, before the time of revision of taxes for the succeeding year, and as often as vacancies shall occur, appoint two persons deemed the most competent, who, with the senior city commissioner for the time being, shall compose a Board for the revision of taxes, a majority of whom shall be a quorum."

The provision of this section authorizing the senior city commission to act on the Board of Revision was repealed by the Act of 1867, P. L. 137, section 1 of which reads as follows:

"Court of Common Pleas to Appoint Board.—So much of the first section of an Act entitled: 'An Act to Promote the More Certain and Equal Assessment of Taxes in Philadelphia; approved the 14th day of March, 1865, as authorized by the senior city commissioner of the said city, to act as a member of the Board of Revision of Taxes, be and the same is hereby repealed; and that the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County shall within thirty days after the passage of this Act appoint one person deemed competent by the judges of the said court, who shall serve as a member of the Board of Revision of Taxes for the term of three years from the date of his appointment; and hereafter the said Board of Revision of Taxes shall consist of three persons, who shall be appointed by the said Court of Common Pleas."

Sections 2, 3 and 4 of the said Act of 1867 set forth generally the powers of the Board.

The compensation of the members of the Board of Revision of Taxes is fixed by the Act of 1927, P. L. 982, which provides as follows:

"Be it enacted, &c., that hereinafter the salary of each member of the body acting as the Board of Revision of Taxes in counties containing a population of 1,250,000 or over, shall be $10,000 per annum."

By the provisions of the Act of April 12, 1873, P. L. 765, section 2, the Board of Revision of Taxes was required, on the 1st of January, 1874, and every five years thereafter, to appoint two competent persons to serve as assessors for the term of five years, for each of said districts.

By section 1 of the same Act the salary of the assessors for the City of Philadelphia was fixed at $2,000 per annum, and the Board was directed to divide the City into 15 assessment districts, such districts to be made with due regard to equalizing the duties of the assessors of the several districts, with the right in the Board to alter and rearrange the said districts from time to time whenever in their judgment such alteration may be necessary by the growth of the City to preserve equality in the labor to be performed in the respective districts.

By the Act of June 5, 1874, P. L. 276, the Board of Revision of Taxes in Philadelphia was given authority, from time to time, as public interest may require, to create additional assessors' districts and appoint additional assessors therein.

Whereas originally it was required by the Act of Assembly that the assessors in each district shall represent both political parties, that is, one to be of the minority and the other to be of the majority party, by the Act of March 24, 1903, P. L. 51, and the Act of May 5, 1921, P. L. 346, it was provided that "said appointments shall be made by the board without regard to the political party affiliation of such assessors."

By the Act of May 7, 1927, P. L. 857, the salary of assessors in counties of the first class was increased to $5,000.

Over a period of years the number of districts in the City of Philadelphia was increased from the original 15 provided for in the Act until it at the time these hearings were held there were 40 districts. When these increases occurred your Committee was unable definitely to ascertain, but for more than ten years the Board of Revision of Taxes has operated with 80 assessors, and, since the Act of 1927, these assessors have each been receiving a salary of $5,000 per annum.

The assessors were not chosen according to ability. The evidence before the Committee is clear that the appointments were made solely upon a political basis. The proof of this is contained in the record of the third and fourth hearings of your Committee, held on January 22 and January 28, 1937.

It was the duty of these 80 men, annually, to appraise each and every piece of ground, with improvements thereon, in the City of Philadelphia, and arrive at the fair market value for purposes of taxation. The testimony shows that of the 80 men not more than ten had had any actual previous real estate experience, either as buyer, seller, or appraiser. The other 70 men were political ward healers, shifted from one position to another according to the political exigencies with utter disregard for the qualifications for the position to which they were appointed. Among the group were undertakers, iron workers, electricians, cigar store proprietors and plumbers. Several were unable to solve grammar school mathematica' problems, when put to the test by members of the Committee.

These men, under the system followed by the Board of Revision of Taxes, were the final arbiters of the value of property for taxation purposes unless an appeal was taken from their valuation. As a result, if the valuation fixed by these assessors was low, of course there would be no appeal. The only time an appeal would be filed was when the taxpayer felt that the assessment was to high. Under such a system fraud could run rampant.

That discrimination resulted is obvious from the testimony. Ground purchased for the same figure, buildings of the same character costing the same and completed at the same time—in one case was assessed at $75,000 and in the other of $182,000; property assessed as unfinished but in fact occupied and used for the purpose for which it was built, assessed as unfinished at $68,000; this assessment was increased—as a result of the development of the actual facts by your Committee a member of the Board of Revision of Taxes increased the assessment to $212,000. The two assessors in the district in question resigned within three days after these facts were brought out.

In Philadelphia tax bills have never been mailed. Most other large cities do.

In Philadelphia the tax assessment roll is made up in triplicate by hand; 474,000 items are written in bound volumes three times over. One hundred volumes are used in a single listing of the name, address, assessment and tax on each property; and this work is done in triplicate by hand every year, requiring 300 books.

In the cities of Detroit and Cleveland all of this work is done in one operation by mechanical equipment, and completed in from 15 to 25 days. The number of employes of the Philadelphia Board of Revision of Taxes is 139, exclusive of extra clerical help. In Detroit the total number engaged on both personal and real property assessments is 47.

In Philadelphia there has not been the slightest development or improvement in the system of assessing in 20 years; notwithstanding the fact that many years ago a survey of the operations of this department was made and recommendations submitted to the Board of Revision of Taxes not a single suggestion for improvement of the system or reduction of expenditures has been made by the Board.

The sole interest of the members of the Board seems to have been a desire to build up and perpetuate a political pay roll and the collection of a $10,000 annual salary for each of its members. The list of assessors indicates appointments for politicians and their friends and relatives. There can be no point in giving specific instances or further reciting the facts in detail; the record is available and speaks for itself.

CONCLUSIONS

The Board of Revision of Taxes is not in reality a Board of Revision. It is a haven of rest for political proteges.

The taxpayers of Philadelphia are entitled to a scientific method of assessment and appraisal.

The installation of modern methods will result in a reduced pay roll a more equitable distribution of the burden of real estate taxes, an increase in the amount of taxes collected, and, eventually, a decrease in the tax rate and a much more satisfied taxpayer.

The continued waste of public money by city officials in the face of starvation and rising relief rolls will not be tolerated long by an awakened and aroused electorate. The conclusion that the Board of Revision of Taxes as presently constituted is a wasteful, neglectful, purely political department is putting it mildly. The financial condition of the City of Philadelphia demands that a new system be set up at once.

As a result of these conclusions in connection with the the Board of Viewers and Board of Revision of Taxes your Committee respectfully

RECOMMENDS

(a) Board of Viewers

(b) Board of Revision of Taxes

1. In Philadelphia the Board of Revision of Taxes should consist of seven men, made up as follows: Two construction engineers or builders, two real estate men, one with buying and selling experience and the other with appraisal experience, two lawyers and one businessman, all with at least ten years' experience in their respective lines. They should be appointed for a term of six years. They should elect annually a chairman, who should receive a salary of $12,500 per year; and the other members should receive $10,000 each per year. They should be assisted in their work by a chief assessor, whose salary should not exceed $7,500, and they should appoint not more than 25 assistant assessors, whose salaries should range from $2,750 to $5,000.

None of these men should engage in any other work, either private or public.

The Chief Assessor should have at least ten years' experience in the real estate business—not only in buying and selling but also in appraising. The deputy assessors should have such qualifications as may be set up by the Board, those qualifications should include real estate experience, draftsmanship, engineering and construction experience of at least five years.

This Board should set up and establish competitive examinations for those applying for positions under it, and the persons appointed should be chosen from the list of those who attain the highest averages in the examinations.

The law of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania should be so amended that in choosing the Jury of Viewers the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas shall choose the jury from among the members of the Board of Revision of Taxes, and the present Board of Viewers discontinued and abolished.

The Board should be required to adopt scientific and modern methods, both in the appraising and assessing of properties and in the keeping of complete records of ground and buildings in Philadelphia. The ground and buildings should be valued separately and records of these separate valuations kept; the methods of arriving at these valuations should be set out and contained in proper records.

The books and records of the Board of Revision of Taxes should be open to all taxpayers for inspection at all times.

The taxpayers should be made familiar with the methods of taxation to the fullest extent possible; and modern machinery and equipment, wherever possible, should be used.

Reassessments should be made triennially, but in the interim the Board should be given the right, on its own motion or upon request of a taxpayer, to either increase or decrease the assessed value of any property because of change of conditions.

The assessed value should be made evidence in any court where the question of value is in issue.

(c) Receiver of Taxes

The Department of Receiver of Taxes is set up in the Philadelphia Charter under Act of 1919, P. L. 581, as amended by the Act of 1925, P. L. 1189.

Prior to the Philadelphia Charter Act the office was controlled by the provisions of the earlier Acts relating to the City of Philadelphia, to wit, the Act of 1854, P. L. 21, and the Act of 1885, P. L. 39.

Section 1 of the Charter Act of 1919 provides:

> "There shall be a department of Receiver of Taxes, of which the Receiver of Taxes shall be the head. He shall be elected and give bond as now provided by law, and shall hold office for a term of four years and until his successor is elected."

Section 7 of the Act of 1919 provides:

> "No officer or employe of such city shall collect any fees or perquisites for his own use, but all fees and perquisites collected under the law shall be put into the city treasury, and Council shall provide by ordinance for the proper salaries or other compensation to be fixed by Council to all officers and employes of the city, except for such of them whose salaries are fixed by law or who it is provided by law shall serve without compensation."

By the ordinance of 1919, page 541, the Council of the City of Philadelphia fixed the salary of the Receiver of Taxes at $10,000 per annum.

The Act of June 8, 1907, P. L. 520, provides as follows:

> "Section 1. Branch offices. The municipal authorities in cities of the first class are hereby authorized to provide for the establishment and maintenance of so many local branch offices as may be deemed necessary or convenient for the payment and receipt of taxes upon real estate within such boundaries with respect to each of such branch offices as may be prescribed, and for the payment and receipt of State tax payable by persons residing within said boundaries, together with such other moneys now payable to the Receiver of Taxes in such cities as may be provided for by ordinance."

Section 3 provides that Council shall regulate the business of such local branch offices and determine the duties.

By ordinance of 1926, page 812, the duties incidental to the question of water rents were transferred to the Receiver of Taxes.

Your Committee examined into the functions and costs of the Department of Receiver of Taxes on the 25th day of February, 1937.

Since the year 1930 the annual appropriations to the department of Receiver of Taxes have always been in the neighborhood of $700,000.

In 1930 there were 367 employes on its pay roll: in 1937 the Receiver of Taxes asked for $762,410, and there were listed 356 employes as of January 1, 1937. There was appropriated by Council to this department for that year $639,815.

Prior to 1930 all of the tax bills and water rent bills were made up by hand.

In 1930 there was appropriated to the Receiver of Taxes $15,000 for the purpose of purchasing or leasing billing machinery so that these bills, numbering 474,000 tax bills and some 400,000 water rent bills, could be made up mechanically.

In that year and succeeding years there have been awarded to the Receiver of Taxes additional funds to pay the salaries of help temporarily engaged to make out these bills on the machinery purchased and leased.

Notwithstanding the installation of this mechanical equipment there has been no decrease in the number of permanent employes.

The reduction in the amount appropriated to the Receiver of Taxes by Council for the year 1937 has made it necessary for him to reduce the number of his employes, but even with this reduced pay roll this office will cost the City of Philadelphia (for the year of 1937), unless steps are taken to prevent it, the sum of $639,815.

The period during which your Committee was examining into the functions of this department coincided with the active period of tax collections in the City of Philadelphia. It was therefore undesirable to interfere with those functions by calling the employes of the department before the Committee for examination. This has, therefore, been reserved by your Committee for a future date.

Your Committee finds that moneys expended by the County of Philadelphia for the receiving of taxes is out of all proportion with the amounts expended by other cities of similar size for boards performing similar functions.

In the year 1936 the Receiver of Taxes in Philadelphia received approximately $56,0000,0000 in taxes. Of that amount $25,000,000 was collected in the month of February, $6,800,000 in June, $4,500,000 in July, $2,100,000 in October, and $3,000,000 in December.

This breakdown discloses that more than 75 per cent of the total annual taxes are received during five specific months of the year.

A further analysis shows that 20 per cent of the taxes were received on a single day during one of these five months, i. e., the last day of February, on which day over $12,000,000 was received.

An analysis of the daily receipts of the office of the Receiver of Taxes shows that actually the major portion of the (forty-one million dollars) taxes in Philadelphia is collected on nine single days.

Your Committee finds, therefore, that the office of Receiver of Taxes is exceedingly active for approximately 12 to 15 days of the year, during which 12 or 15 days it receives the bulk of the taxes; that during the remainder of the year the office is comparatively inactive.

In the month of January, 1936, the total receipts for 31 days was $1,487,550, while on the 29th of February of that year the receipts were $12,311,037.58; yet during the months of January and February the same number of cashiers were employed; and the personnel was the same during both months. In the month of April, when the total receipts amounted to $1,315,000, the same personnel was employed as in June when $6,800,000 was received. In December, when $3,087,000 was received, the personnel was the same as during the other months.

In other words, the taxpayers of Philadelphia pay for the operation of this department the same in the month of January, which is the most inactive month of the year, as is paid in the month of February, which is the most active month.

Over 80 per cent of the $56,000,000 taxes received during the year 1936, or approximately $42,000,000 of taxes, was received by the Receiver of Taxes through the mail.

The maintenance of branch offices for the receipt of taxes is operated on the same collecting method as that of the main office.

Eight branch offices existing in Philadelphia cost in the neighborhood of $105,000 a year to maintain. Each one is equipped with a district receiver, a cashier, three clerks and a janitor. The pay roll for each branch office amounts to $11,500, or a total of $92,000, and in each office the entire personnel is maintained throughout the year despite the fact that its collections have the same peak periods as the main office.

In addition to the annual expenditure for these eight branch offices of $92,000 in salaries alone, the annual appropriation for rent is $7,500 and the appropriation for telephone service and miscellaneous items for the eight branch offices amounts to $5,120.

In addition to the branch offices the Receiver of Taxes in Philadelphia County maintains a chief delinquent tax collector and 37 assistant delinquent tax collectors,—assigned to 36 districts. The chief receives $2,700, the supervising delinquent tax collector $2,200, and each of the 36 delinquent tax collectors $1,800. There is appropriated an annual sum of $7,400 for telephone and rent expense for these delinquent tax collectors.

The Committee finds that with the addition of not more than 20 men in the Treasurer's office and not more than 12 men in the Controller's office, whose total average annual compensation will not exceed $65,000 to $75,000, the tax and water rent receiving functions of the Receiver of Taxes can be transferred to the Treasurer's Department.

Your Committee finds that the installation of modern mechanical cash receiving and recording systems will not only reduce the number of additional employes required but will assure proper and fraud-proof record keeping, and will make possible the establishment of a system that will furnish to the administration ready information as to the status of its delinquent tax account and its current receipts.

Your Committee finds that in other cities the amount due for previous years, on every property, is readily available; that the total delinquencies can be tabulated with facility and speed: that records are kept by modern and scientific methods; that the installation of mechanical equipment has reduced the cost of record keeping, improved the system, insured the accuracy of the records and minimized dishonesty among the employes.

Your Committee feels that the installation of check-writing machinery and billing and addressing equipment will enable the Treasurer to accomplish in Philadelphia a considerable saving to the taxpayers.

There are 59 paymasters in Philadelphia, distributing pay for employes of City and County, and your Committee is informed that an additional 50 persons assist these paymasters.

With mechanical equipment in the Controller's Department to prepare the pay roll sheet for employes' signatures in each department, the Treasurer could, on check-writing machines and mechanically prepared checks, pay every employe on the City pay roll. All of this could be accomplished by an insignificant expenditure compared with the annual savings, and this also would insure accuracy and efficiency; and would result in the elimination of at least 100 unnecessary positions.

The taxpayers of Philadelphia operate the tax-receiving department on a political and not a business basis.

The department makes no provision for peak periods other than to set up a personnel necessary for peak periods, and to keep that personnel on the pay roll throughout the year.

The number of employes is dependent upon the whim of the ward leaders rather than on the business necessities of the department.

The City of Philadelphia operates a Water Department, and until 1927 the reading of meters and the collection of water rents were functions of that department.

In 1927, by ordinance of Council, those two functions of the Water Department were transferred to the Receiver of Taxes.

Until that time 74 water meter inspectors were employed. These 74 men were taken over by the Receiver of Taxes, and, like the proverbial bad penny, they turn up annually in the budget.

If there has been any diminution in that personnel since 1927, it has been only by death or resignation; but neither event has caused a reduction in the pay roll, since we still have 74 water-meter readers in the department.

By personal visit to other cities a subcommittee of your Committee has been able to make comparisons, and your Committee finds, first, that in most modern cities, particularly in Detroit and Cleveland, the taxes are received by the City Treasurer; that water-meters are read by the Water Department.

In the city of Detroit there has been established a most efficient and Modern Water Department. Its business is administered with the same efficiency as that of large private corporations. Its employes read and inspect, four times a year, 275,000 meters,– as compared with 205,000 in Philadelphia. For that purpose it employs 33 inspectors, who make these inspections four times a year,—as compared to 74 inspectors in Philadelphia who make readings only twice a year.

Your Committee has been informed, but has had no definite evidence of the fact, that although the 74 persons have been designated on the budget annually as water-meter inspectors, some of them are in reality clerks, and the rest of them are water-meter readers. If this be taken as a fact, the figures are approximately as follows: 55 water-meter readers and 19 clerks. It follows, therefore, that even on this basis Philadelphia employs almost twice as many men to make one-half the number of annual inspections and on fewer meters.

In addition to this Detroit employs six men who follow up and check, and who are also used for the purpose of delivering the water-rent bills directly to the premises. In Philadelphia the water bills are mailed.

In Detroit the City Treasurer receives, in addition to the normal city income from taxes (which amount to approximately $55,000,000) all of the moneys received from the operation of the city-owned and operated transit facilities, the city-owned water department, and the city-operated electric light and power company.

The City Treasurer in Detroit also maintains and operates a delinquent tax collecting bureau in his office where payments are made on the installment plan over a period of seven years.

The City Treasurer prepares and makes up checks for every employe of the City of Detroit, including per diem employes. He is the disbursing officer for every dollar which comes into the treasury; and every dollar that is received by the city in every form of income, whether by taxes or otherwise, is paid directly into this office. For all of these functions this city's average expenditure for the Treasurer's department is approximately $450,000.

In Philadelphia, as has been shown, the cost of the single function of collecting city taxes and water rents has averaged in excess of $650,000 a year, plus the Treasurer's cost of approximately $100,000 a year; so that, the receiving of water rents and taxes, and operating the Treasurer's office, will cost in excess of $750,000 for 1937.

For these reasons your Committee makes the following

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. That the office of Receiver of Taxes be abolished.

2. That the functions of the Receiver of Taxes, so far as they relate to the receipt of taxes and water rents, be transferred to the City Treasurer.

3. That the functions of reading and inspecting water meters be transferred to the Water Department.

4. That in both the office of City Treasurer and the office of City Controller there be installed such mechanical equipment as is necessary to enable the Treasurer to become the single paymaster for city employes.

5. That there be installed in the City Treasurer's office such other modern mechanical equipment as will promote efficiency and economy in the department in connection with the receipt of taxes and water rents, and his other normal duties.

SUMMARY

The passage of appropriate legislation to carry into effect the above recommendations will result in the following advantages:

1. The valuation of real property for both taxation and condemnation purposes will be centralized in one board of experienced appraisers.

2. The method of assessment will be established on a sound, economic, modern and scientific basis, resulting in equal and fair distribution of the tax burden.

3. The function of receiving taxes and water rents will be transferred to the departments where in most modern cities it seems to function best and most economically.

4. The citizens of Philadelphia will save approximately $1,000,000 annually, based on the following comparison:

Present annual expenditures:

Board of Viewers	$ 83.600
Board of Revision	575.930
Receiver of Taxes	639.815
Treasurer	100.000		$1.399.345
Estimated future cost:
Board of Viewers	None
Board of Revision,
7 members	72.500
Chief Assessor	7.500
2 pers. prop.	10.000
25 assessors	100.000
	190.000
Clerical hire, etc. maximum	60.000	$250.000
Receiver of Taxes	None
City Treasurer
Present expense	100.000
Additional help	60.000	160.000	410.000
Estimated Annual Saving			$ 989.345

To these annual savings must be added those savings which will accrue as the result of transferring the function of paymaster to the City Treasurer, and the resultant elimination of at least 59 paymasters— and the cost of their bonds, and such assistants as they now have in this work.

Your Committee will continue its investigation of the various departments, and will make every effort to complete its work and make its final report and recommendations to your honorable body before the adjournment of the present session.

We, the undersigned members of the Committee, hereby approve of the above findings, conclusions and recommendations of the Committee.

SECOND PRELIMINARY REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE COST OF GOVERNMENT IN THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PHILADELPHIA

Monday, March 29, 1937, Harrisburg, Pa.

To The Honorable, The President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

The undersigned committee submits this, the second preliminary report, as a result of its investigation into the cost of government in the City and County of Philadelphia. In its first preliminary report the committee pointed out that it was in the midst of a series of hearings on the functions and expenditures of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia. Hearings were held, on this department, on March 4, 1937, March 5, 1937, March 11, 1937, March 12, 1937, and March 18, 1937, so that five hearings were held in the investigation of this department.

The facts so far developed sufficiently disclose the condition existing in this Court as to enable the committee to make its report thereon. In order to understand the applications and conclusions from the facts thus developed the committee submits a brief history of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia in the following:

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Municipal Court was created by Act of the General Assembly of July 11, 1913, P. L. 711, section one of which reads as follows:

> "That in the County of Philadelphia there shall be, and hereby is, created a court of record to be known as the Municipal Court of Philadelphia. It shall consist of a President Judge and one associate Judge for each 200,000 of population or fractional part thereof in excess of 100,000 in such County; such population to be determined from time to time by the latest census of the United States."

Under Section 2 of that Act it was provided that the first Judges of said Court should be elected at the General Election held in November, 1913; and at that time, according to the census, the number of Judges elected was nine.

By Section 2 of the above Act the Governor was given the power, and duty, to appoint from amongst the Judges a President Judge, and to fill vacancies in that office from time to time as they occurred.

By the Act of 1923, P. L. 850, the Judges of the Municipal Court were directed to elect the President Judge from among their number on the first Monday of January, 1924, and every five years thereafter.

Section 4 of the Act of 1913 provided:

> "The President Judge of the Court may appoint such tipstaves and officers or employes as are reasonably necessary, the number of same and their compensation to be determined from time to time by a majority of the judges of the said court, to perform the duties usually pertinent to such officers in and about the court rooms and elsewhere."

For purely political reasons, and to suit a political situation then existing, the right of the President Judge to make appointments was repealed by the Act of 1923, P. L. 850, which provided:

"The Board of Judges of the Municipal Court may appoint such tipstaves and officers or employes as are reasonably necessary, the number of same and their compensation to be determined from time to time by a majority of the Judges of the said Court, to perform the duties usually pertinent to such officers in and about the court rooms and elsewhere."

The salary of tipstaves was, according to the Act of 1925, P. L. 500, to be fixed by the appointing Court, provided it should not exceed $3,000.

By the Act of 1923, P. L. 852, it was provided:

"The Board of Judges of the Municipal Court * * * (were given the right) to appoint a chief probation officer whose salary shall not exceed $5,000 a year, and such additional probation officers and employes as it may determine, at salaries not to exceed $2,500 a year. * * *"

Since the Act of 1923 we find that the power to appoint employes of the Municipal Court, as well as the power to fix, increase or decrease the compensation of employes, subject to the limitations in the Acts, is lodged exclusively in the Board of Judges of the Municipal Court.

We find that originally the jurisdiction of the Court, under the Act of 1913 above quoted, was fixed in all civil actions at law, and in equity, not exceeding $600, and actions for damages for personal injuries not exceeding $1,500.

We also find by the Act of 1913 that the salary of the Judges of the Court was fixed at $6,000 per annum, and $6,500 for the President Judge.

Under the Act of 1923, P. L. 201, the jurisdiction of the Municipal Court in civil actions was increased to $2,500. The jurisdiction of criminal cases was also given to the Municipal Court in the original Act, and by subsequent amendments, so that after the passage of the Act of 1917, P. L. 1015, the Municipal Court had acquired jurisdiction in all criminal actions and suits for penalties except in the trial of indictments for arson, burglary, murder, voluntary manslaughter, treason or misprison of treason, or for violation or conspiracy to violate the election or registration laws of this Commonwealth, embezzlement by any public officer, or any evidence involving breach of official duties by any public officer.

The Court was given jurisdiction, by the original Act, in desertion and non-support proceedings; in proceedings concerning dependent and delinquent or neglected children; in proceedings concerning, or trials of, charges brought against any persons, whether adults or minors, accused of disorderly street-walking; in all proceedings concerning, or trials of, charges brought against all minors between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years who shall disobey their parent's command or be found idle in the streets, and against all disorderly children; in all proceedings concerning all children under the age of sixteen years deserting their homes without good and sufficient cause, and keeping company with dissolute or vicious persons against the lawful commands of their fathers, mothers or guardians or other persons standing in the place of a parent; in all proceedings of desertion or neglect by a mother of her children; and in all cases where it is alleged any child is suffering from epilepsy, nervous or other mental defects. And exclusive jurisdiction was given to the Municipal Court over the House of Detention then or thereafter established in the City of Philadelphia for the care of dependent, delinquent and neglected children.

With this increase in the jurisdiction of the Court the Legislature, under the Act of 1919, P. L. 1065, increased the salary of the Judges to $8,000, and that of the President Judge to $8,500.

While the jurisdiction of the Court, as fixed by Statute, has remained practically the same from 1923 to the present date, by the Act of 1929, P. L. 1780, the salary of the Judges of the Municipal Court was increased to $10,000 and that of the President Judge to $10,500

We find that the intent of the framers of this Act, as disclosed by the Legislative Journal for the Senate and House, for the session of 1913, was—The creation of a court for small claims and for speedy disposition of cases involving the poorer class of litigants.

We find that it was in the minds of those sponsoring this law that by the creation of the Municipal Court in Philadelphia County, and the adoption of a constitutional revision then pending, the magistrates' courts in Philadelphia would be abolished, and the Municipal Court would take over their work. (See Legislative Journal, March 11, 1913, pages 702 and 703.)

When the bill came up for discussion in the Senate, on the 26th of March, 1913, it was made clear to the Senators that at the hearings held before the committee having this bill in charge, it was developed that, "between eighty and eighty-five per cent of the cases in Philadelphia are for $600 and under, and that * * * the poorer and middle classes, who have small cases, are just as much entitled to good decisions and good Judges as the larger cases * * *" (See Statements of Senator Edwin H. Vare, Legislative Journal, March 26, 1913, page 1139.)

We find that at the time this bill was discussed in the Senate the estimated cost of the new court when created was $150,000 per year. (See Legislative Journal, proceedings of the Senate, June 16, 1913, page 429c.)

We find that the increase in the jurisdiction of the Court has resulted in thwarting the original purposes of the Court. We find it reaching out for additional jurisdiction and greater powers. The Court is no longer a "Poor Man's Court" for the prompt and efficient disposition of the poor man's litigation.

We find that the original purpose of the Court was either never considered or was lost sight of within two years of the date of its inauguration. The proof of that statement is seen in the following tabulation, for the years 1915 to 1924, inclusive, of the number of employes and the annual expenditures of the Court:

Year	Number of Employes	Annual Budget
1915	167	$2..5.300
1916	255	348.420
1917	255	343,420
1918	345	457,700
1919	497	666.250
1920	556	798,100
1921	569	836,100
1922	607	896.875
1923	607	896,875
1924	607	896,875

In addition to these figures the testimony shows that year in and year out additional sums were acquired and expended by the Court through mandamuses on the City Treasury, under authority of existing law, and for payment of salaries to the offices of the Sheriff, the District Attorney and the County Commissioners for services rendered in connection with the business of the Municipal Court, for the handling of prisoners, for the serving of writs and for the administration of the House of Detention.

We find that under the provisions of the Municipal Court Acts the Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas is the Prothonotary of the Municipal Court, and that clerks in the Department of the Prothonotary performed services for the Municipal Court; that the Clerk of the Quarter Sessions Court receives money from the tax levying bodies for employes who are assigned to perform clerical and auditing functions for the Municipal Court; and that these sums run annually in excess of $250,000.

We find that by 1930 the Municipal Court, instead of being a one hundred fifty thousand dollar Court, had already become a million dollar Court.

We find the budgets, and the lists of employes from 1930 to 1936, inclusive, to be as follows:

Year	Number of Employes	Annual Budget
1930	569	$1.100.000
1931	574	1,050,000
1932	563	950.000
1933	563	1,114,150
1934	563	1.114,150
1935	563	1.114.150
1936	562	1,050,000

We find that in 1933, while the budget request was for $1,114,150, in view of the financial stringency, the Treasurer appropriated to the Municipal Court only $649,999.98; but that instead of reducing the number of employes the Board of Judges of the Municipal Court compelled each employe to "voluntarily" give up one-third of his salary during that year.

We find that in 1934, 1935 and 1936 salaries of the personnel returned to the original figures.

We find that while the budget shows appropriation of the amounts above listed, this does not disclose the true picture, but that in addition other expenditures in these years—the same as in previous years— on behalf of the Municipal Court amounting to more than $250,000, annually appear in the budget allowances to the departments we have named—the Sheriff, Clerk of Quarter Sessions, Prothonotary, and so forth.

We find that in 1937 the budget request for the Municipal Court covered five hundred and sixty-two employes, and the amount requested was $1,050,000. We find further, however, that Council arbitrarily reduced the budget allowance, in order to meet the financial situation in which the City found itself, to $850,000. But ever to this sum must be added an additional amount approximating $250,000 for the extra expenditures on behalf of the Municipal Court by the above-mentioned departments.

We find that while the annual budget of the Municipal Court, as approved by Council, provided for the payment of the salaries of ten court stenographers, subterfuge was used to employ an eleventh stenographer, who has been paid entirely by the use of the mandamus evil, even to the extent of salary items. And in addition thereto, mandamuses were used to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars, since the inception of the court, for the payment of stenographers' fees and the purchase of stenographers' supplies.

The Municipal Court is still a million dollar Court.

We find that in addition to the expenditures already recited, as made by the County annually on behalf of the Municipal Court, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has been expending $10,000 a year for the salary of each judge, or $110,000 each year for the payment of judges' salaries during the last six years.

We find that the most important function of the Municipal Court, aside from the original intention to create a "Poor Man's Court" for the speedy and efficient disposition of litigation, was the function specifically given to the Court involving juvenile and moral delinquencies.

But we find that within two years of the creation of the Court those in charge of it began to use it chiefly as an arm of the political organization then in power.

We find that because of the fact that this Court had thus become an arm of the political organization in power, and because the President Judge then in office represented only one faction of that party, the Act of 1923 was passed, P. L. 850, stripping the power of appointment of the personnel from the President Judge and placing it in the hands of the Board of Judges, the majority of whom had been elected by another faction of the political party then in power.

We find that the growth of the Court in personnel, from 167 employes in 1915 to 607 in 1924, and 560 in 1936, was not due to the necessities of the Court's work but was brought about mainly because of political exigencies; and that the increase in the expenditures of this Court, from $235,000 in 1915 to well over a million dollars annually in the last fifteen years, was due to a desire to pay political debts through judicial appointments.

We find that in the Municipal Court appointments were made on a political basis, and not upon personal qualifications or fitness; and that in the few instances where appointees were possessed of adequate qualifications and fitness for the positions to which they were appointed it was by accident and not by design.

We find that persons qualified for the positions, by training and experience, are paid meagre salaries—not in any way commensurate with the value of their services —while political appointees, with no ability, training or education, are paid excessively high salaries; and that most of these political appointees were active committeemen in the interest of the party in power .(See pages 5 to 203, page 209, and pages 222 to 253 of the notes of testimony taken at the 15th hearing, held Friday, March 5, 1937.)

We find that in this Court, just as has been shown by our first preliminary report, many of the appointees were paraded from one political office to another and then into the Municipal Court, and that their only qualification for the important work of probation officer was their political influence. (See pages 5 and 6, 8 and 9, et seq., notes of testimony of the 15th and 16th hearings, held March 5th and March 11, 1937.)

We find that political appointees without any qualification for the position were appointed as probation officers of the Municipal Court and at the same time were engaged in other businesses or occupations, and were receiving compensation therefor; and in one particular case an employe of the Municipal Court, still employed and receiving pay as an employe of the Court, was receiving, and had received for five years, compensation as an employe of the Federal Government, and in addition thereto conducted, and still conducts, a private business. (See notes of testimony, page 45, et seq., 14th hearing, March 2, 1937.)

We find that all of the appointments—at least for the years 1935 and 1936—of personnel to the Municipal Court were made not by the Board of Judges but by the President Judge himself on his own authority. We find that there was no meeting of the Board of Judges during the years 1935 and 1936, and that during that period of time appointments were made, employes discharged and salaries increased by the action of the President Judge alone, without consultation with or confirmation by the Board of Judges. We find that it was not until the City Controller had refused to sign warrants for the pay of many of these employes who had been thus appointed that there was any meeting of the Board of Judges on the appointments, that meeting occurring December 4, 1936, at which time the President Judge of the Court presented a list of appointments made during 1935 and 1936, and salary increases granted during the same years; and the Board of Judges then and there confirmed the appointments and actions of the President Judge in every respect.

We find that the President Judge had by his own act fixed salaries for some of the persons thus illegally appointed in excess of the statutory limit, and then that notwithstanding that fact the Board of Judges confirmed his action.

We find that as a result of the action of the present Controller many of the employes thus illegally appointed, and paid illegal salaries since 1935, have been forced to repay the excess amount and are still repaying it in installments.

We find that several of the judges of the Municipal Court are men of integrity and ability; but we also find that their ability did not aid them in what little effort they made to prevent the abuses we have recited. We find that as individuals they may be, and probably are, strong willed and high minded, but as members of the group known as the Board of Judges of the Municipal Court they were powerless.

We find that although in isolated instances individual judges made protests, as far back as 1930, against the illegal actions of the President Judge, and again in 1936, yet the majority of the Board of Judges confirmed the action of the President Judge and made the confirmation retroactive. (See pages 93, 94, et seq., 16th hearing, held Thursday, March 11, 1937).

We find that nepotism has been practiced by most, if not all, of the Judges of the Court. We find that the chief probation officer, at a salary of $5,000 a year, is a brother of the President Judge, and that he has held that position for over twenty years. We find that because of the unfortunate physical infirmity of blindness, of this brother, it was apparently necessary to appoint another relative of the President Judge in that Court, and, accordingly, a sister of the President Judge is an Assistant Supervisor, at $3,000 a year; that another sister occupies an additional position; and, incidentally, a daughter of the President Judge has a position in the office of the District Attorney.

We find that another Judge has two of his sons on the pay roll of the Municipal Court; that still a third Judge has a brother on the pay roll. We find, as previously stated, that it is evident from the record that this condition is true in the case of many of the judges on the bench of this Court. The record shows the facts.

We find that the President Judge of the Court was not only politically active during his term of office but that he used the power of his position as President Judge to bolster his political fortunes and the fortunes of the political party he represents, by appointments to the Municipal Court of persons whose only qualification was their political allegiance to the President Judge and his party.

We find that the district in which the President Judge resides, and of which he is the actual political leader, has the largest pay roll of any political sub-division in the City of Philadelphia, as well as the largest number of employes in this Court.

We find that on December 31, 1936, there were approximately 70 persons, receiving an annual salary of $111,800, on the pay roll of the Municipal Court, all residing in the 15th Ward, of which the President Judge is the actual leader. We find that few, if any, of these appointments could bear scrutiny on the basis of real merit and fitness for the positions to which they had been appointed.

We find that places had been created in all departments of the Court for the purpose of carrying our political debts, or meeting other political exigencies.

We find that in those cases where the employes were qualified for the positions to which they were appointed their sponsors were non-political; and that less than fifteen per cent of the total personnel were without political sponsorship. We find that at less than fifteen per cent are really fitted, by training or experience, for the positions they hold.

We find that hiring and firing was the function of the President Judge alone; and that he usurped that power for political purposes.

We find that the heads of departments who were qualified for their positions were rarely consulted about appointments or dismissals of employes under them. We find, from the testimony of the heads of departments, that this interfered with the proper and efficient functioning of their departments, and actually retarded the accomplishment of the purposes for which the departments had been formed.

We find that while the pay roll was padded with political appointees, those departments that had charge of the guidance of wayward and delinquent children, and the supervision of their activities, were in many cases undermanned and without sufficient experienced personnel, and in many other cases overcrowded with inefficient political proteges.

We find that no method of ascertaining whether or not the employes actually performed the services for which they were engaged was ever installed or maintained in the Municipal Court.

We find that employes were paid though absent for months at a time—through illness or for other reasons.

We find that for years the budgetary requests presented to Council remained identical as to title of employes, their compensation, and their assignment to departments, when, in truth and in fact, the allocation of the personnel bore no relation to the description in that budgetary request; persons listed as probation officers were, in many instances, working as janitors, clerks and doortenders. Political proteges in their early 20's, receive from two thousand to three thousand dollars each, while social workers with years of training and experience receive salaries ranging from twelve hundred to eighteen hundred dollars.

We find the pay roll cluttered with friends and relatives of politicians occupying positions of influence in the City. We find that for years all of the Judges of the Municipal Court knew of the illegal activities of the President Judge.

We find that in the department known as the Domestic Relations Division the Court receives sums aggregating $100,000 per month; that these moneys are received for the Court through employes of the office of the Clerk of Court of Quarter Sessions stationed at the Municipal Court; that for more than fifteen years no audit of the accounts was made, and that no officer and no member of the Board of Judges of the Municipal Court ever asked for such an audit.

We find that when finally, within the year, an effort was made to make such audit it was ascertained that it was impossible to balance the books.

We find that while the departments of the Court which are engaged principally in social and welfare work are headed by physicians of standing the work of the department is handicapped by the lack of trained assistants and retarded by the presence of inefficient political satellites.

We find that the establishment of the medical division of the Municipal Court was a step in the right and most important, direction. We find the possibilities and the advantages of the department have not been attained because many appointments to this most important department are made upon a political and not upon a practical basis.

We find that the buildings housing misdemeanants and juvenile delinquents are neither adequate nor proper places for such offenders, and that the surroundings are anything but conducive to rehabilitation and the future welfare of such persons.

All of these findings compel the following

CONCLUSIONS

1. The Municipal Court was formed for the purpose of aiding prompt and inexpensive dispositions of the poor man's claims.

2. It was also established for the purpose of establishing in the City of Philadelphia an intelligent, efficient and enlightened administration of domestic and juvenile problems.

3. The Municipal Court possessed, in the beginning, the opportunity and the means for carrying out its original purposes.

4. The desire on the part of the judges in charge of the administration of these important functions to step out of their character and become more than they were intended to be, is one of the causes to which can be attributed the failure of this great movement.

5. It is evident that from the start the Judges of the Municipal Court cast avaricious and jealous eyes upon their fellow Judges in the Court of Common Pleas; and the objective seems to have been to increase both the jurisdiction and the salary of the Judges to the point where the Municipal Court would be upon a par, in standing and activities, with the Court of Common Pleas; and in an effort to reach this "zenith of attainment" the original purposes of the Court were lost sight of.

7. This attitude led to the inevitable: in order to attain the desired objective, resistance to political influence meant the failure to attain increased jurisdiction and increased salary. With each encroachment upon the territory of the Common Pleas Court the usefulness of the Municipal Court decreased, and the independence of the Municipal Court diminished. To barter political appointments to the Court for Acts of the Legislature became a regular procedure; and, having been begun, there was no stopping place. As a result, the Municipal Court has become a hot-bed of politics and a "sweet haven for politicians and political indigents," and nepotism has run rampant.

8. In the rise of this one hundred fifty thousand dollars experiment to a million dollar octopus the citizens of Philadelphia have seen the best example of what politics and politicians can do to a Court.

9. Your Committe concludes that the condition is intolerable; that it must be ended promptly.

10. Your Commitee concludes that while one of the Judges instigated the system, it could have been perpetuated only with the aid of the Board of Judges.

11. Your Committee concludes that the actions of the President Judge were in violation of the Acts of Assembly.

12. Your Committee concludes that the President Judge openly flaunted the provisions of the law, and that all appointments made by him without the approval of the Board of Judges were illegal.

13. Your Committee concludes that when the Board of Judges, on December 4, 1936, acted upon and approved actions the President Judge had already taken, they approved illegal expenditures, and did it knowingly.

14. Your Committee concludes that this final approval of the Board of Judges, given to illegal actions of their President, does not change either the legal or moral aspect of the situation.

15. Your Committee concludes that the Board of Judges knew that the acts of the President Judge were illegal.

16. Your Committee concludes that the Board of Judges had neither a moral nor a legal right to confirm these illegal appointments.

17. Your Committee concludes that the responsibility for the continuance of the condition lies with the whole Board, especially in view of the fact that meetings of the Board were not held regularly, as required by law.

18. Your Committee concludes that the number and compensation of employes in the Municipal Court is excessive, unnecessary and wasteful.

19. Your Committee concludes that the condition can not be remedied except by striking at the root.

20. Your Committee concludes that the social and welfare work, including the care and rehabilitation of juveniles and juvenile delinquents, is an important function in the community, and must be preserved; and that this important work can be preserved only by beginning all over again, so far as the administration of these functions are concerned.

21. Your Committee concludes that these functions can be preserved best by the establishment of a new Court for the administration of these necessary and important activities; and that it is essential that such a Court, in which shall be vested exclusive control of all family relationships and social welfare, must be free from political pressure and activities.

22. Your Committee concludes that the success of any system dealing with the lives and welfare of any group of our citizens depends upon the human element; and when the administration of such a system has been placed in the hands of the judiciary, from whom the people have a right to expect competent and honest performance of their duty, and that expectation has not been realized, that Court has lost the right to administer that or any other system of social welfare. Especially is this true where the failure to administer is due not only to acts of omission but also to deliberate acts of commission amounting to violation of the law of the Commonwealth, —and this by a body charged with the enforcement of those laws. Again we say, the hope for success of the system depends upon the human element.

23. The delivery of this Court and its important functions to the use and for the benefit of political organizations and politically minded individuals is an indictment against the judicial system, and unless the Legislature, charged with the duty of creating judicial administrative bodies, acts and acts promptly, the confidence of the people in law and order enforcement will be lost.

24. No fair, open-minded citizen can read the record in this case, and follow the history of this Court as disclosed by that record, and be willing to trust this same Court with the further administration of its important duties.

25. For twenty long years this Court has been nothing more than an arm of the political organization in power in Philadelphia. It was commonly assumed, even by the employes and the committeemen, that the Municipal Court was the pay-off for political activity. Witness after witness brazenly admitted that he procured his job in the Municipal Court because of his ability to deliver politically, and that it was secured through the sponsorship of his political leader. It may be stated that this is to be expected in politics; but it must not be conceded as an admitted fact when applied to a Court intended to administer justice.

26. Every good citizen knows that the bulwark of a democracy is the enforcement of law and order. Every student of the constitution will admit that the success or failure of our democratic form of government depends upon the enforcement of law and order. And every student of government knows that the enforcement of law and order depends upon the respect of the community for its courts; that the loss of respect for the Court carries with it the destruction of the foundation of a popular government.

It is because we believe, with due respect to the ability and integrity of some of the Judges of the Municipal Court, that as a group they have forfeited the right to administer the Court and its functions; and we further believe that with the appointments to No. 6 Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia as our assurance that the judges of the new courts will be men of integrity and ability, we can look forward to a re-establishment of confidence in the courts; and all of the people of the Commonwealth will have a just right to be proud of the new courts, that we make the following

1. That there should be established, as speedily as possible, in Philadelphia County, a Court of record, which shall have jurisdiction over all family problems,—which shall include desertion, non-support, divorce, juvenile and moral delinquency and related questions now within the jurisdiction of the Municipal Court.

2. That there should be transferred to this Court all of the jurisdiction now exercised by the Municipal Court, including its welfare, medical and social functions, and all other functions except the civil jurisdiction.

3. That there should be established a Small Claims Court, with jurisdiction in civil actions involving amounts up to $500, that it shall be a Court of record, and that it shall hear cases without jury trials and under such provisions as will enable it inexpensively and speedily to dispose of the cases brought before it.

4. That the Judges of both Courts shall be prohibited by law from engaging in any political activity; and that the employes of both courts shall be appointed under the merit system, which shall become effective immediately upon the organization of the courts; and that all of the employes of these courts shall likewise be prohibited from engaging in any form of political activity, and the establishment of the merit system will insure to those present employes of the Municipal Court qualified by experience and training an opportunity for reemployment with the new courts. Of course, there can be no hope for those employes of the Municipal Court whose only claim to the positions they hold is political sponsorship or family relationship.

5. That the jurisdiction exercised by the Municipal Court, other than that transferred to these two courts, shall, wherever necessary, by proper legislation, be transferred to the Court of Common Pleas; and that part of the jurisdiction of the Court of Common Pleas to be vested in either or both of these courts to be created shall be transferred by proper legislation to either or both of them.

6. That the Municipal Court be abolished.

SUMMARY

In summary, we submit to the Members of the General Assembly, irrespective of party affiliation, that a reading of the testimony, which will be submitted to the Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the House for reference purposes, is convincing that conditions such as exist in Philadelphia should not be tolerated and must be terminated.

We, the undersigned members of the Committee, here-

MUNICIPAL COURT MINORITY REPORT

To the Honorable Harry E. Shapiro, Chairman, Joint Committee.

The undersigned member disagrees with your majority report in re Municipal Court. This Court is right in structure and efficient in function. It has become cursed with political patronage.

I propose to remove this curse by introducing the merit system of personnel (See Senate Bill No. 538); also by setting up of a Small Claims Division in the Municipal Court (See Senate Bill 757).

When I practiced surgery I never cut off my patient's leg to cure a sprained ankle.

Respectfully submitted.
